There was a monster movie on the late late TV show last week. One of a recent crop of Japanese productions, it featured two indestructable monsters, both breathing fire, which went on the rampage through several Japanese cities. Eventually, the two monsters met and fought, one was killed, and the other was so weakened that human weapons could kill it. Humanity was saved.

There was little plot to the show, but there was some interesting, if unconvincing, trick photography. The film was originally made, one could assume, for southeast Asian audiences willing to believe in dragons for the sake of entertainment, and not too critical of technical inferiority. With slight modifications, and an English sound track, the same film was good enough for at least one U.S. station. But it was not good enough for one Belleville teenager.

The teenager wondered audibly, through the show, whether it should be classed as science fiction, or as fantasy. Apparently without realizing that science fiction is all, if one is to be technical, fantasy, he decided the film must be science fiction and distinct from fantasy.

The decision in favor of science fiction was based on an explanation, in the film, of how the monsters might have been left over from prehistoric times. The teenager, ignored the obvious fact that no prehistoric reptiles would be likely to breathe fire, and the less obvious fact that known prehistoric reptile could have been killed by light infantry weapons. The "science" involved was worthy of the brothers Grimm, or Hans Christian Anderson.

But the teenager accepted the film's explanation, and it ruined the show for him. In all seriousness, he conceded that it would have been an excellent show, as fantasy. But as a science fiction film, he thought it was no good.

And he could not accept the possibility that the film was neither. That it was a good old fashioned southeast Asian dragon story. That the people who made the film, and most of the people who watch it, do not know and don't care about such artificial distinctions.

It was disconcerting to note that the teenager could have his mind so tight and compartmented there was, apparently, no room even for a "miscellaneous" classification. And he was so tied up in text-book analysis he could not enjoy the picture, because it would not fit into his preformed mental understanding.

All Americans have lost or are losing the ability to enjoy a story without the need to relate it to truth, or possibility.

Warned beforehand that a story is fantasy, and that it is not related to the real world, the North Americans can enjoy it. But unwarned, many of the younger generation allow their minds to become bogged in the haggling details. A primitive assumes, when he hears any story, that the resemblance to real life is purely coincidental.

After the Talks

The discussions between foreign ministers of the Big Three at the United Nations concluded —and apparently, with only barely perceptible progress toward a detente.

After one session apparently felt that the best to be said for the talks was that they were held at all, and in such friendly atmosphere.

After their final meeting yesterday night the three—Lord Home of Britain, Dean Rusk of the U.S. and Andrei Gromyko of the Soviet Union—announced they had reached agreement in principle to bar nuclear weapons from outer space.

This caused little surprise but some puzzlement in the UN corridors because both President Kennedy and Gromyko had declared from the General Assembly rostrum that they wanted an agreement on the issue.

To some it seemed that the agreement in principle already had been made and the only thing left to decide was how to implement it.

Some of the glamor was stripped from the potential agreement when JJ.S. sources observed that ban wouldn't have much military significance anyway because the business of dropping nuclear bombs from a spacecraft still is something of an uncertain and risky business.

They gave the impression there wasn't much that could be done from a spacecraft that couldn't be done just as efficiently from a Polaris sub.

Nevertheless, even a minor and unpoliced agreement will be welcomed at the UN as a sign that Washington and Moscow are still moving in similar paths following the partial test-ban agreement.

Nothing seems so tragic to one who is old as the death of one who is young, and this alone proves that life is a good thing. — Zoe Akins.

Pearson and Robarts Smoke Proverbial Peace Pipe

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — With keenest anticipation, Liberals and Conservatives alike are waiting for the first eyeball-to-eyeball confrontation of these two old political smoothies, the Ontario merchant-Prime Minister Pearson and Ontario Premier Robarts.

They could put on just such a show of political sweetness and light as the English put on lower noon before.

And if they do, it will completely reverse the field in Federal-Provincial relations.

For years — ever since those dim and distant days when Ontario Liberal Premier Mitchell Hepburn described Liberal Prime Minister Mackenzie King as "an old toad" — Parliament Hill and Queen's Park, if they haven't been at daggers—drawn, have been decidely cool to each other.

And this was true even when the same party was in power in both. Relations with former Prime Minister Diefenbaker favoring his differences with former Ontario Premier Leslie Frost over the fair division of loot.

It was hardly a secret either that that Mr. Frost bitterly resented Premier Roberts did once, thing less than his best in giving to Federal conservatives a rather indifferent hand in last spring's general election.

AFTER YOU, ALPHONSE

But look what has been happening now.

Those two specialists in the soft word that turneth away wrath each other all kinds of co-operation.

Premier Robarts, refusing any further to attempt to do business with Health Minister LaMarsh on the controversial pensions issue, instead will be taking it up with the prime minister.

Completely unsolicited, Mr. Roberts really has gone out of his wish to be helpfully co-operative with the prime minister, and Mr. Pearson has similarly replied with assurances of wishing to fully reciprocate this sympathy and helpfulness.

People who heard them or read what they said could scarcely help but wonder what was going on.

For Federal prime ministers, it seems, have always met with open hostility or at least unfriendly suspicion on Queen's Park, Quebec City and most other provincial capitals.

Mackenzie King once took some really hair-curling shots in his day from Mitchell Hepburn, for his "Provincial rights" description was only one of a coloured assortment of unflattering terms the Ontario premier routinely had for the prime minister.

Premier Maurice Duplessis was usually abusive of Mackenzie King, and often jovially joined Mitch Hepburn in publicly insulting him. Together the two provincial premiers once worked out quite a team act in kicking the prime minister around.

A HAT IN HAND

Even the quiet, kindly, courtly, former Liberal Prime Minister Louis S. "Uncle Louis" St. Laurent had his troubles with the premiers—and not most when they descended on Ottawa with their constitutional demands at successive Dominion-Provincial conference for bigger, even bigger handouts from the national tax pie.

Premier Quebec Duplessis, with a fine dramatic show of temper or temperament, walked out in 1950 during a tax conference, relations became so strained that the Federal Government could not even give its money away to him.

He simply refused to accept as a gift some $25 million in some Federal grants on grounds that it would make Quebec beholden to Ottawa.

And then there was the day that poor old "Uncle Louis," good and generous soul that he was, made a pilgrimage of Dominion-Provincial peace to Quebec.

Almost hat in hand he journeyed to Duplessis to see the premier and offer concessions with the haughty Duplessis condescending to meet him half way at Montreal.

They met in a hotel and suite of Duplessis' choosing, shook off the shadowing press in a strange game of hare and hounds at Duplessis' direction, and handed out a statement later tailored to his dictates.

And it has been that way ever since from one administration to another, with all the capitals keeping at a cool arm's length—until now Ottawa and Toronto sounding and quite encouraging exchange of compliments between Lester Pearson and John Robarts.

Why Means Test For Pensioners ?

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer

On listening to the radio on the morning of October 1st, I was deeply disappointed to hear a lady give her views on old age pensioners.

I would like to express my views also many others whom I believe will agree with me.

First I may be a few years to go before receiving it if God spares me.

My husband worked in a store in Belleville for about 40 years. With a small weekly wage, has never for a good many years had a raise in pay. He is past the age to look around for another job and may not every place has a pension plan at 65. Of course he is too old to get employment elsewhere. He has no retirement pay coming to him at any age. With the rise in living the last few years it is very hard to keep things going. He also has a certain amount to pay on his life insurance policy.

We have brought up our children and educated them all without the benefit of child-tax allowance, but we couldn't spend money on pleasure as so many of the young generation do today.

We now pay taxes on our little home, also in our taxes we have to pay for school buses, school books and building of new schools. Our children walked to school and bought their own books. All pensioners who own their own homes pay those taxes.

I do agree with the lady many are getting it that do not need it, but why have a means test for pensioners and not have one for children's allowances? Many children get that, and do not need it, also many who get it spend it on their own pleasure, instead of providing for their children.

United Appeal Parade and Bands

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer

This letter is prompted by the writing in your paper on September 27, of Belleville the non-appearance of bands in the United Appeal parade held September 28th.

I note by the news item on Friday that four bands were invited to participate and accord. ing to the writer, two bands accepted, the Army Navy and Airforce Elite Band, the other two were not listed.

I cannot speak for "Hasty Pete" but I am speaking for our AN and AF Band when I say we as band manager, I did not at any time promise the appearance of our group in print or verbally, to anyone connected with the parade.

In a letter to Parade Marshal Col. Angus Duffy dated Sept. 23, I explained in full, the reason that our band could not attend. In a telephone conversation previous to this, I emphasized to this hard working citizen of Belleville, that owing to the fact that our band, like it is made up of voluntary personnel, employed by companies who require that they work at work and Saturdays at various times, a promise of appearance or otherwise, could not be confirmed in more than two weeks prior to the parade.

After a discussion with our Pipe-Major and members of our band on the week end practice night of Sept. 28, it was understood that it would be physically impossible to get a creditable band available for the parade, thus the letter to Col. Duffy.

The objective of this AN and Belleville in the most creditable way possible as invited appearances out of town, especially in the U.S.A. Our visits to Cape Vincent, Watertown and Belleville, Ny., to name a few, and always remain fondly remembered for their hospitable acceptance.

This band was formed and financed at considerable expense to the Club and its members, for the purpose of serving them on parades and other unit functions. We have also availed ourselves to other organizations whenever possible, including area Sands Claus parades, unions and church parades.

To suggest that our band failed to complete a promised engagement in the interest of this city is grossly unfair and misleading.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

October 8th, 1943.

Following a generally warm and lengthy discussion on the matter, a resolution placed by the Belleville representatives asking for increased rates throughout the province was carried at the Eastern Ontario Municipal Electric Association held in Kingston. Supporting his claim that there should be uniform rates throughout the province, Mr. Reid pointed out the difference in price per horsepower paid by owners along the lake front. Rates at Kingston, he pointed out, were $25.00 at Napanee $28.52; at Deseronto $40.25; at Belleville $24.92; at Trenton $24.29; at Oshawa $22.22; and at Toronto $22.33, per horsepower.

Motorists who continue to violate the on-hour parking by-law in the downtown area of the city found police stickers on their vehicles early and again on Saturday as police authorities have been instructed by their Commission to enforce this by-law to the fullest. On Saturday their automobiles parked on the market, thus impeding the progress of traffic also found stickers on their vehicles for subs traffic violations.

Among those who will receive medals, prizes and scholarships at the graduation ceremonies in the Faculty of Medicine at Queen's University is Omar Zavier Youngburhand of Belleville.

Britain's worst train wreck in year, killed 22 persons and injured about 150 when two speeding expresses crashed into a commuters' train at Harrow, near London, 12 miles from today—in 1952. The impact left a 50-foot high mass of twisted wreckage as the first express, from Scotland, passed through one platform and the second, its lights to plow into the rear of the stationary train, and the second express, from London, coming in the opposite direction, hit the front end.

A spokesman at the British Labor party's annual conference told delegates that there are still fifteen million Britons living in homes without bathtubs or hot water.

Most of us believe that we have Civic problems licked in Canada. Unfortunately this is not so. According to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, there are 2,904,278 houses in Canada without hot or cold water; 894,-972 without bathtubs or showers and 672,981 without flush toilets. There are more homes with TV sets than bathtubs.

These are things we think about when we read of millions being spent on space rockets and kindred nonsense. It is better to have a bathtub and flush toilet than to have how deep the dust is on the moon's surface.

Thyroid Deficiency More Frequent Than Supposed

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it possible to have a slightly sluggish basal metabolism rate that cannot be detected in a routine physical examination?

I am 50 and always have been overweight, more so at 50, but even now I am 30 pounds too heavy. I require more sleep than the average person and generally have less pep. — Mrs. H. T.

I certainly don't suggest giving everybody thyroid medicine because they happen to be sluggish, or overweight, or both, but thyroid deficiency is a more frequent trouble than is commonly supposed.

The thyroid gland, of course, is most directly involved in our metabolism rate, the rate at which we turn our food into energy.

It is indeed possible to have what you call a slightly sluggish metabolism or what, in medical parlance, is often called a subtle hypothyroidism.

A routine physical examination may not indicate it specifically. Complaints of listlessness (in older people) sometimes such things as feeling colder than seems natural can be a clue.

The next step; A basal metabolism test or the more revealing protein-bound iodine test (a blood test) will indicate whether the thyroid gland is underactive.

If the test discloses that the thyroid is functioning too properly — well, you know where you stand, at least. If it shows underactivity, the diagnosis of thyroid is often markedly effective.

If this should happen to be the situation in your case, I expect thyroid medication to relieve your weight problem. It may help, also, to be sure that you develop regular eating habits you'll be able to shed the excess pounds and then keep them off. In turn, the loss of the "excess baggage" will contribute its share to keeping you active and in that way keeping your weight normal.

Dear Dr. Molner: Writing about glaucoma, you said that diet is important. What foods should one avoid. — S. S.

Salt restriction is perhaps as important as any single aspect of diet. This is due to minimize the retention of fluid in the body — a necessary goal in some other ailments, too, particularly heart disease.

So don't salt your food at the table, don't use it in cooking and don't eat preserved foods such as sausage, corned beef, pickles, bacon, ham and other smoked ham, olives, potato chips, pretzels or others that are salted either for flavor or for preservative.

You will get enough natural salt in what you eat.

If overweight, a loss of pounds will help the eye problem. People accustomed to regular alcoholic drinks a day should cut down.

These diet restrictions are for the treatment program, the control and limitation of glaucoma. They have no relation to the cause, which is an increase in fluid pressure inside the eyeball.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there anything to be taken internally or some process to apply that will repel sand flies? — Mrs. E. K.

I know of nothing to be taken internally, but there are many good insect repellents available — in liquid form, or aerosol sprays.

Writer Spoofs Television Programs

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

On the chill and rainy days of the past summer in the country I spent several times watching television in more sustained moments than I had ever done before, and today I'd like to discuss some of the moral and intellectual ramifications of this medium. . . .

But first a word from my syndicate. Do you know that the Harris column is now widely syndicated and read than any other column written by a man named Harris? Young wise say, in interviews from coast to coast? "I prefer Harris because his verbs are so clean, his adjectives glisten for hours with a special gloss and his conjunctions fit so superbly and luxuriously!"

To get back. . .What most fascinated me about the medium is its ritualistic attitude of initiation. There is not the slightest deviation from the accepted canon of each stereotyped program; all the characters are changeable, including the MCs, the guest contestants, the family groups, the commercials, and even the poignant dramas of. . .

I'd like to interrupt to remind you to watch for next week's columns, which will plumb the depths of the human mind, soar to unprecedented heights of speculation and offer a well-rounded, warm, human, stinging and yet funny overview of the comic situation today. . .

Where was I? Oh, yes. It seems clear to me that a quite proper and intellectual frame of reference is being created by the medium, in terms of mass stimulation of the basic emotional cliches. I'd like to quote some pertinent studies made by Gordon Allport, Lazarsfeld as well as a most illuminating paper presented last year by Gordon Allport at the International Psycho-Social Conference in Berne. But now. . .

All these studies are talking about the new improved Harris Antenna — a refreshing, just mild enough, but full flavor. Try Harris for a week and see if your television doesn't come perk up, if you don't experience a new surge of pure joy, if you don't say with me, "Where has this wonderful man been all my life?" Remember, Harris Antenna is the most expensive words, hand-picked, in a secret formula combination, Magiword, that no other words can duplicate. Try him today, won't you?

Pleads Guilty To Theft of Pension Cheque

A 19-year-old Belleville youth, who bought a car after cashing a pensioner's cheque, will be sentenced for theft this Friday.

This morning Joseph William DeBmbie pleaded guilty in magistrate's court to theft of the $126 cheque from Bell Telephone pensioner Norman Congdon.

Detective Harold Reid told the court Mr. Congdiff, working part-time at a Front Street used-furniture store with DeBmbie's father, gave the youth the cheque to cash. He cashed the cheque as requested — but failed to return. Instead, said the officer, he went to a used-car lot "and purchased a (1959) vehicle for $50."

"He drove the car around until he burned the clutch out of the vehicle."

His father, along with Mr. Congdiff searched the city unsuccessfully for him. DeBmbie was arrested two days later leaving his mother's home on Coleman Street.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills noted that a psychiatrist's report suggested DeBmbie fit to stand trial.

"That report, will no doubt be of some use to the authorities where you're confined," the magistrate added. "I cannot do anything about it within the scope of my authority."

To Take Vote On Sunday Movies in Dec.

For the second time in two years Belleville voters early in December will have the opportunity of saying whether or not they favor Sunday movies.

Yesterday a delegation of three local theatre managers headed by Mr. George Forhan, appeared before city council asking that the question be placed before the people in a plebiscite at the municipal election on December 2nd.

A petition of 2,155 names requesting the petition was presented to City Clerk Adam Stalker.

As spokesman for the delegation Mr. Forhan said that cities such as Kingston, Ottawa, Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg had Sunday movies.

Many newcomers to the city had expressed their desire for a vote on the Sunday movie question, while Mr. Forhan said also there were undoubtedly many persons boarding in hotels or private homes, who would welcome Sunday movies.

Two years ago the Sunday movie question was turned down by local voters.

Purchase of Caribou Planes From Canadian Plant Cut

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. Army gave up its fight for more Caribou transport planes Monday as congressional conference reported it has eliminated a $31,700,000 budget request intended to cover purchase of some 48 of the Canadian - built aircraft.

Decision of the conference, made up of select Senate and House of Representatives members, likely will be confirmed by both houses during the next few days. In all, the conference reduced the administration's defence budget for the current fiscal year to $47,229,000,000 down about $1,784,000,000 from what President Kennedy had requested.

The surgery on the projected Caribou appropriation was performed in the greatest secrecy. The members' press statement said only that the conference, which met behind closed doors last Friday, had agreed with Senate decisions on army procurement. A member of the conference said this referred to the Caribou.

As soon as this was announced, an army spokesman said the army "had no recourse but to accept the decision of the Congress." The army still considered the Caribou an excellent plane, but the army's purchasing hands are tied. While in some cases the army might have plucked funds from some other project to pay for more Caribou planes, in this case the funds eliminated by the conference centered specifically on the Caribou.

The army bought about 125 of these planes and had intended to continue purchases until a new Caribou II model is developed for production, expected about 1965. One army source said it is possible that another attempt to get more of the Caribou I will be made in next year's budget which will be unveiled in January.

The congressional conference gave no indication why it decided to eliminate the Caribou funds. One unofficial suggestion is that the U.S. Air Force considered the army was trying to take over too much of the air transport operation. Another suggestion was that legislators felt American planes and not Canadian should be purchased.

The Caribou is built by de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Limited, Downsview. A representative of that company said the conference decision likely will cause some unemployment in the Canadian plant.

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Production Minister Drury said Monday night there is no "direct relationship" between the U.S. congressional cut in U.S. appropriations and American purchases of Canadian - made Caribou aircraft.

He was replying to a Commons question by Robert Prittie (NDP — Burnaby - Richmond) who referred to as "apparent" U.S. decision not to buy more of the planes. Mr. Prittie asked that representations be made to Washington.

Mr. Drury said press reports have suggested a direct relationship between the congressional cut in the U.S. Army's budget and purchases of Caribou.

"Such a direct relationship is not the case."

Mr. Drury added that Canadian officials are in contact with the U.S. administration to ensure that aircraft orders which have already been placed will not be cancelled.

Crocodiles, Alligators Came "High"

TORONTO (CP) — An Oakville man was threatened Monday with a 10-day jail term unless he can keep his small collection of alligators and crocodiles away from his neighbors.

Mr. Justice Stanley Schatz ordered Peter Stickland, owner of the reptiles, to nail shut the basement windows of his home within 15 days and to restore a support on a neighbor's fence.

He also ordered Stickland to pay $100 court costs to counsel for neighbor A. P. Groote, who had complained of unpleasant odors from the Stickland menagerie.

Three Injured In Crash of Jeep, Car, Truck

The drivers of a milk truck, public works jeep and an automobile were taken to hospital this morning after their vehicles collided at the intersection of William and East Bridge Streets.

Hurt in the accident, which police estima:. caused about $4,000 property damage, were Robin Dairy milkman, William Kelly, city works employee Stan Finkle and Malcolm Barrett, 41, R.R. 7 Belleville.

Mr. Kelly was admitted to Belleville General Hospital for further examination. Mr. Barrett was treated for leg bruises and cuts while Mr. Finkle suffered severe leg bruises. Both men were released after treatment.

A police officer said the fact Mr. Finkle was wearing his works department safety hat most probably saved him from serious injury when his head crashed through the jeep's windshield.

The collision scattered all three vehicles about the intersection. The milk truck mounted the north sidewalk of Bridge Street, apparently struck a tree and bounced back onto the roadway, its delivery cargo of milk bottles strewn about the scene. The jeep mounted the sidewalk on William while Mr. Barrett's automobile ended against a tree on the south side of Bridge.

Cause of the accident is still being investigated.

Moose Charged

BRANTFORD (CP)—Sportsman Hector Perras bought a three-ton army surplus Bren-gun carrier to go moose hunting but despite the armored vehicle a charging moose almost got him.

Perras said Monday he paid $800 for the vehicle, stripped off a few outside fittings, shipped it to Cochrane in Northern Ontario by truck, then took a party of hunters deep into bog and bush.

After parking the machine, the hunters pressed forward on foot. Perras got tired and went to sleep under a tree.

He was awakened by a "bellow" and saw a moose about 400 yards away. He fired and hit the moose in the knee. The wounded animal charged.

Perras raised his automatic rifle but a cartridge jammed in the breech. He unjammed his gun in time, fired and hit the moose in the neck, dropping it in its tracks.

"It almost took my life to get it," he said.

It was his first moose.

Wrong Date

LONDON (AP)—The Queen congratulated Julie Cooper by cable today on her wrong birthday.

For 99 years, Mrs. Cooper had celebrated her birthday Oct. 8. With her 100th anniversary coming up, officials made a routine check of birth records.

They discovered Mrs. Cooper was born Oct. 16. However, the palace decided the Queen's telegram will go out today. "The Queen would not want to disappoint Mrs. Cooper," said a spokesman.

Mrs. Cooper lives in the Willshire hamlet of Eastcourt. Her neighbors went ahead with plans to hold a party for her tonight.

"What difference does a few days make when some one's that close to 100," said Winifred Newman, a neighbor.

"I'm too old to change now," said Mrs. Cooper.

P.E.I. MOTTO

Provincial motto of Prince Edward Island is "Parva sub ingenti," meaning "The small under the protection of the great."

New Name

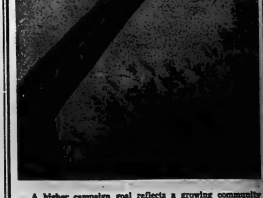
OTTAWA (CP) — Frank Howard (NDP — Skeena) suggested in the Commons Monday night that the 13 Quebec Creditistes headed by Real Caouette adopt an English version of their group's name.

He said it should be the National Union of Thirteen Separatists — easily shortened to N.U.T.S.

Raymond Langlois (Creditiste — Magantic) snapped back in English:

"I am happy to find that there are some who are capable of recognizing NUTS when they see some. These animals can be recognized when they are out in the fields; we must be careful or we are liable to be collected by them."

Charity Ball



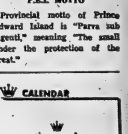
READING, England (AP)—Optician Thomas Dear rubbed his eyes when he saw the 1,000 decorated lizards on the poster advertising a charity ball.

"The printers who usually do our posters couldn't handle the job this year," Dear explained. "So one of our members volunteered to do the work. I'm afraid he let his imagination run away with him."

The posters were to advertise the annual ball of an organization called the Local Yokels. Over the blonde were the words "see you there."

Dear, an official of the Local Yokels, decided the hundreds of black bras on the poster blonde.

Belleville United Appeal
Why is The United Appeal Goal Higher Each Year?



A higher campaign goal reflects a growing community and a greater demand for the services of existing agencies. Each year a budget committee composed of your fellow citizens considers the budget requests of the agencies, and allocations are made based upon both the need and funds available. However, as long as community needs and the cost of living increase, so will the United Appeal goal.

"Directions on Reverse"

by Mary Moore

My sister Fredy brought my hot dinner to me on a tray, directly from her house two blocks away, on the condition that I would be in bed when she arrived for I had a cold but was hungry as always. It was lovely and hot and consisted of Ocean Perch Fillets Thermidor, mashed Hubbard Squash and Crumbed Broiled Tomato Halves. To make the service perfect she inclosed in a little envelope on my tray the recipe for the Fillets Thermidor — on the back of the cellophane wrapping in which the fish was packaged, saying "that is exactly what I did."

A few days later I visited my niece Barbara and she made a chiffon cake in an 8 x 2 x 2" pan. It was most professional-looking. I asked her what recipe she used. "Look on the back of the can of oil"!

So this is a column made from "Directions on Reverse".

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Mixed Grill: Baby Beef Liver, Bacon Rashers, Fried Mushrooms, Casserole of Fresh Corn and Baby Limas, Rosebud Beets; Tossed Greens; Apple Crumb; 10% Cream; Tea.

OCEAN PERCH FILLETS THERMIDOR (serves 6 generously):

2 lbs. fresh, or thawed frozen fillets, ¾ cup chopped parsley, ½ cup finely chopped onion, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 3½ cups milk, ¾ cup butter or margarine, ¾ cup flour, 1 cup shredded Old Cheddar cheese, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, paprika.

Spread cut fillets and split the very thick ones. Sprinkle with parsley, onion, salt and pepper. Place in a broad shallow baking dish; pour in milk. Bake, uncovered, at 350 deg. Fahr. until fish will flake easily with a fork — about 30 minutes. Melt butter or margarine; remove from heat and blend in flour. Stirring constantly, slowly pour in liquid drained from baked fish. Cook, stirring constantly, until sauce thickens. Add cheese and stir until melted; stir in Worcestershire sauce. Pour sauce over fish and sprinkle with paprika. Broil until topping is golden. Garnish with watercress and radish roses.

SIMPLE CHIFFON CAKE:

NOTE:

Barb said this appealed to her because it calls for 3 egg yolks and 3 egg whites — not more yolks than whites or more whites than yolks — "simple or simple people!"

1¾ cups sifted cake flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ¾ cup, fine granulated sugar, ¼ cup cooking oil, 1-3 cup orange juice (Barb substituted water because she did not have orange juice), 3 egg yolks, ½ teaspoon lemon extract, 1 teaspoon grated orange rind (optional), 3 egg whites, ½ teaspoon cream of tartar.

Blend and beat all ingredients except egg whites and cream of tartar, until very smooth. Beat egg whites with cream of tartar until very stiff. This beating is important. Fold first mixture into egg whites, blending carefully with rubber spatula. Bake in 8" tube pan or 9" square, ungreased, at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 35 minutes. Invert without surface touching rack, until cool.

Importance of Current Events Is Stressed

The September meeting of the Carrying Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Allan Cowthorpe with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. J. Lucas, opened the meeting. A copper tooling short course will be held on November 14th and November 15th. Mrs. Clayton Sullivan, convenor for agriculture gave a reading on the raising of chickens for broilers which is becoming a booming business as large quantities are being exported to other countries. She mentioned the "Tender Flesh Plant" at Petersburg which processes broiler chickens from 250 of the local growers, it has 125 employees and processes 300 chickens. They are now seeking markets in Europe for their broiler chickens.

Mrs. Duane Martin convener for citizenship gave a reading. Mrs. Charles Brintnell was in charge of the program which commenced with Community singing. Miss Ruth Brintnell gave a reading, and a poem.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Brintnell introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Ralph Sills curator for historical research for the Prince of Wales Armories. In speaking of the Tweedsmuir history book she explained how the historical research book was enjoyed after it had been prepared. We learn history by collections such as stamp collections and antiques which are valuable. We may not realize that many of our antiques came from England to the United States, then to Canada by the United Empire Loyalists. Never was historical knowledge more needed. The speaker compared knowledge to therapy, in time it leads to a normal life. Mental health requires physical habit. Our grandparents did embroidery, fancy work, quilts and such, through necessity and we are bringing in a person to teach them to us. Our life is too fast moving for many break downs. There is no history to our work like our grandmothers.

Grandmothers' quilts all had a history, ours are bought in a store with no history. The settlers did a lot to get a grant of land.

In Thurlow Township Doctor Hayden was the first doctor and he lived at Hayden's Corners where Corbyville now stands.

CURRENT EVENTS

Current events mean items of interest in the community; some specific happenings that might be of interest to the community are to be added to the history book.

A vote of thanks and appreciation for the interesting talk which was enjoyed by all present was given to Mrs. Sills by Mrs. Brintnell. Miss Ruth Brintnell gave a reading on school days in the little red schoolhouse. Mrs. Brintnell closed the meeting with a humorous poem.

Miss Ruth Brintnell conducted a contest on guessing their ancestors which each member had taken to the meeting. Mrs. Arthur Treverton was the winner of the contest. Lunch was served by the hostess and her committee when a social hour was enjoyed.

Buttermilk has food value as well as tangy refreshing flavor, Nutritionists at Macdonald Institute, Guelph tell us that buttermilk has the same food value as the milk from which it is made. This means buttermilk contains, calcium, riboflavin and protein.

Ann Landers
Stranger Ordered By Drunken Woman to Drive Her Home

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Last night I had the worst experience of my life. It could have cost me my job, my reputation and my family. Please print this letter for other young men who might find themselves in the same spot.

I attended a meeting in a downtown building and parked my car on a side street. When I returned to the car I found a good-looking woman sitting in it. She was dead drunk and I ordered her to get out. Her answer was, "If you don't drive me home I'll scream that you attacked me and let's see you get out of that one." I decided to drive her home.

When we reached her house I had to help her out of the car. Her father met us at the door and wanted to know who I was. I didn't give him my name but I explained what had happened. He said his daughter had pulled this stunt before and that she had been having emotional problems.

The minute I got home I told my wife and she said I should have brought the girl to our place. My father said I did the right thing. Did I? How can a person best protect himself in such a situation? — VICTIMIZED.

DEAR VIC — Your first mistake was leaving your car unlocked. Last night it was an intoxicated young girl. Tonight it could be an intoxicated young man — crouched on the floor with a monkey wrench in his hand.

Your second mistake was getting into the car. The moment you saw someone sitting there you should have gone for a policeman.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I realize imitation is the highest form of flattery but I'm sick of being copied.

Recently we built a beautiful home — something we had planned for years. Builders have stopped to ask us where we bought our brick. Friends have copied our landscaping ideas, which were original. The latest incident is just too much. The most distinctive feature of our new home is the windows. There are no windows like ours in this city.

Now a family we barely know is building two doors away and they say it is in the process of putting in windows exactly like ours. I am furious. What can we do to protect this one distinctive feature of our home? — THE COPIED CAT.

DEAR CAT — Did you invent the window design and patent it? If not, you have no right to an "exclusive." People have been stealing good ideas since the wheel — and it will be ever thus.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — The letter from 14-year-old Bennie caught my eye. He was the kid who wanted to quit taking piano lessons and was mad at you because you advised his ma to make him keep at it.

When I was little my ma started me on piano lessons. Like Bennie, I didn't want to practice either. Unfortunately ma let me win the battle and I gave up before I got started.

Now I'm 18 years old and I'm still giving up before I get started. I daydream a lot. When I don't want to do something I put it off until tomorrow. When tomorrow comes I don't do it.

I realize now the importance of self-discipline. I'm trying to do better but it makes me mad to think how much easier it would have been if perseverance had been drilled into me when I was a little kid. — THE BLOB.

DEAR BLOB — Thanks for strengthening my point. I'm glad you were able to finish this letter and mail it! You're doing better already.

Does almost everyone have a good time but you? If so, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Be Well Liked," enclosing with your request 30 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Time to Dig Dahlias, Tubers

Tender garden plants such as dahlias and tuberous begonias should be harvested after the first frosts have blackened the foliage. Horticulturists with the Ontario Department of Agriculture suggest the following tips for successful harvesting.

Dig the tubers on a dry sunny day so that they are dried well before being placed in storage. The dahlia stems should be cut to within three or four inches of the ground. Dig them carefully to avoid damage to the fleshy roots. They should then be turned upside down and dried in the sun for the remainder of the day.

They should be stored in boxes of dry sand, peat or sawdust. Make sure that the cellar is frost free but not warm.

Begonias are dug at the same time as dahlias. The whole plant is dug and left to dry. The stems are removed sometime later and the tubers stored in sand, peat or sawdust.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS — BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: is there a double standard in etiquette? The way we many men neglect to acknowledge hospitality in a one way, it would seem there's a set of rules for women and another rule for men.

Very often my husband invites a friend to our home for dinner and occasionally for an overnight guest. Either he's a visiting fireman, in town for a day or two, or a man whose wife is away on a trip and he's left to fend for himself for a short time. My husband is so quick with an invitation that we end up feuding for his friend, instead.

I'm not a picky sort of person, but what bothers me is that I go to great pains to prepare a lovely dinner, often invite other guests to make the occasion a bit of a party, and, once it's over, that's the last I ever hear from the guest of honor — until the next time, of course.

His friends don't thank-you to my husband once they're back at the office or wherever they come from. My husband thinks this is courteous enough. But I still think that the host's wife should remember to give the hostess a pat on the back occasionally by at least sending a note or splurging on a phone call.

Perhaps if you print this letter it might remind men of some of their obligations in the manners department. I just don't think that women have an exclusive on courtesy. A man should be perfectly capable of at least saying thank-you when his wife's not around to do it for him. — Mrs. V. C. A., Camden, N. J.

Answer: A married man is so used to having his wife handle all the social details of life that he is apt to be forgetful about something as little graces when she's not around for a while.

You do have a legitimate gripe, though, and any man — married or single — who accepts hospitality, especially overnight, should take the courtesy to send his hostess a thank-you note shortly afterward.

There was a time when a bachelor, particularly, sent his hostess flowers the day after his dinner-party. The custom, unfortunately, has petered out in all but extremely formal circles, and the day-after-phone call has taken the place of a dozen roses.

Any man who is guest of honor at a party, or an overnight guest, should send a thank you note at least — and flowers, if he wants to be really proper.

A man who is a long dinner guest is not obligated to send either the next day, but it's thoughtful to bring the hostess a gift when he arrives, to show some sort of appreciation for her kindness in inviting him.

Painter Makes Name In Difficult Medium of Intaglio Color Engraving

By JANET KASK

MONTREAL (CP)—A world of muted light and delicate innuendo is the world of Montreal artist Toble Steinhouse.

The windows of her Westmount studio are covered with filmy curtains to break the harsh Montreal sunlight. She prefers the light of winter when the ground is covered with snow. Even indoor is the misty light she found in France.

Mrs. Steinhouse has been painting for 10 years, in Canada and in Paris, and has had exhibitions here and abroad. Lately she has made a name for herself in the difficult medium of intaglio color engraving, a technique developed about eight years ago by French graphic artist William Stanley Hayter.

The Canadian Painter-Etchers and Engravers Society awarded Mrs. Steinhouse one of two first prizes at their 63th annual show at the Hamilton Museum of Fine Arts. She also received first prize in the "other media" section of the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts spring exhibition.

The winner of her first one-woman exhibition in France and Canada. Her work has been shown in several group exhibits and she is represented in the permanent collection of the National Gallery at Ottawa, the Quebec Provincial Museum and the Canadian Embassy in Moscow.

Mrs. Steinhouse studied with Hayter at his Atelier 17 in Paris while her husband, CBC producer and author Herb Steinhouse, was in Europe on a Canada Council grant in 1961.

FRENCH INFLUENCE

Her paintings reflect a warmth and individualism, with some of the same soft qualities as in the works of the French impressionist painters. Mrs. Steinhouse feels that the abstract painting popular today is "on its way out."

Her color engravings, bearing such titles as Dreams, Night, and Forests, barely suggest outlines of cathedrals, ships and wheat fields in the wind.

Intaglio engraving, she explained, involves a knowledge of chemistry. A metal plate is prepared with acids which bite deeper into the etching. When the plate is ready several rollers are prepared with colored paints. The amount of oil in each color and the softness or hardness of each roller determines how deeply the color goes into the etching. The grooves in the etching are different depths because of the acid preparation. In this way several colors can be applied to the plate at the same time. When all the colors have been applied the plate is ready to make a colored print.

The Steinhouses lived in France for 11 years after their marriage in New York where both were studying. She has fond memories of life in Paris and "in Paris you can walk to a corner cafe and see the whole world." But she found it was easier for her to get work done in Montreal.

She divides her time between art and being a mother and housewife. "With a new baby there isn't much time for painting," she admitted. She has two sons, Stephen, 11, and Adam, six months. But she manages to find time to bake bread, an accomplishment she learned from Montreal artist Annie Savage. Miss Savage was Mrs. Steinhouse's first art teacher and inspired her to take up painting seriously.

PARKDALE BAPTIST LADIES FELLOWSHIP

The October meeting of the Ladies Fellowship was held at the home of Mrs. Jean Allen, 45 Purdy St., on Oct. 3rd, with 17 members present.

Mrs. George Stone, missionary convener read a letter from the Greenladen missionaries in Peru, who are aided by the Ladies Fellowship. They expressed thanks for parcels already sent. Another letter from Formosa was read in which a mission expressed appreciation for used greeting cards sent earlier in the year. They asked us to try to understand what a thrill it is for those in Formosa who have literally nothing to be given a pretty, gaily decorated card with verses printed on it. We, who have so much, find this difficult to comprehend.

Some discussion followed as to whom we should support at Christmas with a gift of clothing and toys. It was decided to send them to a needy family in the Gaspe.

The devotional part of the meeting was turned over to the ladies in charge, Mrs. Stewart Blake, Mrs. Jean Allen, and Mrs. Charles Brenton. Mrs. Allen read a poem stating the truth that we should live one day at a time, not worrying about past offences or future happenings. Mrs. Brenton then spoke of David's reminiscing after a battle as he lay dying of thirst, and how he humbly refused a drink because it had cost too many precious lives, and he felt unworthy.

Prospecting Said Good For Nerves

REGINA (CP)—If you have tensions and can't sleep, need a new outlook on life and would like some excitement, try prospecting. It may be the answer for you.

This is the advice given by the only two women prospectors in Saskatchewan's northland.

Both are grandmothers, have been prospecting for about five years and agree the chances of getting rich are slim. They also agree it's a great life.

Mrs. Eugene Hurd prospects with her 58-year-old husband and described her to become his partner because he had been "getting along well with her for pretty near 30 years."

Mary Hurd took a prospectors' course offered by the Saskatchewan government at Lac la Ronge. The couple now take their 10 - year - old daughter Jacqueline Ann on their treks into the woods.

Two years ago the Hurds found a couple of nuggets and are negotiating with companies on claims.

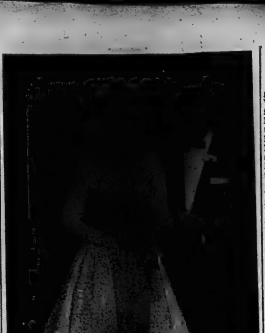
The other grandmother-prospector is Victoria Nemaniheen who also took the course. Her husband Mike is less enthusiastic but they're working out an arrangement. They plan to sell their farm 32 miles northeast of Prince Albert next year and buy a cabin and motorboat. Then while Mike fishes, his wife will prospect.

Eskimo Girl Gets Home In Big City

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP)—The life-long dream of a teen-age Eskimo girl—to see and live in a big city—will come true this fall.

Mary Menarick, 19, a seal-hunter's daughter, so impressed a Toronto family at a tourist camp and hotel where she was working this summer that the family invited her to live with them.

Mary will look after the children for her "adopted" family.



"I have three brothers and four sisters, some very young, at home. I am fond of children and am certain I can do a good job."

The attractive young girl got her first glimpse of bright lights last spring when she left her Fort George home, on James Bay about 200 miles north of Moosonee, and came south to take a six-week waitress course here.

Before that, she had attended school with the children of seven other Eskimo families in the Fort George area for five years and the Moosonee school for one year.

She is eager to learn—her favorite subjects are spelling and history—and she loves baseball, skating and fishing. She has even accompanied her father on his seal hunting expeditions.

Since coming to a waitress, the determined girl has overcome much of her shyness and converses freely with anyone.

DROUILLARD — BIRD

Rev. Everett Smith was the officiating clergyman for the wedding of Kathleen Aletha Bird, R.R. 5, Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence S. Bird to Clayton Ernest Drouillard, 28 Purdy St., Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Drouillard, in Christ Church on September 21st.

The church was decorated with a harvest festival theme, stalks of golden grain, pumpkins and other fall vegetables.

Given in marriage by her father the bride entered the church in the organ music of "Birds of Aristophanes" with the recessional "Rondo in C." Her choir boys sang during the service.

Wearing a full length gown of French satin re-embroidered brocade with detachable over skirt in bone white satin peau de soie with a train, the bride looked charming with a coronet headdress of pearls and crystals holding a tiered mélaine veil. Pearl necklace and ear rings, and a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and stephanotis completed the picture.

Miss Sheila Wellman, R.R. 2, Belleville, was maid of honor, wearing a spun gold peau de soie sheath dress with matching overskirt of the same material. The skirt was joined at the waistline falling open to show the underskirt of the sheath, the bodice had a rounded neckline and short sleeves. The three bridesmaids were: Miss Audrey Bowers, Belleville, Miss Margaret Butler, Belleville, and Miss Beth Boyd, R.R. 5, Belleville. Their gowns were apple green peau de soie made in similar fashion to the maid of honor, and their headdresses were pillbox crowns of apple green and spun gold peau de soie with a blusher veil reaching illusion veils. They carried nosegays of yellow and bronze mums.

Miss Margaret Bird, sister of the bride was junior bridesmaid and wore spun gold peau de soie with gathered skirt, scooped neckline and short sleeves. Mr. Frank Howard was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Garnet Bird, and Mr. Fred Bird, brothers of the bride, and Mr. John Bird.

At the reception held in the parish hall of the church, the bride's mother received wearing a two-piece sheath dress with three-quarter length jacket in shaded teal blue crepe de chine with matching shoes, beige accessories and corsage of pink roses.

She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother wearing a double knit peacock blue three-piece suit with matching cardigan jacket, blouse and slim skirt, beige accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

For a plane trip to New York City the bride wore a Chanel type beige wool suit, with flowered silk blouse which matched the lining in the suit jacket, cocoa brown shoes and purse dark velour hat in Robin Hood style with jaunty feather, and a corsage of yellow roses.

Guests from out of town included Toronto, Bancroft, Carlton, Camp Borden, Redeview, Trenton and Brampton.

Before her marriage the bride was entertained at several miscellaneous showers, at the home of Mrs. Douglas Flynn, Trenton, with spinsters Miss Sheila Stanton; at Club Canara where the maid of honor, Miss Sheila Wellman, was hostess, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Ed Wellman, and at the apartment of Miss Elva Asselstine, Bridge Street, Belleville.

WEDDING

LUSH — REILLY

Standards of pink and white gladioli were used to decorate Victoria Avenue Baptist church for the September wedding of Eileen Margaret Reilly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Reilly of Foxboro to David Collin Lush of Bancroft, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lush, with Rev. Gordon Woodcock officiating.

Traditional wedding music was played by the church organist Mr. William Connor. Soloist before the ceremony and during the signing of the register was Mr. Phil Squire.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father was gowned in white lace over satin with fitted bodice having a round scooped neckline, and long close fitting sleeves. The straight skirt was slim in front with a train falling from a side and back tucked bustle. A narrow flange of satin bordered the V-line bustle and extended to form a band at the waistline. The waist - length veil of silk illusion was caught to a crown set with pearls, and she carried a cascade of two white orchids surrounded by pink roses, white tulle and ivy.

Matron of honor was Mrs. David Valcamp of Kingston, a sister of the bride. The bridesmaids were Miss Sandra Lavender of Windsor and Miss Lynda Fritty of Belleville, both cousins of the bride; and Mrs. Roger Jones of Belleville.

The attendants were attired in gowns sheathed from palest pink to deep rose, fashioned of nylon sheer over silk taffeta. The gowns featured fitted bodices with spaghetti straps and slightly gathered bell skirts. The jackets were fashioned with three-quarter length sleeves, round necklines and buttoned backs, complemented with flowing sheer back panels. Their matching petal headpieces were frosted with sprightly mauline.

Little Miss Lynn Dafoe, of Hamilton, cousin of the bride, was flower girl, wearing a white dress with pink sash. Her flowers were a basket of pink and white pompoms.

Mr. Sandy MacArthur of Bancroft was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. David Valcamp of Kingston, brother-in-law of the bride; Mr. Lorne Reilly of Frankford, and Mr. Joe Cox of Belleville, both cousins of the bride.

At the wedding reception held in the church parlors the bride's mother received wearing a blue brocade dress with bolero, matching accessories and corsage of pink garnets.

She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother wearing green with brown accessories and corsage of golden garnets.

For the bride's table was ornamented with a three-tier wedding cake made by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Ethel Reid, and the bouquets of the bridal party.

For travelling to New York the bride chose a two piece green suit with beige accessories and a corsage of orchids.

Out of town guests attended from Ottawa, Kingston, Toronto, Welland, Landon, Melrose, Bancroft, and Hamilton.

The issue cabinet the 1,650-800-member CLC—its M-member executive council—meets today to make this decision.

Informed sources expect the congress to issue a statement saying that it no workable, effective trusteeship could be achieved in talks with U.S. trade unionists in the AFL-CIO.

Blame for the impasse will likely be laid at the door of Paul Hall, an AFL-CIO vice-president who heads the 70,000-member SIU of North America.

Mr. Hall is reported to have refused to endorse union-operated trustees who would have unsuccessful powers to oust Mr. Banks and reform the SIU.

In addition to the crackdown on the vacation pay plan, the government has also moved on one other prospect of the Norris report—appointment of two special lawyers to consider whether criminal action should be taken against Mr. Banks and his lieutenants.

A secret report from the two lawyers—J. J. Roberts of Toronto and Jean Martineau of Montreal—is under top - level study in the justice department. It is reported to contain startling revelations based on an intensive investigation by the lawyers in concert with the RCMP.

Council Votes To Seek Meet Over Race Track

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—City council voted 7-5 Monday night to seek a meeting with Economics and Development Minister Robert Macaulay to discuss the proposed construction of a $3,500,000 harness-racing track just outside the city limits.

Ald. William Marshall, an opponent of the move, accused council of "casting ovrious eyes on our neighbors because they were going to get a racetrack."

The Jockey Club Limited announced plans for the track last week. It is to be built on a 240-acre site at the Welland Canal, in a part of Grantham Township which was not annexed to St. Catharines in 1961.

The Ontario Municipal Board to serve the rest of Grantham Township to Niagara Township with a proviso that it be kept as farmland. If it is developed as industrial land, the board suggested, St. Catharines might be given the right to annex it.

Niagara Township council moved last week to construct a 17-acre sewage lagoon to serve the track and extend a water main to the area.

Frank Sinatra Pulling Out Of Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Singer Frank Sinatra in a surprise announcement Monday said he is selling out of his Nevada gambling interests, estimated to be worth $2,200,000.

Sinatra, object of a Kennedy relocation attempt by the Nevada Gaming Control Board, said through his lawyer here:

"I intend to divest myself completely from any involvement with the gaming industry."

The gaming control board had charged Sinatra violated its regulations by entertaining Chicago underworld figure Sam Giancana at Sinatra's Cal - Neva Lodge at Lake Tahoe.

The control board asked the state gaming commission, its parent organization, to revoke Sinatra's gaming licence at the Lake Tahoe Lodge. It also sought to force the singer to shed his nine per-cent interest in the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas.

CAMPBELLFORD

Rotary Club Hears Talk On Education

CAMPBELLFORD — "Capsule Comments on Education" was the topic of a speech given to the Campbellford Rotary Club this week by L. S. Caughill, principal of the Campbellford District High School.

To educate, meaning "to teach" said Mr. Caughill, is as old as history, the first mother had to teach her child survival. Also, the very first definition of the word, teaching is presumed to be what it must be — a dynamic thing, changing with the times. In Greek history, teaching was associated with learning, but with the advent of Roman culture, stress was laid on law, and duty to the state. Under Christian domination, morality was introduced as an educational must.

The domination of the church in education lasted until the Reformation. After this time the state schools took over, which proved to be a benevolent trend even up to the present when communism threatens dominate the learning of the populace.

Never to home, he stated, the survival aspect of education was given impetus with the launching of the first Sputnik nearly The race for space began with the democracies conscious of their late start. It was after the Civil War in the United States that the principle of free education for all who can achieve," was voiced. But it is only now that the principle is being implemented to any degree.

QUESTION OF EDUCATION

Mr. Caughill said the British North America Act made the question of education over to the provinces. In Northumberland county in the early 1900's only one per cent of the school population passed Grade 12 (Junior Matriculation). It was not until the present time, and the Robarts plan for education in Ontario that the difference in capacity of individual pupils was recognized. In the Ontario school system, Campbellford High School is now classed as a Limited Technical High School, offering five of the eight avenues of education under the plan.

The rate of growth, and the school population of Campbellford and district was discussed as a complete participation in all phases of the Robart plan of education. Mr. Caughill said, "A new addition presently under way to the school, will add two technical shops, two science labs, a music room, two classrooms and a cafeteria, he said.

The speaker commended the members of the high school board on their efforts to promote and eventually achieve adequate housing for a more complete educational process for the communities it serves.

Wallace Rutherford, vice-president of the Rotary Club who introduced the speaker, said Mr. Caughill graduated from McMaster University in 1959, later served in Korea and was assigned to a project of "counter brain-washing" after the war. It was at this time he decided to become a teacher, and taught in Rickford Lake and Ottawa, before coming to Campbellford.

committee to the Commons chamber. He talked briefly with State Secretary Pickerrgill, then went to his seat and made the blockade - ending announcement:

"We are putting an end to our speeches."

Mr. Gregoire said the committee "is not serious at all," but his party had confidence the government would solve the problem.

In the last five minutes of sitting the Commons whipped through the $747,449,951 supply bill without further debate and sent it to the Senate for passage there.

Louis - Joseph Pigeon (PC—Drummond - L'Assomption - Montcalm) asked what "crisis-mise" had been reached between Mr. Pickergill and Mr. Gregoire. He got no reply.

Outside the Commons Mr. Gregoire told reporters he is confident the committee would soon make a decision favorable to his party.

Asked whether the Creditistes would renew their blockade tactics if the committee verdict was unfavorable, he said only:

HAVE IMAGINATION

"Let's say we have a lot of imagination when we need it."

The privileges committee met for three hours in the morning before its special evening session. It made little progress as questioning of Argument bogged down on the matter of how the Social Credit-Creditiste split the breakaway.

Mr. Gregoire argued that Mr. Thompson and his followers did the breaking.

The Labor Day weekend meeting of the Ralliement des Creditistes at Granby, Que., said, deposed Mr. Thompson as Social Credit leader by a majority vote of party MPs.

The Creditistes claim recognition as a party, with Commons seats and offices separate from Mr. Thompson's followers. Recognition as a party, if granted, would give Mr. Caouette the $4,000 annual allowance newly awarded this year for minor party leaders with 12 or more followers.

The St. Lawrence longshoremen have been working under the terms of their old contract since Jan. 1, with the understanding that any increase won in a new contract would be retroactive.

ASK FRINGE BENEFITS

They got $2.28 an hour. They asked at first for a wage boost of 35 cents an hour spread out over two years, plus 10 cents more in the value of fringe benefits—working conditions, vacation, retirement and medical plans.

The executive agreed with the shipping federation in March on a 12-cent wage boost over two years, plus four cents in fringe benefits, but the members rejected it.

They likewise rejected a unanimous conciliation board report calling for a package increase of 22 cents an hour over two years, including three cents for fringe benefits.

Indications are the fringe benefits have become the most important demand in the new union proposals.

Bulletins From Birdland

By Winifred E. WILSON

FAMILY GATHERING

Family gatherings have been taking place all around us for several weeks in Birdland. The family units stay together in late summer and early autumn looking for a suitable spot to settle for a few days — some place where there is a lot of their favorite food so that they can fatten up for fall migration. Presently they are joined by other family units of their close relatives. Gradually they come together until there is a really large family gathering.

Have you ever lived in a locality where many chickadees, bushtee or mountain ash trees grow? Here, when the fruit is ripening, robins, and cedar waxwings hold their family gatherings. There might be 50 or 75 of a kind.

NOISY BIRDS

We can hardly miss the influx of robins, they are such noisy birds, calling out to one another as they find each new supply of food. The voices of the cedar waxwings are soft and gentle in comparison; but they do as much calling all the same. Robins are true singers in grand chorus; they are so related. They are not looking for fruit, but little flies and insects. After this date it is unlikely that we come upon a flock of yellow warblers or redstarts because they have gone on their long journey to Nashville and black-throated greens. In this instance, often travel together in the autumn, fattening up on little insects and spiders.

TASTE THAT DIFFERS

The black-and-white warblers, with a taste that differs somewhat from the others, are able to stay long after the trees have lost their leaves. They feed on wood-boring insects, so are sometimes seen with birds of an entirely different type, as brown creepers and nuthatches and hatches, finding their food on trunks of trees. All these do a wonderful job for us.

Other groups are formed in this way every day as long migration is planned. Family groups of chickadees join with other family groups of chickadees until there is a large family gathering. These birds often stay together all winter, feeding on the eggs and pupae of insects supplemented by wild berries, seeds, and fruits that have been left on the bushes.

Half Million New Cars Sold In Canada

TORONTO — Canadians bought over a half a million new cars in 1962 — a record 502,995 units — according to the 1963 edition of Facts and Figures of the Automotive Industry released today. This annual publication of automotive statistics, published by the Canadian Automotive Chamber of Commerce, contains 45 pages of statistical data on the automotive industry, roads and highways and on motor fuels.

Among the innovations in the 1963 edition of this handy reference booklet are the "Historical Highlights of the Canadian Automotive Industry" and "Automotive Industry Records."

According to Facts and Figures, there is an average of one car per household and 3.2 persons per vehicle in Canada. This compares with a density of approximately 2.6 vehicles per person in the United States and 6.6 in the United Kingdom.

Motor vehicles provided governments with an estimated $655 million in revenue in 1962, which represents 21.2% of the total net general revenue of the provinces. Of this total motor vehicle revenue in Canada in 1962, 15% was derived from motor fuel taxes and 6.2% from registration fees.

Other interesting facts and figures in the booklet include a brief about the Canadian automotive industry in 1962 include:

- Total production of passenger cars and commercial vehicles amounted 508,780 units — an increase of 117,883 units over 1961.
- The average hourly earnings for employees in the motor vehicle manufacturing industry amounted to $3.47.
- Retail sales of passenger cars, trucks and buses total $1,782,000,000.
- There were 21,027 convertible cars produced in Canada in 1962 — a decrease of 10,501 units over 1961.
- There were more than 5,790,000 vehicles registered in Canada in 1962, of which 4,536,000 were passenger cars.
- Canadians drove an estimated 67.8 billion miles during last year on a total of 467,106 miles of highways, roads and streets.
- Net sales of gasoline totalled 3,314,910,000 imperial gallons and net sales of diesel oil totalled 153,771,000 imperial gallons.

Three Heifers, Grain, Hay Lost in Fire

PICTON — For the second time in four years, Arnold De Vries stood and watched the barn on his farm in Sophiasburg burn. The weekend conflagration took the modern, two-storey barn he built following the first fire.

Lost in the fire were 4,000 bales of hay, one thousand bushels of grain and three yearling heifers.

The silo and the cement basement walls remained standing. The stables were moderately equipped for 34 head of milch cows. These cattle were in a field nearby.

Cause of the fire is not known but was bursting through the peak when it was first noticed.

Mr. and Mrs. De Vries were visiting neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Flake and had left for home at midnight when they saw the glow in the sky. This was unable to call firemen as a high wall of the barn put the line out of commission.

18 accused, Schoeters' 25-year-old wife, Jeanne, was given a suspended sentence after an impassioned plea for mercy by defence lawyer Gilles Deguay, supported by the Crown.

Mrs. Schoeters, an x-ray technician, pleaded guilty to placing explosives in an RCAF technical services building April 13. Mr. Deguay said she > . . . became involved only because of her husband and that she was needed by her two children, aged six and two.

Richard Bitzer, 18, an elevator operator, was sentenced to six months for the same offence as Mrs. Schoeters.

The remaining two who pleaded guilty, Alain Brouillard, 18, and Alain Gabriel, 19, were remanded until Oct. 30 for sentence for public mischief.

One of the accused, Eugenio Pitzo, 23, a newspaper proofreader, was liberated. Mr. Ducros said the Crown was not in a position to prove a definite role in chief charge against him.

CHARGES REDUCED

Hudon, Villeneuve, Groux, Labonte and Schoeters had all been charged with non-capital murder in connection with the charges against the first four were reduced to manslaughter on the ground of society."

Mr. Ducros said manslaughter covers a fatality in which there is no actual premeditation or intention of killing.

The murder charge against Schoeters was being dropped entirely, he said, because the Crown did not believe it could prove its case.

Most of the persons sentenced had nothing to say when sentence was passed. Lamoureux, however, said he wanted an opportunity to present the "political side" of his case and pointed out in the front row of the spectators' seats yelled "they have a right to appeal."

Mr. Justice Cousineau, declining to allow any "political" speeches, said criminal offences were the only issue before the court. As Lamoureux was led out, he was seen, identifying herself as his mother, walked to the centre aisle and said "a game has been made out of these young people, that's justice for you."

Then she left the courtroom.

Bitzer also tried unsuccessfully to discuss the "political side," which he said had been "anti - democratically" concealed since the beginning of court proceedings against the FLQ.

"It's not for Her Majesty that I am in jail, but for the Independence of French-Canada," he said as he was being removed from the prisoner's dock.

Grioux shouted "long live the republic" after hearing sentence passed on him.

Schoeters said he only wanted to say that "never in my life have I hated anybody, contrary to the impression given by the newspapers."

Before pleading guilty, Schoeters, Hudon, Villeneuve, Groux, Lamoureux and Gagnon read identical statements declaring that, as FLQ members, they do not recognize the "foreign law" under which they were charged but admitting that they committed the acts mentioned in the charges.

The acts were committed because "this is the only attitude that can liberate the Quebec people from the domination and colonialist yoke that weighs upon them."

Five of the 18 accused—Mario Bachand, Pierre Schneider, Gilles Prunseau, Roger Tetreault and Andre Gervais—failed to appear when their names were called. Their cases were postponed until Wednesday.

A warrant has been issued for Prunseau, who had also failed to appear last month for setting of his trial date.

No reasons were given for the absence of the others but defence lawyers said they believe they can get in touch with them before Wednesday.

Another accused, Francois Giroux, 22, was facing preliminary hearing on a charge of conspiracy to damage property.

Think Disc Brakes Will Be Popular

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Ever since one U. S. car maker incorporated them on his '53 models, it has been predicted that the new disc brakes will soon become standard . . . at least on front wheels.

Such opinions are based on the theory that disc brakes, on their proven ability to eliminate most of the heat build-up problem with which the conventional drum type — can cause serious brake fade or failure. They are designed to overcome this via maximum exposure to air flow which enables them to dissperse heat much more rapidly.

Actually, disc brakes are not new at all. European sport cars have featured them for many years, and they are credited with minimizing braking troubles during races over famed routes noted for torturous bend curves and hills.

For the average motorist, disc brakes also promise easier, less self-servicing, since the linings — which are actually small pads — can be checked and changed with more easily than those on the conventional type of brake.

From N. T.: "Is the automobile industry a U. C. or L. C. electrical unit?"

(A) The conventional type is a direct current generator. Those which are called alternators, featured on some of today's cars, are alternating current generators.

H. Z. writes: "The rubber on my brake pedal is worn badly. Can I replace the covering alone, or must I get a new pedal?"

(A) You can replace either the pad alone, or the entire pedal if you wish. Most auto supply stores carry both shapes for every model and year.

V.-W. asks: "My car begins to vibrate when it hits between 45 and 50 m.p.h. Would this be more likely due to trouble in the running gear or to the engine itself?"

(A) You can find the answer to that by running the engine in neutral at this speed. If no vibration is evident, then you've narrowed the suspect list to the steering, suspension and running gear.

From L. M.: "How does the choke actually change the fuel supply?"

(A) It doesn't. The choke changes the fuel-air ratio by partially obstructing the air flow of the carburetor — thereby enriching the mixture. This is done when the engine is cold. When it's warmed up the choke valve is wide open and does not interfere with the carburetor air intake.

Details of Older-Workers Incentive Program Given

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has unveiled the details of its $5,000,000 "experimental" program aimed at putting older unemployed workers back on the job.

Spelling out the program in a statement in the Commons Monday, Labor Minister MacEachen appealed to employers in Canada to create as many job opportunities as possible for unskilled workers in the 45-and-over age bracket.

The incentive is a bonus from the federal government of up to $75 a month for a full year, to be paid for all approved older workers who are given work and training under the new program. The bonus was first disclosed in the budget speech June 13.

Michael Starr, labor minister in the previous Conservative government, accused the government of announcing policies before it had worked out programs.

"It now remains to be seen whether this new gimmick for the employment of the older worker will work out as well as it is hoped . . . or whether it will be just another flop in the gimmicks promoted by this government," he said.

LIBERTY NOV. 1

Mr. MacEachen said the program, which begins Nov. 1, is designed to assist long-term unemployed men and women older than 45 years to regain jobs and to receive new skills.

The incentive payments — 50 per cent of the monthly wage paid or $75 a month, whichever is less—will be made to employers who hire older workers between Nov. 1 and Jan. 31, 1954. Incentive payments will continue for up to 12 months.

However, the payments will not be made until an eligible employee has been on the job for three months. Employers are required to file a claim for each employee they hire and have had the worker on their payroll for three months. This is the claim for workers hired Nov. 1 will be filed Feb. 15.

Once the claim is approved, the government bonus will be paid retroactively to the date of hiring and monthly payments will continue for the remaining three months.

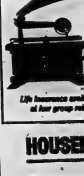
The incentive payments apply only to workers who are insurable under the Unemployment Insurance Act. Public service workers at all levels of government from municipal through to federal are excluded, as well as domestic and farm workers. Also excluded are employees hired by governments' owned business enterprises such as the publicly - owned CNR.

UNITED TRADE WORKERS

The employer must provide the older worker with a "significant amount" of approved on-the-job training or assist him to continue in gainful employment. The yardstick for such training was not disclosed.

Employers were also told that they would not get the incentive bonus if they hired an older worker to fill a job vacated by another employee since Sept. 1.

The older worker for whom claims may be made is defined as a man or woman 45 years of age or older who is unemployed, is ineligible for regular unemployment insurance benefits and has been jobless for at least six of the previous nine months.



The worker must not be collecting the federal old age pension of $65 a month, paid to all at 70, or any similar pension of the same amount. Only one worker in each family household will be eligible under the program.

Mr. MacEachen said the National Employment Service will operate the new program at the community level. It will process claims for the hiring and training older workers seeking jobs.

FIND ANCIENT BEAST

RUSSELL, Man. (CP)—Highway crews have uncovered a skull and some fragments of the skeleton of what appears to have been a prehistoric ancestor of the Manitoba buffalo. They found the specimens recently while cutting into the banks of the Assiniboine River Valley seven miles west of here and about 240 miles northwest of Winnipeg. Richard Sutton, director of the Manitoba Museum, said the find was the most perfect example so far of this type of bison.

Bella Forgive, Forget Mood Goes Unnoticed by Rebels

ALGIERS (Reuters) — President Ahmed Ben Bella was in a "forgive and forget" mood today but there was no sign that this would ease rebel opposition to his regime.

Informed sources said Ben Bella was prepared to drop charges in the Kabylia rebellion led by Col. Mohand Ou El Hadj and Hocine Ait Ahmed provided they agreed to settle the crisis within a congress of the ruling National Liberation Front.

But Ait Ahmed, head of the rebel Socialist Forces Front, told newspaper men the party rejected Ben Bella's offer to negotiate within the structure of the National Liberation Front, the only party permitted by the constitution.

Ben Bella stressed he would not accept a solution which would question the legitimacy of the regime or which would lead to recognition of the Socialist Forces Front as a legal party.

MEETS DEPUTIES

The president made the offer to drop charges at a 3½-hour meeting Sunday with four Kabylia deputies. They were called last week for a solution of the crisis without violence.

In an interview in today's edition of the pro-Communist Paris newspaper Liberation, Ben Bella said he had no intention of negotiating with Ait Ahmed who had proposed himself as an adventurer.

(Ben Bella was quoted as saying: "He cannot blow a trumpet of the national territory to evoke the authority of the central government.")

Col. El Hadj reaffirmed that his government was dedicated to destroying the system of government set up by Ben Bella.

El Hadj, a wartime jewellery addressed a cheering crowd of about 2,000 in a small village in the Kabylia mountains Sunday.

"Algerian freedom is at stake," he said, adding the Ben Bella regime was fascist and tolerated no freedom of expression.

He has considerable appeal among traditional Tories but his aristocratic frail appearance might make it hard to project him as a popular national figure. At 49, his age might also be against him at a time of emphasis on youth and change.

In contrast, increasing attention is being given to Lord Hailsham, minister of education, will be 56 Wednesday. RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Out in the posh spots of Los Angeles and the smoky soda-satiated atmosphere of Flatbush bistros, they're still singing the praises of Sanford Koufax. His name will go in American history books, they say, and some day he may get top billing with Abe and George:

Brooklyn was solid Dodger even if they wear the collar tag of "L.A." The gaudery of the Gowanis brushed their battle cry of "Hook, Hook, Hook" across the river and a mouse could have been heard in the backs above loyalty and bet $500 on the Yankees was sentenced to be half-shot at dawn before a firing squad of dry martinis.

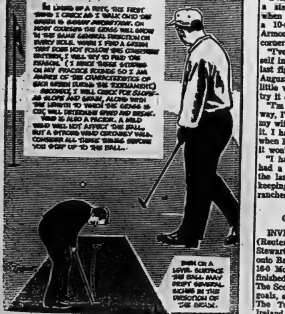
But Mr. Koufax is the man in the news. He's 27, shy, a part-time television actor, the best pitcher in baseball today, fills his bronze convertible with fresh consignments of Hollywood lovelies, makes snaps since at the crack of his fast ball, and has a cellar-full of money.

Sandy is a nice Jewish boy, born on December 30, 1936. He wanted to be an architect but settled for a baseball player. He went to Lafayette High and to the University of Cincinnati on a baseball scholarship. In his first two games he struck out 34 batters. He was fair game for the major league bird dogs.

In December 1954 he signed a contract with the Dodgers and got a bonus of $15,000. Under the bonus rules he could not be sent to the minors and for the next six years he got off the bench often enough to show blinding speed and the wildness of a hawk. Through it he managed to file the record for most strikeouts in a nine-inning game (8), set records for strikeouts in two consecutive games (31) and in three consecutive games (41.) He also lost more games than he won.

He was frustrated, taunted by teammates who claimed he lacked competitive fire, and so consumed by pressure they called him a fog-it-in pitcher instead of a thinking hurler.

He had a hot verbal blast with Dodger general manager Buzz Bavasi, then began to get more starting assignments. Norm Sherry, a catcher persuaded him to stop throwing so hard, to cut down 10 percent on speed and work on control, change-of-pace and curve balls. More experience led to greater confidence, then to greater maturity.



In 1961 he won 18 games and set a National League mark of 269 strikeouts. In 1962 he threw the first of two no-hitters, leading the National League in earned-run average (2.96), in strikeouts (216) and had a mid-season record of 144 when his index finger went bad.

He did not win another game last year. But then healed the finger and by the end of the season he won 25 games, raised his league whiff record to 306 and led the majors in shutouts (11), a mayor league mark for left-handers in one season.)

He will undoubtedly earn a raise in salary next year (about $30,000 in 1963) which will go into his bulging stock portfolio, his part interests in a motel and an FM radio station, his plush San Fernando home, his stereo-tic collection and alpaca sweaters.

Sandy will not endorse liquor and cigarettes commercially. But he will continue his shoe-business career in television and Miami and Las Vegas night clubs.

He may never go to Brooklyn but should he happen to drop in during the next three days these bleeding Gowanis gloomers would likely build a monument to him in the housing development that was Ebbet's Field. They figure any pitcher who strikes out Mickey Mantle and beats 'em twice in a four-game world series owes, deserves it—or at least a place on a par with the Statue of Liberty.

There are some nights when nobody can beat Eagle Day. He proved it again Friday night, much to the chagrin of Ottawa Rough Riders.

Day hurled Ottawa under an avalanche of pass completions to lead the Stampeders to a 47-17 victory in a Canadian Football League interlocking game at Calgary.

Day's aerial wizardry, which saw him completely shred 25 of 33 passes for 383 yards and two touchdowns, gave the West a split in the night's CFL action. Hamilton Tiger-Cats used two last-minute touchdowns to dump the Blue Bombers 26-14 at Winnipeg.

The win before about 16,000 fans propelled Calgary into sole possession of second place in the Western Conference, two points ahead of Saskatchewan Roughriders and three in front of Winnipeg.

Ottawa, in losing for the first time in six games, dropped into a share of first place in the Eastern Conference with Hamilton.

LOSS EARLY LEAD

Rough Riders took an early lead on a 15-yard field goal in the first quarter by Moe Racine. After two minutes had elapsed.

Calgary's six touchdowns were scored by halfback Lovell Coleman, with two, Day, fullback Ron Lancaster and Fred Manning and halfback Jim Dillard. Five were converted by Larry Robinson, who also kicked a field goal and a single. Calgary's other points came on a third-quarter safety touch.

Quarterback Russ Jackson and halfback Ron Stewart, both Canadians, scored Ottawa touchdowns. Racine converted both.

Day hit Manning with two passes good for 40 yards as Stampeders drove 75 yards in five plays to their first touchdown by Coleman.

Passes to Manning for 33 yards and to Dillard for 11 featured Stampeders' 66 - yard march for touchdown number two by Dillard.

PASSES PAY OFF

A 25-yard pass to Lunsford at the Ottawa five was the key play in a 90-yard, 11-play march for Calgary's fourth touchdown. Their fifth touchdown rumble was highlighted by a 15-yard pass to Stan Mikawos, injured and a 34-yard toss to Dillard.

Four straight pass completions by Day resulted in Coleman's last touchdown by Manning.

Calgary recorded 28 first downs to Day's single shy of the 29 yards rushing. Rough Riders had 18 first downs on 133 yards rushing and 227 through the air. Jackson completed 10 of 25 attempts and Stewart was one for one.

Stampeders two front - line guards, Bill Cornelsen and Tony Pajaczkowski, received leg injuries in the fourth quarter, and defensive tackle Ted Urness left the game after taking a hard blow.

Tigats deflated a crowd of 15,340 by notching two touchdowns a within 12 seconds in the last minute of play. Ron Howell went over from the two-yard line for the first and linebacker Zeno Karcz picked up an errant lateral on the resulting kickoff for the second.

COLLECTS TWO TDs

Pace tallied two touchdowns for Hamilton while Garney Henley got the other. Dave Viti kicked two converts.

Halfback George Fleming, the WFC's top point-getter, led Winnipeg with eight points on two field goals, a single and a convert. End Fair Hall Hanson scored Winnipeg's touchdown.

A dazzling return of kickoffs and running called by quarterback Bernie Faloney spelled the difference for Hamilton. Tigers, Cats picked up 23 first downs on 113 yards rushing and 227 yards passing. Faloney completed 15 of 25 passes.

Blue Bombers earned 15 first downs on 231 yards rushing and 140 passing. Quarterbacks Kenny Ploen and Jack Jacobs and halfback Leo Lewis completed 21 of 32 passes for Winnipeg.

The loss pushed the defending Grey Cup champion Blue Bombers into a poor position in their struggle for the third and last playoff spot in the WFC. Saskatchewan holds that spot at present and have one game in hand with four games left in the regular schedule to Winnipeg's three.

Canadians Third Says Mr. Selke Sr.

MONTREAL (CP)—Frank J. Selke, managing director of Montreal Canadiens, indicated Monday night he figures the Canadiens stack up as third-place club in this year's National Hockey League race.

"My guess is we won't finish first or second," he said at a press conference, picking Toronto's Stanley Cup Maple Leafs to finish first.

Three new directors of the team were announced. They are Marcel Pariault, president of General Trust of Canada; Louis LaPointe, president of Sir George-Etienne Cartier Corporation, which operates Montreal's Place des Arts cultural centre; David Molson, member of the family holding controlling interest in the club.

They succeed the late William Northey, Senator Donat Raymond and Air Vice - Marshal Adelard Raymond.

It was also announced that Jean-Guy Morissette will be carried by the Canadiens as a backup goaltender behind Lorne (Gump) Worsley.

The Canadiens have Charlie Hodge, Cesare Maniago and Ernie Wakeley available at farm clubs as goaltending replacements but needed a spare to make road trips with the club.

Jean-Guy Talbot and Henri Richard have been named assistant team captains by the players, replacing the retired Dickie Moore and Tom Johnson, picked up in the off-season draft by Boston Bruins.

Jean Beliveau remains captain. Tie club's other assistant is boldover Bernie Geoffrion.

Fullmer May Try Comeback

TEANECK, N.J. (AP)—Gene Fullmer is fighting the toughest battle of his life and it's got him hearing bells.

A little voice keeps telling him to "try one more fight" and a much bigger voice—Mrs. Fullmer—wants him to call it quits.

While he tries to make up his mind, the former world middleweight champion, now 32, hides his time working on his mink farm and quarter - horse ranch in West Jordan, Utah, and training his brother Merv, for a future shot at the title he once held.

Don, 36, gets a chance to take a step up Wednesday night when he meets Jose Torres in a 10-rounder at the Teaneck Armory. Gene will be in his corner.

"I've been trying to talk myself into retiring ever since the last fight against Dick Tiger in August," Gene said, "but that little voice keeps telling me to try it once more.

"I'm still undecided. In a way, I'd like to try it again but my wife and family are against it. I haven't set a definite date when I'll make up my mind but it won't be too long.

"I haven't been in a ring or had a pair of gloves on since the last Tiger fight. I've been keeping busy on my two ranches."

Only Dodger Selected
Koufax Is Top All-Star Choice

By BEN OLAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Sandy Koufax, Los Angeles Dodgers' pitching marvel, led the way again Monday, this time heading the voting for the annual Associated Press major league All-Star baseball team.

The fireballing left-hander, a 25-game winner during the regular season, was named on 68 of the 71 ballots by baseball writers. He was the only Dodger player chosen for the All-Star team. The voting was based on regular season performances.

St. Louis Cardinals placed three on the all-stars, first baseman Bill White, third baseman Ken Boyer and shortstop Dick Groat.

New York Yankees and San Francisco Giants each placed two men. Second baseman Bobby Richardson and catcher Elston Howard represented the Yanks while outfielder Willie Mays and Juan Marichal, a right - handed pitcher, made it for the Giants. Outfielders Hank Aaron of Milwaukee and Al Kaline at Detroit rounded out the 10-man squad.

The Dodgers, who swept the Yankees in four straight series games, had three players on the second team. They were second baseman Jim Gilliam, shortstop Maury Wills and outfielder Tommy Davis, the National League batting champion.

Others named to the No. 2 team were outfielder Carl Yastrzemski, the American League batting king, and first baseman Dick Stuart, both of Boston; outfielder Vada Pinson and right - handed pitcher Jim Maloney of Cincinnati Reds, third baseman Ron Santo of Chicago Cubs, catcher Earl Battey of Minnesota Twins and southpaw pitcher Warren Spahn of Milwaukee Braves.

They had tickets for the fifth game of the World Series, but there wasn't any fifth game. N.H.L. President Foresees 'Grand Season'

By MARVEN MOSS

MONTREAL (CP)—Clarence Campbell, a retired soldier given to outbursts of effusiveness, says "by every known standard this has to be a grand season" for the National Hockey League.

But at the same time he says the six-club circuit he has directed as president since 1946 still considers expansion something of an enigma at this point.

The 58 - year - old lawyer from Fleming, Sask., commented on the NHL's outlook in an interview.

"Advance indications are, if anything, better than last year," he said, drawing a comparison with the NHL's biggest season, when total attendance surged to 2,590,000 for the 210-game schedule.

"The balance of competition dictates the gate. It has to be a good year when the show shaped up the way it does now. Our two bottom teams of last season (New York Rangers and Boston Bruins) have both strengthened themselves considerably."

SEES IMPROVEMENT

He said there has been an over-all improvement at the box office — with one exception — each season since 1954-55. But he shied away from a prognostication on attendance.

"We reached 90 per cent of our capacity seating capacity the six rinks last year. That's pretty much saturation. You just don't go higher than that. And when you're talking figures it's contingent on how the race goes and many other factors."

Turning to expansion, the NHL president said the board of governors "are not the league needs a broader geographic base."

"But we don't want to destroy the structure by trying to make it bigger simply for the sake of size. We want good solid partners who can do what we are doing."

To expand, he said, the NHL would have to go to eight teams "and there are just not two contiguous cities now equipped to produce the kind of hockey we have."

He said the league is striving, instead, to "improve conditions that produce an ultimate expansion on a solid level."

Four Dodgers Were 'Ailing'

"Sick" Pitchers Beat Yankees

By JACK HAND

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As Ralph Houk might have muttered to Joe Cronin, it was a good thing the Dodgers weren't healthy.

Sniffles, virus, sore arm, pulled muscle and all, the Dodgers shocked Hook's proud New York Yankees with a four-straight knockout punch that brought joy to Los Angeles.

The Dodgers celebrated with champagne Sunday night and awoke Monday morning with the oh-be-joyful splick of men who can expect $13,000 cheques in the mail.

"We broke up the Yankees," was the victory cry at Walter Alston's while the chastened Alston while the chastened Yankees were bustling home, licking their wounds.

It developed that Koufax, the World Series star and two-time winner, had been pitching Sunday's 2-1 clincher with an open abscess between the toes of his left foot where a soft corn had torn loose.

The whole pitching staff—Koufax, Johnny Podres and Don Drysdale — was nursing heavy colds and Willie Davis had suffered a pulled muscle in his left thigh before the last game.

PITCHING TOPS

The series was dominated completely by the pitching. The Yanks had a sorry team batting average of .171 and the entire staff had an earned run average of 1.00. The mighty Yankees, their home run power were able to score only four runs in four games, a record low only for the 1905 Philadelphia Athletics who were shut out three times by Christy Mathewson and once by Ironman Joe McGinnity in a five-game set with the old New York Giants.

The batting averages tell the whole story. Tony Kubek, .148; Bobby Richardson .214, Tom Tresh .200, Mickey Mantle .133, Roger Maris .200, Joe Pepitone .154, Clete Boyer .077. Only Elston Howard at .333 was able to maintain any consistency.

Although the Dodgers batted only .214, Tommy Davis hit .400 and Moose Skowron .385.

Trenton Defeats Quinte

By ROBERT SNEZJELLA

Trenton seniors won a one-sided 30-0 victory over Quinte Saints in Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. play at Quinte yesterday afternoon.

Trenton struck early, after only four minutes of the first quarter, when Doug Davis completed a drive by going for a two yard touchdown. The convert attempt was blocked.

Quinte gave up the ball soon after the kickoff and Trenton took over. Jim Clement ran 40 yards down the field and 10 more on the next play. But the drive was stopped on the Quinte 15 yard line and the Trenton squad had to be content with a single.

Again the Trenton defence forced Quinte to kick and Trenton started things rolling with a eight yard gallop. Clement ran for 15 and then 6 yards. On the last play of the quarter Davis scrambled six yards for a major. The convert was no good.

In the second quarter, play tamed down, as the ball went back and forth with no scoring. The score after the first half was 13-0 in favor of Trenton.

In the third quarter Trenton drove 40 yards before being stopped and Victor Witriak kicked his second single.

After a first down was made Quinte was forced to punt. The kick was short and Trenton had the ball on the Quinte 40 yard line. Aided by a penalty, Trenton drove to the Quinte two yard line where Tom Gauthier drove over for the touchdown.

On the first Quinte play Rick Jill of Trenton intercepted a partially blocked pass. Then Trenton fumbled and Howard Yake of Quinte grabbed the loose ball. After getting a first down Quinte had to kick. Quinte tried desperately to get on the score sheet but gave up the ball after three incomplete passes. The last play of the game was a 35-yard run by Jim Clements of Trenton.

In the junior game Trenton won a closely fought 23-18 victory. Pat Crandall made two touchdowns and a single and Pete Wilhelmy had a major. Randy Wilson kicked a convert and a field goal for the winners. For the losers it was Grant Vandervoort with two majors and Eric Emerson with one.

Moira Shades BCI 14-7

By ROBERT WILLIAMS

A weakened B.C.I. offence and a determined Moira defence combined with two interceptions and a steal, gave Moira a well-deserved 14-7 victory.

The wind played a big factor in the game with neither team being able to move the ball through the air.

Moira's first play from B.C.I's. 35 Ron Faulkner passed to Carmen Milligan for a T.D. The convert was missed. Neither team was able to move and traded punts the rest of the quarter.

L. Adams got B.C.I's. first point with a 45-yard punt. Following a sequence of plays by both teams Faulkner of Moira intercepted a pass on his 25-yard line and carried it to B.C.I's. 40, where Allair got it back for B.C.I. Bill Lang then intercepted another pass and took it to B.C.I's. one, where Ian Glenn went over for the major. The convert was missed. Again punts were traded for the rest of the half.

In the 2nd half John Miller of B.C.I. took the ball for runs of 10 yards, and 15 yards, to score B.C.I's. first touchdown. The point after was no good.

Runs by Lang and Faulkner moved the ball to B.C.I's. 15 where Long attempted a field goal and settled for a point.

Long runs by B.C.I's. Ridley were stopped only by the alert defence of Moira.

B.C.I's. hopes were crushed in the last five minutes of play when quick-thinking J. Rutherford of Moira stole the ball out of L. Adams' hands. Play ended with Lang kicking a single point.

Quinte Hand-Gun Meet

TOP SCORER — Henry Tom, who registered the high score of the day, a fine 267, receives the Don Bell Trophy from Eric Smith following the annual Quinte Hand-Gun League fall shoot. Looking on is chairman Frank Allin.

Trenton Club Wins Title

The Trenton Handgun Club pulled out a narrow victory over two Belleville teams to capture the annual Quinte Hand-Gun League's fall shoot championship this weekend.

The meet was held at the Amelissburg outdoor range and was classed as the most successful held to date by league officials.

Montreal Canadiens unveil the little round man, Gump Worsley, and Boston Bruins take the wraps off their revamped defence in the 1963-64 National Hockey League opener tonight in Boston.

Worsley was the key acquisition by the Canadiens in a multi-player trade with New York which sent goaltender Jacques Plante to the Rangers.

In the same deal Montreal also got forwards Dave Balon and Leon Rochefort.

Canadiens have some old time firepower in Boom Boom Geoffrion, Jean Beliveau and Henri Richard, although Dickie Moore has retired.

The question mark for the Montreal "powerhouse" is defence. Jean-Guy Talbot, ace of Worsley's supporting cast, is followed by J. C. Tremblay, Jean Gauthier, youngsters Jacques Laperriere and Terry Harper, plus Marc Reaume, an American Leaguer who has had previous NHL shots with Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings.

KEY TO DEFENCE

Ironically, one of the keys to Boston's hopes for a stronger defence is Tom Johnson, drafted from Montreal. Johnson is the central figure on the defence corps with Leo Boivin. They will work with Nellis, yearling Teddy Green and Ed Westfall. Rookie Don Awrey and veteran American League defenceman Bob McCord round out the group.

Another draftee, Andy Hebenton, joins ex-Ranger mate Dean Prentice as solid two-way forwards whom Boston coach Milt Schmidt hopes will give the club more back-checking.

In another move, Schmidt has dumped ex-defenceman Doug Mohns to a centre.

Boston, mired in last place for the past three seasons and out of the playoffs for the last four, is staking everything on goalie Ed Johnston who won the Job last year. Schmidt is abandoning platooning of goalies.

HAWKS MEET HABS

Chicago Blue Hawks open at home Wednesday against New York and Detroit is at home Thursday to Chicago. Defending champion Toronto opens at home Saturday against Boston. L. e. Montreal Monday night whipped Rochester Americans 6-0 in an exhibition at London, Ont. Dick Duff led the Leafs with two goals against their American League farmhands.

The Hawks are still without Ali - Star centre Stan Mikita. Mikita, 23, met with general manager Tommy Ivan Monday at Chicago without success. They'll meet again today to try and reach a contract agreement.

Mikita, who received a reported $15,000 last season, is seeking a raise "based not only on my scoring but what I think my value to the club is."

Last season he had 31 goals and 45 assists.

No A. L. Club Like Them

Yankee Dynasty Not Crumbling

By JACK HAND

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Is the New York Yankee dynasty crumbling? Do four straight defeats by Los Angeles Dodgers mean the end of an era for Mickey Mantle and company in the American League?

As much as some Yankee haters would have you believe it, this is hardly the case. The Yanks breezed to the pennant by 10½ games over the Chicago White Sox although Mickey Mantle played only 65 of the 162 games and Roger Maris appeared in only 90. They probably will do it again next year.

Perhaps the example set by the Dodger pitching staff will encourage the rest of the league to take out after the Yanks after this damaging blow to their pride and prestige. Pipe-hose—but don't count on it.

The myth of Yankee invincibility really is a myth. Sandy Koufax, Johnny Podres and Don Drysdale proved the point, holding the Yanks to a .171 batting average.

The only trouble is that no American League team has a shutting staff like that. No club in the American League has the potential to challenge the Yanks.

FORD IS CAPABLE

So Whitey Ford is getting along in years. Still, the stocky lefthander is only 34 and capable of a 24-7 record in the American League. In the final series game the Dodgers had two whole hits and one unearned run off him.

Take the other starters. Al Downing, only 23, whipped through the league with a 12-6 record after moving up from the Richmond farm club June 7. Jim Bouton, moved into the starting rotation May 12 after spending time with the bullpen, wound up with a 21-7 record. Ralph Terry, relegated to relief work in the early season, came on strong in 1962, had a 17-15 record and led the club in complete games with 18.

And the Yankee infield of Joe Pepitone, Tony Kubek, Clete Boyer has no real challenger in the American League. Few would trade a Tom Tresh-Mickey Mantle-Roger Maris outfield for any other in the league.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Northern Dancer, Windfields Farm's sturdy two-year-old colt, picked by many to be a top contender for Saturday's $40,000 Canadian Futurity, didn't run to his usual pattern in the featured Bloordale Purse Monday at Woodbine Race Track.

But the son of Nearctic recovered from a slow start and after battling Northern Flight down the long stretch posted a length victory. After those two No. One.

Brian Wilson fired 196 to win class No. two honors. Roger Redner topped class No. three with a 116 score.

The meet ended the outdoor shooting season here.

Darkness Halts Work Fire Game

Darkness took a hand in the Interdepartmental softball league finals last night, during the series' sixth game after five innings with Firemen leading Public Works 13-12.

Since all games must go a full seven innings, the game was thrown out and will be played again tonight at an earlier starting time, 5.15, at the CNRA Park.

Public Works led the four-of-seven series three games to two and appeared to have last night's tilt, and the title, wrapped up early. Public Works led 8-0 after two frames and 12-4 after four. Firemen scored nine runs in the fifth to take the lead before darkness arrived.

The Firemen had piled up 16 hits and committed five errors. Lyle Wannamaker belted a home run and two doubles, Ray Reid a homer and three singles and Danford a triple and double, to pace the attack.

The Works had eight hits, G. Smith getting a pair and Bill Pearce a double, and piled up seven walks compared to none for the Firemen. They had but one miscue.

Going to Europe Great Experience Says Wagner

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Why did Robert Wagner abandon himself from Hollywood for two years?

"Well, my career wasn't exactly going great guns there," he explained. "My marriage to Natalie (Wood) had broken up and I had a couple of pictures that I could do in Europe. It seemed like a good time to leave."

Four pictures and a marriage later, he is back in town, and he seems a different figure from the handsome hero over whom the fan magazines once swooned.

"Yes, I think I've changed," he admitted. "You can't go through analysis without finding out something about yourself. It helped me greatly—that is, I learned to help myself; psychiatrists can't do that for you.

"Going to Europe was a great experience for me, too. I lived in London and Rome, and I drove a car all over the continent. It was a different world to me, and I was exposed to people who helped me think. Like Jean-Paul Sartre, a tremendous intellect. And Vittorio de Sica, who gave me great insight as an actor."

NEW ROLE

The extent of Wagner's maturity is demonstrated in his first role after returning from abroad. He is appearing as The 11th Hour as a slick car salesman whose life is blighted when his fake fur is burned into a gruesome mask.

"I took the part because I thought it had something to say," the actor remarked.

Wagner and his second wife, Marion Dennis, have settled in a Tarzana, Calif., house, and he indicated that he is back to stay. "California is my home; I like it here," he said. But he is grateful to the European experience for giving his film career a new boost.

During the past years he made the multiple-star Longest Day; The War Lover with Steve McQueen; The Condemned of Altona with Sophia Loren, Maximilian Schell and Fredric March; and The Pink Panther with David Niven and Peter Sellers.

In Ten Years, Says Jansson

Sees Swedes In Cup Play

By PAUL RINSTRAND

TORONTO (CP)—Ulf Jansson, a Swedish sports writer, left for Stockholm Monday positive that he will return to North America some day for a unique Stanley Cup playoff series.

Jansson believes his country will challenge for the National Hockey League's championship trophy, making pro hockey a truly international sport.

"We should be able to field a team of NHL calibre in 10 years," said Jansson in an interview. "Professional ice hockey in Sweden is just around the corner. I think that in five years we will be halfway there. Players will work at jobs half a day and practice hockey half a day."

Jansson has been with New York Rangers during the last month acting as an interpreter for Ulf Sterner, his protege who will undergo a five-game trial with New York after the start of the regular season.

"I've got the best hockey player in Europe," says Rangers general manager Muzz Patrick. "Sterner is a good prospect."

HAS NHL LOOK

"But he has to learn about checking," said Jansson. "When the offensive team is on the ice, Sterner is one of the best players. But he must learn to use his size to check."

Jansson said hockey has become the No. 2 sports attraction in Sweden just behind soccer. He says at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens Saturday night for the NHL All-Star game: "The new building didn't impress him.

"We have a new rink in Stockholm just built this year that seats 19,000," said Jansson. "It's filled for every game. And sometimes we play in the soccer stadium—there have been 30,000 watching two Swedish teams there."

Sterner, a member of the Swedish national team, is a hero in his country. But he has his mind set on moving to North America to play professionally.

"If he doesn't make it this year he will go home to play for Sweden," said Jansson. "But he will come back again next year to try again. He is only 22."

CREDITS REIGN

Jansson credits Eddie Reigin, a Canadian coach who went to Sweden five years, with the improvement in Swedish hockey.

"Before Reigle came they knew nothing about forechecking or anything like that," said Jansson. "Now these fellows (Sterner and two of his Swedish teammates, Carl Oeberg and Kjell Svensson who tried out with Toronto Maple Leafs) are the first results of Reigle's work."

Sweden now has 10 Canadian coaches.

Oeberg and Svensson returned to Sweden Sunday instead of accepting minor league contracts with Toronto.

The Trots

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Doemaker Rhythm, with Fred Goodreau of Dresden, Ont., in the sulky, turned in the best time of the night in capturing the third division of the featured $750 mile pace Monday night at Western Fair Raceway launched its 36-night fall season.

Doemer's Rhythm came from far back in sixth spot to register a half-length victory in 2:08.

Mighty Midnight, owned by Bob Hazzle of London, was piloted home first in the second division by Dunc Campbell in 2:08 3-5, second best time on the program.

Charley Forbes, owned by Jack Forbes of Ilderton, with Jacob Geisel Jr. steering, captured the first division in 2:10 3-5. Charley Forbes, overlooked in the betting, returned $21.10 to win.

Pat Spangle, the young Elmvale, Ont., reinsman, was the only driver to bring in two winners. He clicked with Dickie Ik in the second and Atom Lee in the ninth.

Will Put Four Players on Block

Dodgers Want To Add Two More Hurlers

By CHARLES MAHER

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Having just won the National League pennant by six games and the World Series by four, the Los Angeles Dodgers don't figure to rival the New York Stock Exchange in trading volume this winter.

"But we're not going to stand pat-either," says general manager Buzzie Bavasi.

Curiously, the first thing Bavasi wants to import is more pitching. The Dodger pitching staff had an earned-run average of 2.85, best in the major leagues this year and the best in the National League in 19 years.

But Bavasi would still like to come by another right-handed starting pitcher and another left-handed relief pitcher.

"You can always use another pitcher," he said. "We have some in the organization, but they may be a little young."

CHANGE EXPECTED

"There's a good chance the Dodger roster will change this month. The first eight teams in the National League are putting four players each in a pool set up Monday by the Baseball New York Mets and Houston Colts. It's not official but the Dodgers are expected to offer infielder Mary Breeding, outfielder Lindsay Lee Walls, relief pitcher Ken Rowe and first baseman Bill Haas.

Haas was in the Dodgers' farm system all season but counted against their 25-man roster after the new first-year player rule.

The Dodgers' could give up all four of the "pool players" or none, depending on how many they want to part with. The new Mets, Colts and Mets want to buy. The Dodgers are obligated to sell only one player, for $30,000, and the Mets and Colts are obligated to buy none. But all four could go for the same price if the Dodgers want to sell and the others want to buy.

There had been speculation relief pitcher Larry Sherry would be placed in the pool. But the guess is that the Dodgers think they could make a better deal for him in trade.

LIKES DODGERS

Bill Skowron also looked like a trade prospect after the World Series, but he hit .385 in the series and Bavasi said he was impressed.

"I love it here and I love the Dodgers," Skowron said after the Game 4 victory Sunday. "I don't want to leave."

Utility infielder Dick Tracewski also strengthened his chances in the World Series, playing all four games. A second and all four games at second base. He got a chance to start after third baseman Ken Mullen pulled a leg muscle and Jim Gilliam had to be shifted from second to third.

Bavasi said the Dodgers should be a contender in the

Moira Holds Harrier Meet

Moira Secondary School played host last night to cross country runners from B.C.I. and Norwood District High School in a meet held in conjunction with the B.C.I. Moira football game on Monday.

In the four races held, 39 runners competed for team honors. Moira runners won the intermediate and junior divisions; Norwood won the juvenile group and no school was declared winner of the senior section since none of the schools had sufficient runners to make up a team.

The senior race was won by Stan Woodcock from Moira who sprinted home in 11:10 just 3 seconds away from the course record for the senior group. All other age group records were broken as the runners are beginning to hit top form in preparation for the Quinte COSSA meet to be held at Norwood on Friday, October 18th, at 4 p.m.

Trojan Don Curron broke the juvenile record with a fine run finishing in 11:42, some 56 seconds better than the previous best mark. Moira junior, John Hayman, broke his age class record with a time of 11:20. Only record to go to a visiting runner was the intermediate class record Theo Vanwill of Norwood raced over the line in 11:32.

Following are the top three in each division:

11:10; K. English, N.D.H.S., Senior. — S. Woodcock, MSS, 11:10; K. English, NDHS, 12:00; C. McLaughlan, MSS, 12:26.

Intermediate — T. Vanwill, NDHS, 11:32; D. Bellwood, MSS, 12:20; T. Flindall, MSS, 12:30.

Tom Bailey retained his crown Saturday afternoon at Guy Park Bowling Lanes, Trenton, when he defeated Bill Richard. Bailey, winner of the five game qualifying round.

In the challenge match Bailey rolled 736-Jim's Place 3; for nice 923 triple. Richardson 307-260-211.

In the seven consecutive strikes jackpot, Carm Donato had six in a row, then picked a single. So it's still there for next Saturday afternoon, starting time 1.30.

17 Hits and Maybe's in 32 New Program This Season

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)— This is one of the television seasons 32 new programs have been launched.

Once a quiz show called 100 grand, sank almost immediately. A number of others are frail vehicles indeed and their chances for survival appear to be dubious.

This is the critical period when the public is making dialing decisions which traditionally direct their television interests for the entire season.

Based on one show—or at the most, two—my scorecard of hits, misses and "maybes" is almost evenly split, with 17 hits and maybes and 14 misses.

Probable hits are CBS' Danny Kaye and Judy Garland comedy hours and its Petticoat Junction situation comedy series, ABC's Jack and Mike, The Fugitive and Greatest Show on Earth are fast-paced adventure shows and the Fireside Theater is a dependable dramatic hour.

Among the "maybes" is Red Skelton's NBC's Big Valley, Hazel Bishop Show, Bob Hope Theatre and Espionage, and CBS' Great Adventure. ABC's Burke's Law may prove amusing. CBS' My Favorite Martian is on my hit list until I saw the second episode, which moved it to the maybe category. Lucille Ball is a funny man and may triumph over the scripts.

My misses include three new shows — CBS' East Side, West Side, and ABC's Channing and The Breaking Point. All seem pretentious and dreadful. Comment on developing points of view.

NBC's Grindl has Imogene Coca, that's about all, and NBC's Bill Dana Show promises to develop into a one-joke comedy series. CBS' Glynis is a boring, imitative farce. NBC's Harry's Girls needs some new writers—and some girls who can act. Neither ABC's Jerry Lewis nor Jimmy Dean seem a happy choice for their time spots—but at least Dean isn't offensive.

NBC's Temple Houston is a grade C western and The Lieutenant is military cake with a sugary icing. The only new show on ABC is for kids who like horror stories. Fury Travels of Jamie McPheters for those too young to enjoy Wagon Train.

NBC's Telephone Hour, on a new day but old time spot (10-11 p.m. EDT), is a handsome premier tonight, starring dancer Rudolph Nureyev and singers Richard Tucker and Anna Moffo.

Luba Makes His Movie Debut In Role which a Dolphin Every Boy Will Envy.

After appearing in every major dramatic show on television twelve-year-old Luba Halpin gets "introduced" once again this time to screen audiences in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's unusual motion picture, "Flipper", story of the extraordinary friendship between a boy and a dolphin.

A native of Astoria, Long Island, Luba first made a "professional" eight years ago when the director of a school in which he was studying music recommended him to CBS casting director, James Merrick. The latter was searching for a tot to appear with Natalie Wood in the Studio One production, "Miracle at Potter's Farm."

Young Luba displayed such natural talent in his acting debut that it was decided he should have special billing with Miss Wood and ... "Introducing Luba Halpin."

Today, the credits on "Flipper", starring Chuck Connors, also read ... "and introducing Luba Halpin." This time, Luba makes his first motion picture audiences in a role every boy will envy.

He plays the son of a Florida Keys fisherman who rescues an injured dolphin with which he establishes an extraordinary comradeship. Not only does he teach the dolphin to retrieve lures, to leap fishes and other objects, but the dolphin eventually permits him to ride on its back. The sequences in which Luba and Flipper romp and chase each other in the water are terrific and even fish together have to be seen to be believed.

Luba's success as an actor has failed to cause even a ripple in the life of the Halpin family. With his mother and father, he still lives in the same Astoria apartment, among the same neighbors he knew before becoming a celebrity.

Since baseball is Luba's favorite sport, he looked upon "Flipper" star Chuck Connors as a hero. Connors, a former big league baseball player before becoming an actor, batted a few home runs to become one of the major stars of the Pacific Coast League.

"Flipper" opens Thursday at the Park Theatre.

Three Jocks Hurt In Horse Spill

TORONTO (CP) — Three jockeys were sent to hospital for treatment of injuries suffered in a four-horse spill during the first race at Woodbine Race Track Monday.

John Burton of Rapid City, Iowa, and George Gubbins of Hamilton suffered concussion and small fractures of the thoracic vertebrae, small bones in the middle of the spine in the area of the sixth and seventh ribs.

Alex Wirk of Toronto suffered concussion. Dennis Terry of Vancouver was unhurt.

The accident happened as a field of 12 had completed the first half mile of the six-furlong event.

John Ker's Bine Poppet, with Wirk in the saddle, appeared to clip the heels of Pedersen and Varga's Acadian Lark and went down, dislodging Wirk.

The quick manoeuvre, Gubbins on Jij Rotanes, Burton on Chinese Deal and Dennis Terry on North Sky all came down after running into the fallen horse.

Mij Rotanes was destroyed.

GUARD ESCAPES

BERLIN (AP)—A 20-year-old East German corporal fled during the night to West Berlin through a subway tunnel he had dug nearby. The guard was in uniform and carried a submachine gun.

"We have lac zoning laws in this town, fellows, but I'm sure the city won't allow a sign on that lot."

Should Be Golden One

Howe Starts 18th Season

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty years have passed since the big 15-year-old left from Floral, Sask., went to Winnipeg to attend his first hockey camp.

Back home at Floral he had played every position and for five teams in one season. Now Gordie Howe was going to try his luck with New York Rangers.

It would have been a better story if this gangling youth had been an overnight sensation. Instead, he got homesick, Gordie, one of nine children, was just a country boy. He never before had strayed far from Floral.

Two years later, however, Gordie Howe was a pro hockey player and today he's in his 18th year with the Detroit Red Wings—and he's still a fixture in that town.

He's done a long way from Floral.

STARTS 18TH SEASON

When the Red Wings open their 1957-58 season Thursday night at home against the Black Hawks, Howe will be starting his 18th campaign. And this should be the golden one—the season in which he becomes the greatest scorer in the history of the game.

Perhaps the greatest right winger hockey has ever known, Howe goes into the season with 540 goals, four short of the record 544 scored by Maurice (Rocket) Richard during his career with Montreal Canadiens.

Now 33, Gordie's ambition is to play 30 seasons. Only one man, Dit Clapper of Boston Bruins, has ever played that long. The way big Gordie is going he may play 25. And the scoring records he leaves may never be equalled.

Howe already has played more games (1,139) than any man before him. He has a record 672 assists and a record 1,222 points. Six times he has been the NHL's most valuable player.

WON 6TH TITLE

Last season he won his sixth scoring title with 86 points, five more than runner-up Andy Bathgate of New York Rangers. He also shared the playoff scoring leadership with teammate Norm Ullman, each with 11 points. And he hasn't slowed up.

In 10 pre-season exhibition games this fall, Howe scored 14 goals. He hasn't been under 20 goals in the last 14 years and last season, his best in his career, he scored 38.

"If we ever get the right guy to play on a line with Gordie and Art Stratton, Gordie will score 40 goals this year," says Detroit defenceman Marcel Pronovost. "He isn't playing any different — they're just getting him the puck more. And you know what happens when Howe gets the puck."

Ryder Cup Play May Prove It

Which Has Better Ball ?

ATLANTA (AP)—The Ryder Cup matches this weekend will pit the best golfers the United States and Britain may decide more than which country produces the top professional golfers.

They may help prove which plays the better ball.

"I'm in favor of playing the American ball," said Arnold Palmer, the U.S. captain. "It won't be arbitrary, I'll let the fellows make up their own minds, but I think we should use the bigger ball."

"We'll stick with our own smaller ball," said Dai Rees, British captain, John Fallon, resolutely.

The proper size of the golf ball is a controversy which for years has been settled satisfactorily by the ruling fathers of the two gold-enshrined nations.

The U.S. rules call for a ball 1.68 inches in diameter—six-one hundredths of an inch larger than the ball approved by the Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews. The U.S. ball is also much, but golfers say the difference is tremendous. Rees is one of the few who can tell the difference in international matches, players have an option of which ball they use.

"I think the larger ball will sit up better on the heavy Berkshire turf," said Rees. "But Lake course, will play better out of traps and will be more manoeuvrable around the greens," said Palmer.

"We're accustomed to the smaller ball and would be foolish for us to change," insisted Fallon.

The British ball is designed to bore into the wind and hold the line better in the blustery conditions of British seaside courses. Even, Americans concede it can be hit farther and straighter, but they think it is harder to handle on short shots.

Weather shouldn't be much of a factor in the matches, scheduled to open Friday over the 6,980 - yard, par - 70 East Lake course.

SPORT BRIEFS

RIKES WINNINGS

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP) — Arnold Palmer's victory in the Whitemarsh Open invitational golf tournament added $2,000 to winnings in official PGA competition to $127,885. The figure, released today by the U.S. Professional Golfers' Association for all PGA tournaments only, showed Palmer more than $41,000 ahead of Jack Nicklaus in winnings this year.

JOINS COACHES

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bobby Vernon, former Washington manager, will replace Ron Norbey on the Pirates' coaching staff for next season, Pittsburgh manager Danny Murtaugh said Monday. Murtaugh also said he was reducing his coaching staff from six to four by releasing Virgil Trucks and Gene Baker.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids . . . and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of injured, inflamed tissue.

Most hemorrhoidal cases history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and greatly relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief was reported in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that sufferers' outlook was revitalized over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Skin-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and encourages growth of new tissue. Skin-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H relieves pain and makes defecation less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H. Supplied over-the-counter in a special applicator.

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money back.

Old-TimeMorse Telegrapher Retiring From Labor Union After Serving 46 Years

WASHINGTON (CP)—William L. (Bill) Allen, an old-time Morse telegrapher who figures he became living proof that Canadian workers are not dominated by United States unions, retires from the labor movement this month.

He's a Canadian and international president of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union.

Behind him is a 46-year career in the labor movement that began in the early 1900s when Morse operators were at their zenith and has continued through to their present-day struggle against the impact of automation.

Allen, 67-year-old native of Commock, Ont., who grew up in Regina, was international secretary-treasurer of the CTU for 13 years. He has been international president the last 22 years and will not stand for re-election at the CTU's annual convention starting Oct. 21 in Miami Beach.

Always a strong advocate of international labor unions, Allen looks to his own background in answering criticism of alleged U.S. domination of Canadian workers.

DON'T DISCRIMINATE

"The simple answer to this kind of propaganda is the fact that in practically all cases the majority of the members are in the United States and it is only logical that they would elect someone from among their own number, although there are many cases of Canadians being elected to international union office.

"In my 46 years as a member of the CTU I have never known an international labor union to discriminate against its members in Canada. On the contrary, it is my experience that international labor unions encourage and provide every opportunity for their Canadian members to administer their own affairs."

Allen got the bug to be a Morse operator while still a boy.

"For the old Morse code operators, there was something about it that got into your blood. Maybe it was the excitement; the chance to move about. I don't know. But they stayed with it—until automation got them."

Allen spent only a few years at Commock, a settlement just north of Guelph, Ont. His father was a transport man, hauling goods mostly by horse and wagon.

EARN ERRANDS

Bill had to get out early in life to help support the family. He left public school in Regina while in Grade 7 to shine shoes and run errands. In 1908 he took a job as messenger with Canadian Pacific Telegraphs.

He stayed with the firm for three years, then moved to Canadian Northern Telegraph Company in Regina at a salary of $20 a month. He switched back to Canadian Pacific Telegraphs the following year—in 1913—and worked at various clerical jobs while picking up telegraphy on the side.

His budding career was interrupted by three years' overseas service in the Canadian Army and he returned to work as a telegrapher in 1917. He joined the CTU that year and started his rise in union business. Allen was on CTU negotiating committees and held other union posts in Canada until 1926 when elected international secretary-treasurer.

During his 35 years as the union's secretary-treasurer and chief — with head offices in nearby Silver Spring, Md.— Allen participated in many union activities in Canada and the U.S. The CTU is affiliated with the AFL-CIO in the U.S. and the Canadian Labor Congress in Canada.

MEMBERSHIP FALLS

In 1934 he took part with committees of CTU representatives in Canada in opposing proposed federal government legislation that would have permitted the Canadian railway companies to amalgamate their telegraph services. The legislation was not passed.

In 1941 total CTU membership was 14,000, more than half of them in Canada. Under Allen's leadership, organizing drives in the United States increased the total to 45,000 by 1945. There were then about 6,000 Canadian members.

Automation, particularly in the U.S., cut heavily into the membership and it now stands at 28,000—23,000 in the U.S. and 5,000 in Canada.

"Morse telegraphers, like old soldiers, are fast fading away," Allen said. "The telegraph industry as I first knew it no longer exists. In fact, with all the talk of electronics, automation and space communications, I have had a growing conviction that I ought to get out of the industry) before I get thrown out."

He's giving up his $13,700-a-year job as union head to spend his retirement at Tampa, Fla., where he plans to devote his time to his two favorite sports—fishing and golf.

"And I'll be thinking of those cold winters up north. In the old days, I used to go up into northern Canada on trapping trips. I didn't mind sleeping out in 45 degrees below zero. Now even the thought of it makes me shiver."

Loves One; Engaged to Another

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS — Last December Bob gave me an engagement ring. I took it only because I did not want to hurt his feelings. I respect the guy very much, but Bob is not the type of guy that I could settle down with.

At the same time I took the ring from Bob I was going out with Eddie, and had been for a year and a half. I really love Eddie, but the big problem is that he is married and has four children. I knew at the time I went out with him that he was married. Last spring Eddie and I were going to break up, as I felt there was no future in it for me, but then he promised me that if I gave him a chance to get a divorce by this fall he would marry me as soon as possible. I would wait for Eddie regardless of how long it may take, but I am wondering if I should.

My parents and sisters are aware of the fact that there is someone other than Bob. I had a nervous breakdown some time ago and I believe this was largely due to the fact that I was worried about my private life. I have never had a chance to discuss it with anyone, and it all builds up inside me.

Now this week an old friend of mine drove over and asked me to go with him again. I told him about the situation I was in, and he can understand it all. I believe deep down I would very much like to go with Jack, to see if this would help clear Eddie out of my mind.

Honestly, Doris, I have never been so confused in my life. My sister tells me I cannot stand on my own two feet; that is why I have such a hard time making up my mind. — CONFUSED.

DEAR CONFUSED — Welcome to the club; I'm confused now too. There's nothing for it but to clear away the fog by signing off on both Eddie and Bob. If you want to avoid another breakdown, start telling the truth all round. Eddie, a married man, is no friend of yours to pursue you; you are no friend to Bob when you keep his ring under false pretenses. Any other Jack, or Harry, or Tom comes later.

CONSERVATIVES WIN EASILY IN N. S.

"Mac's" Illness Poses Question Of Leadership

Tories Confident Of Election Victory

CP from Reuters-AP

BLACKPOOL, England — Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's Conservative party — shaken by his sudden illness — opened its annual convention here today with a prayer for his health.

Rev. J. C. Handley Vaughan, vicar of Blackpool, prayed for doctors and nurses to restore Macmillan to full strength "in his hour of need."

Macmillan sent a message saying he deeply regretted being unable to address the meeting Saturday.

He said: "I have had to go suddenly into hospital for an operation. My wife and I are very sad that we cannot attend the conference at such an important juncture in the life of the party."

The message received with cheers by the audience, predicted another general election victory "in the spring."

The convention sent a message to Macmillan expressing "deep affection and admiration, and best wishes for a successful operation."

LEADERSHIP AN ISSUE

With some "Mac must go" sentiment in the party, the 69-year-old Macmillan's failure as prime minister and party leader had shaped up as "a key issue for the four-day meeting weeks before Tuesday night's surprise news that he had entered a London hospital for a prostate operation Thursday.

His doctor said he would not be fully active "for at least two or three months."

Macmillan's illness confused the situation, no one knew yet what effect it would have on the leadership issue.

The 4,000 delegates speculated whether the prime minister's illness would speed up the abolition of a successor or slow it down by eroding Conservative sympathy for Macmillan.

The Conservatives, who face a general election to be called by the prime minister sometime in the next 12 months, find their political fortunes at a low ebb. Many have been saying the leadership question should be settled before the question of the operation on Macmillan was known.

An early highlight of this morning's convention session was the great ovation the audience gave Macmillan's minister Lord Hailsham—one of the candidates for leadership—before delivering his 56th birthday today.

Macmillan's sudden illness came as a complete shock and

Caouette Loses Fight In Commons

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Real Caouette's Creditiste MPs lost their fight Tuesday in the Commons privileges committee for preference in the House of Commons over Robert Thompson's Social Credit group.

They immediately served notice they consider the committee's decision only the first battle of the campaign.

By a vote of 14 to 8 the committee adopted a proposal by Gerard Girouard, a Thompson supporter, to give preferred Commons seats to Mr. Thompson's 11-member group instead of to the 13 Caouette men who broke with Mr. Thompson in August.

The motion goes as a recommendation to the Commons later this week with another recommendation that Speaker Alan Macnaughton be given a legal opinion by Dr. Maurice Ollivier, Commons law clerk, on what privileges are to be given the Creditistes.

A further provision recommends that the 17-member New Democratic Party be seated as the second - ranking opposition group, beside the Progressive Conservatives. This spot now is shared by the Creditiste and Thompson factions of Social Credit.

LISTS PRIVILEGES

Apart from seating, the privileges sought by the Creditistes include a $4,000 annual party leader's allowance for Mr. Caouette, added to his $18,000 pay, an executive assistant and two secretaries for him at public expense, choice of parliamentary office space and power to name Creditiste MPs to official, all-party delegations traveling abroad at public expense.

The committee's decision, after a welter of defeated amendments, was followed by a Creditiste caucus meeting which issued a statement saying the committee decided something beyond its terms of reference and a decision was "still awaited" on recognition for the Creditiste parliamentary group.

The Creditiste's post - caucus statement declared the group will press for further committee study of last week's statement by Speaker Macnaughton.

Mr. Macnaughton had asked Commons guidance on the seating problem and matters arising from it. The Commons sent the statement to the committee.

TORONTO (CP) — Caouette said Tuesday his Ralliement des Creditistes in Parliament would be satisfied with official recognition of the group away 13-member group as a party separate from Robert

Pension Boost Approved

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons put its stamp of approval on a $10 old age pension boost Tuesday night, clearing the decks for a major debate today on the government proposal for a federal trusteeship over five maritime unions.

The legislation, unprecedented in Canadian labor history, would be under a three-man board empowered to root out lawlessness and corruption on the strife-ridden Great Lakes labor front.

The last hope of a private, union-sponsored trusteeship was dashed Tuesday when the Canadian Labor Congress announced that no effective plan could be worked out with its United States counterpart, the AFL-CIO.

Labor Minister MacEachen will put legislative machinery into motion when he opens debate in the Commons on his resolution dealing with the trusteeship legislation.

Once the resolution is approved, the actual measure setting out the powers and duties of the trustees will be introduced.

The CLC said it had put forward a plan for an effective union trusteeship over the Seafarers' International Union of Canada, but that "the other trade union priorities could not be convinced to co-operate."

WILL CO-OPERATE

The 1,050,000 - member CLC, central labor body in Canada, promised to co-operate with the government to clean up what it called "an intolerable situation" in the maritime field—subject to government approval of its temporary trusteeship legislation.

The federal trusteeship was first proposed in July by Mr. Justice T. G. Norris after a year-long investigation of labor strife and shipping disruptions on the Great Lakes. The Vancouver jurist listed three trouble-spots on the SIU and its American - born president, Hal C. Banks.

Through its trusteeship, the government will take over control and management of five unions representing some 21,000 seamen, firemen, marine engineers and deck officers. Four of

RCMP Join District Police In Costly Wastepaper Hunt

With the RCMP reinforcing local detectives, the costliest wastepaper hunt in the Quinte district is under way today.

With more bogus $10 bills discovered yesterday, the big question now is: How many are still in circulation in Belleville-Trenton area, unwittingly being cashed as legal tender.

News that the district had been canvassed by phony money operators last weekend broke Monday, when 11 counterfeit $10 bills were discovered in Belleville. Yesterday, as merchants and bankers warily began checking through receipts, 12 more bills came to light in Belleville and 15 in Trenton.

To date that makes $290 in scraps of paper found in bank drawers and cash registers. Some of yesterday's discoveries — at least today, when the counterfeits were originally passed, indicate that the bills have changed hands more than once.

"The trouble is, we can never tell just how many are still going the rounds," said one senior police officer.

Yesterday, RCMP officers from the Belleville district detachment of the force, joined in the investigation.

They had reports that indicated the bogus buck-passing in the Belleville-Trenton area has been part of a province-wide pattern.

Earlier, forgeries with the same serial numbers began coming to light in Barrie, Orillia and Owen Sound.

Locally, police are requesting all persons to contact them immediately they recognize among $10 bills in their possession these numbers:

Health Forces Macaulay To Resign Cabinet Posts

TORONTO (CP) — Ill health has forced one of Ontario's most vibrant political personalities out of the provincial cabinet.

Robert William Macaulay, only 42 years old last May, gave up his dual portfolio of energy resources and of economics and development Tuesday on his doctor's advice.

The resignation came less than three weeks after an overwhelming election victory by the Progressive Conservatives which he had been instrumental in fashioning.

It is a very sad moment, said Premier Robarts, announcing the resignation at a cabinet meeting. "We were very close personal friends."

Mr. Robarts named John Simonett, 52, minister without portfolio and his automobile dealer from Fronteac-Addington, as new minister of energy resources and temporarily gave charge of the economics and development ministry to Provin-

U. N. Will Send Mission Soon to South Viet Nam

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—A UN fact-finding mission is expected to leave for South Viet Nam to investigate charges that President Ngo Dinh Diem's regime is violating the rights of Buddhists.

The assembly agreed Tuesday to dispatch a mission to be appointed by UN President Carlos Sosa - Rodriguez of Venezuela with instructions to report to the 111-country body as soon as possible.

Consent came without a formal vote after behind-scenes talks succeeded in getting the Soviet Union to drop a rival proposal for a UN investigation.

Under the agreement, Chile and Costa Rica also withdrew a proposal that an inquiry be launched. This left the way clear for Sosa-Rodriguez to accede to the Diem government's request that a mission be sent. UN sources said he would start lining up the group today.

Informed sources said Sosa-Rodriguez probably would name seven members, including three

Dispute Not Near Solution

By GEORGE PRAIKOR

MONTREAL (CP)—After six days of mediation, the longest shoremen's strike that has shut the St. Lawrence River ports is back where it was in the beginning.

Negotiators for shippers and longshoremen could not reach an agreement Tuesday night on a new contract, and the federal mediator, Judge Irene Lippe gave up and put the problem back into the hands of union members of the Shipping Federation of Canada.

Because it is a strike that is hurting the Canadian economy, it is also in the hands of Ottawa.

Meanwhile, the strike that is holding up the shipment of 60,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat to Russia entered its sixth day.

SETS OWN TERMS

Judge Lippe, announcing the discouraging end to what had seemed until the last minute a hopeful series of negotiations, announced she will not make a report to the strike by 3,800 members of the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC) in Montreal, Quebec City, Trois-Rivieres and Sorel.

The ILA has called a morning meeting to consider the proposals, and the shipping federation called an afternoon meeting.

The strike, begun last Friday, seemed on the verge of settlement several times Tuesday as sources close to the closed-door negotiations kept indicating that broad areas of agreement in principle had been reached.

At nearly 1 a.m. today, Judge Lippe announced that because of the "total impossibility of a voluntary understanding," he felt it his duty as federally-appointed mediator to submit his own proposals of settlement.

SUGGESTS 10 CENTS

He suggested in his report to Labor Minister MacEachen that the longshoremen get a 10-cent increase in basic wages in each year of a three-year contract.

Other suggestions were for the payment of double-time for work between midnight and 8 a.m. and a minimum of two hours pay for work hailed but bad weather, both beginning in

Increase Number Of Seats By 12 Over Last House

Liberal, NDP Leaders Defeated in Election

By IAN DONALDSON

HALIFAX (CP) — Robert Lorne Stanfield, who led the Progressive Conservatives from the wings of Nova Scotia's political stage to the spotlight, received what amounted to a standing ovation from the province's voters Tuesday with a walk-away victory in the provincial election.

One opposition party was obliterated and another so riddled it can hope only for bit parts in the next legislature.

The leaders of both the Liberal and New Democratic parties were defeated as the Conservatives increased their strength in the House by 12.

Final standings:

	1963	1956
Prog. Cons.	39	27
Liberals	14	15
NDP	0	1
Total	43	43

Stanfield, who became the first Conservative leader to win three consecutive elections in the province, started his climb in 1948 when he was named to head a party that had no members in the House.

FIRST WON IN '56

The first victory for the party under his leadership came in 1956. Four years later he was returned.

The last comparable PC landslide in Nova Scotia was in 1925 when only three Liberals were elected. After the political fortunes changed hands and the Liberals held office for 23 years before falling in 1956.

Tuesday's crushing defeat 'for the Liberals, under freshman leader Earl W. Urquhart, followed a campaign in which most of the fireworks came from Liberal guns.

But the voters rallied behind the 49-year-old premier, giving his party a slight-majority lead in the popular vote over the 1960 result.

Mr. Urquhart, a member of the House since 1949 and heading the Liberals for the first time, was defeated in his home riding of Richmond.

Michael J. Macdonald, House Leader of the NDPs and their only member, was defeated in Cape Breton Centre. Only he held the seat since 1945 and was the dean of sitting members in the last House.

CAN'T FIND WORDS

Mr. Stanfield heard the results in his home town of Truro. He said it was "impossible to find words of gratitude."

Fresh from a five-week campaign in which he made long hours and travelled hundreds of

U.S. Claims Canada Not Acting Fair

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States in effect has accused Canada of hurting American efforts to market wheat abroad through its policy of selling Canadian wheat at a fixed price while the world price is rising.

Canada and the United States are the two major world wheat producers and exporters and their dealings have a major influence on the day-to-day world dealings.

As a result of the Canadian wheat policy, well - informed sources here say the U.S. has decided to go ahead on its own in an attempt to set world wheat prices. A high U.S. official claimed that Canada had failed to co-operate with the U.S. in establishing price-setting policies.

Informants said the latest Canadian - American blowup followed negotiations by Canada of a sale of some 800,000 tons of wheat to Japan at prices virtually guaranteed to remain unchanged for the next six months.

NOT CONSULTED

The United States is reported to have accused Canada of negotiating the Japanese wheat deal without consulting Washington and setting prices that left the U.S. with no alternative but to duplicate the Canadian price offer in negotiating future wheat sales to Japan.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman was reported to have become so infuriated when he learned of the Canadian deal with Japan that he ordered other officials in his department to reject a Canadian suggestion, made during the last few days, that the two countries raise the price of their wheat.

Canada went ahead and increased the price of wheat three cents a bushel Tuesday.

The American contend that Canadian-Japanese wheat deal

Flora Heads Out to Sea

Appears to Be No Danger to Florida

CP from AP-Reuters

MIAMI, Fla. — Hurricane Flora passed over sparsely settled islands in the Bahamas today and moved eastward into the Atlantic away from the United States mainland.

After one of the longest and deadliest rampages on record, the storm headed out to sea, but appeared to be no danger to Florida.

Top winds of 100 miles an hour battered Great Inagua Island, in the 750-mile British chain. The islands are about 500 miles southeast of here.

The weather bureau said winds of gale force were estimated 400 miles to the north and 150 miles to the south of the storm's eye.

It warned of dangerous winds, high tides and heavy rains in the southeastern Bahamas. Some of the islands are sitting-tracking stations of the U.S. Atlantic missile test range.

Flora moved off the northeast coast of Cuba Tuesday after pounding the island with winds and rain for five days. Nearly 60,000 persons abandoned flooded homes in Oriente and Camaguey provinces.

During the weekend the slow-moving hurricane devastated Haiti, leaving 3,200 persons dead and 100,000 homeless. Flora also killed 17 persons on the island of Tobago, off Venezuela.

With communications in eastern Cuba knocked out, there was no estimate of casualties as Fidel Castro's island.

Disaster survey teams reported a pressing need for clothing, shoes and medicine in interior villages of Haiti. Officials said 40 per cent of the country was devastated.

Village huts in the Negro country offered only flimsy resistance to the storm.

One pilot reported that hardly a human being, an animal or a roof could be seen when he flew over Haitian towns reported hit by the storm.

Churches, the largest buildings in each town, stood silent memorials to the tragedy.

Public Health Minister Gerard Philippeaux said some towns along the north and south coasts of the central portion of Haiti's southern peninsula—the country's farm belt — had "ceased to exist."

He said entire families were swept out to sea by swollen rivers.

Philippeaux said the worst hurricane in Haiti's history had affected 90 per cent of the rural population, representing more than 2,000,000 people.

The towns reported heaviest hit were Balnet and Cotes de Fer, on the southern coast of the peninsula and Anseaveau, Petite Riviere de Nippes and Miragoane on the peninsula's northern coast.

Seymour Celestin, secretary of Haiti's Red Cross, said Red Cross organizations in six countries have offered help.

Castro had a brief brush on an inspection trip of the storm-battered eastern provinces when planes swooped over his amphibious truck. Radio Havana said peasants tossed ropes to the distressed vehicle and hauled Castro and his party to shore.

In the United States, suggestions were made for direct aid to Cuba despite the break in relations between the two countries. The proposal came from Florida's U.S. senators as well as anti-Castro exile leaders.

The American Red Cross made a direct offer to its Cuban counterpart but said it has received no reply.

Wildcat Strike at Ford Plant Stops Production of 1964 Cars

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — A wildcat strike stopped work at the big Ford Motor Company plant here today.

Workers arriving for the day shift walked up on the job and set up picket lines. Officials of Local 707 of the United Automobile, Workers of America (CLC) declared the walkout illegal.

The union represents 4,200 workers at the plant.

Mr. Bruce Bruce, president of Local 707, said after a hastily called conference with the union's director and plant committee that pickets were being urged to return to work.

But, he said, the action did not expect much success in these attempts.

Work stopped at the plant, gearing for full production of 1964 models, when the 7 a.m. shift set up picket lines.

Union officials said they had received no official indication of the intended strike, but rumors had been circulating Tuesday night.

Pickets said plant workers were respecting the picket line, but they were letting supervisory and office personnel through.

One picket who declined to give his name said the men are fed up with the ever increasing speedup of the production line and supervision by United States experts.

Workers who protested or left their jobs during the stoppage were suspended, he said.

Don Carlson, company secretary and director of public relations, said the company has received no official indication of the reason for the strike.

"We won't know what it is until they make a statement," he said.

Mr. Carlson said the present contract is due to expire in late 1964.

Story of Brooklyn Mob Warfare Latest Number on Valachi Score

WASHINGTON (AP)—Joseph Valachi, ranking historian of Cosa Nostra, brings his crime chronicle up to the present today with a story of mob warfare in the streets of Brooklyn.

A dozen men have been cut down by gunfire or stabbed between February, 1961, and Aug. 9 in the highly publicized feud between the Gallo and Profaci gangs operating out of Brooklyn.

Valachi testified today before the Senate investigations subcommittee, Attorney - General Robert Kennedy said the murderous rivalry has caused enough concern in the publicity city crime story. Valachi told Cosa Nostra—that its ruling commission is considering stepping in.

Shootings, killings and beatings have been attributed to the battle between the two gangs. Lawrence Gallo, one of three brothers leading the Gallo outfit, was in the process of being strangled in a Brooklyn restaurant Aug. 20, 1961, when police happened in.

The men escaped and Gallo survived—only to land in jail where he is serving a four-year mouth term for falsifying an application for a federal housing loan.

Gallo, following the underworld's code of silence, refused to name his assailants.

In this fifth day of Valachi's testimony, the Senate subcommittee heard that also was to provide some inside facts about a "murder on contract" of Senator Eugene Talmadge in the 1950s.

U.S. marshals have received telephone warnings that Valachi would be shot and the hearing room bombed, planned to continue elaborate precautions instituted to protect him.

Tuesday's testimony rotated between Valachi and Deputy Chief Inspector John F. Shanley of the New York police.

They placed in evidence a list

Nothing to Attract Tourists To Area Jaycees Are Told

The Belleville area has no tourist attraction, and tourists would be reluctant to spend money in local stores if they were attracted, Belleville Jaycees were told last night. Speaking at the Junior Chamber of Commerce regular dinner meeting, Ernst Kneisel of the Hotel Quinte, said that in three larchures issued by the Provincial Department of Travel and Publicity, Belleville is mentioned in only one and that one mention is in the same sentence with Napanee and Trenton. Another brochure mentions the Quinte Peninsula, and the third describes motor tours which bypass the city through Madoc and Picton.

"The reason the city is ignored," he said, "is that there is nothing to attract tourists to the area." He suggested though that some form of tourist attraction might be built as a centennial project.

HAS RAW MATERIAL

His own preference, he said, would be a Victorian era village, to compete with Upper Canada Village at Morrisburg and with Indian Villages in other centres. The city already has, he said, the raw material for such a village.

There are plenty of Victorian houses in the city, he said, and some of them will be demolished within the next few years. These houses could be dismantled, labelled, and re-erected on Zwick's Island. There could be a collection of Victorian furniture and utensils to start with, he said, now on display at the county museum. With this as a start, a "Victoria Village" need cost the city little more than the labor charges.

TAKEN FOR GRANTED

A reconstruction of Victoria living would be of more interest, Mr. Kneisel added, than reconstruction of Indian days because the era had greater artistic wealth than the days of the pioneers. "We've always seen one wooden soup ladle you've seen them all," he said. But the Victorian era saw the beginning of most of the things we now take for granted as part of living — the electric lights, the telephone, trolley cars and the like. There is a tremendous wealth of interesting local material available for display, he said, because so many local fortunes were made during the Victorian era, and so many Belleville families of that time fitted out their homes with the finest of Victorian furnishings.

But even if a tourist attraction could bring more tourist trade to the town, Mr. Kneisel told the meeting, it might be of little value to local merchants. The way Front Street store personnel treat their customers, he said, "I wouldn't blame tourists for not spending a dime in the city." He told the Jaycees, of comments and complaints of rudeness he had received from Hotel Quinte customers, who went shopping on Front Street.

Two Suspects Plead Guilty To Burglary

A Belleville burglary — in which thieves looted over $400 worth of liquor and personal effects from a city contractor's home — was cleared up within 24 hours.

Metro Toronto police yesterday reported that two suspects were charged with possession of goods stolen last weekend from the home of J. G. Tatham, West Hampton Drive. The burglary was discovered Sunday and city police began investigations.

By Monday night Toronto police were holding William Vaughan, 18, and 17-year-old Herbert Brown on identical robbery charges. Both gave Toronto addresses. Yesterday they were remanded for sentence October 21st after appearing before a Metro magistrate. They also pleaded guilty to having an offensive weapon in a place other than their residences.

Vaughan and Brown were one of the four pistols missing in the Tatham burglary was found in their car here. A pair of axes. The rest, along with two rifles, were reported recovered at the home of one of the youths.

Renews Request For Sidewalk On Dundas West

Increased traffic along Dundas Street West, as the result of discount stores opening west of the city has made for a more dangerous situation for school children and a renewed request for a sidewalk on the north side of the street.

Alderman Jack Ellis at Monday's meeting of city council said that while the side along Dundas Street in the west end of the city had increased threefold and a sidewalk was now more than ever necessary.

Unfortunately, however, he said that property owners in the area for the most part did not want a sidewalk and if built would have to be constructed some other way than by the usual local improvement method.

Noting that grade school children use the street daily and that students from Albert College and the Ontario School for the Deaf also use it frequently, Alderman Ellis said the need for a walk was "very urgent."

Alderman Walter Elliott thought that Dundas Street itself should be widened as well as a sidewalk provided.

He said there were government grants availablis for work of this nature.

New Sanitary Storm Sewers Will Be Laid

The city public works department is continuing its program toward the elimination of storm water from the city sanitary sewers.

Monday council gave approval for the construction of new storm and sanitary sewers between Church and John Streets on Lettimer Street at an estimated cost of $8,800. Application will be made to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval of the work cost of the work to be included in the 1964 general budget.

The new sewers would replace a combined storm and sanitary sewer, which backs up following heavy rains.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell says the required work consists of a new eight-inch sanitary sewer and a 12-inch storm sewer. Full cost of the work would be the city's responsibility.

CHOOSE TRIAL BY JUDGE

QUEBEC (CP)—Rene Matte, 28, and his brother Jean-Paul, 32, both charged with possession of a plaque that disappeared from the Plains of Abraham Aug. 4, Tuesday chose trial by judge on the charges. The $200 plaque commemorated a 1939 visit by King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

Will Increase Purchase Reforestation Acreage

Recent legislation approved by Federal authorities at Ottawa will assist the Moira River Conservation Authority in increasing its acreage of forestation.

Under the Agricultural Rehabilitation Development Act, it is expected the Moira Authority will be able to increase annual purchases of reforestation property by about one third.

At the present the Authority land purchases average from 1,000 acres to 1,500 acres per year.

Under the Agricultural Rehabilitation Development Act scheme, the Federal and Provincial governments will pay 75 per cent of the approved costs of marginal and sub marginal lands purchased by Authorities for reforestation purposes.

The total amount approved for the Moira Authority for the next two years is $32,000. Of this amount the Authority would pay $8,000 and the Federal and Provincial governments $12,000 each.

Mr. Jim McLeod, secretary of the Moira Authority said the scheme would allow the Authority to purchase approximately one third more land for reforestation with the same local levy.

Application for assistance under the A.R.D.A. was applied for by the Authority some time ago.

"It will mean a lot to the Authority," Mr. McLeod said.

Marquis Will Show Paintings In This City

It was because of the picture frames that Fernando Alzamora de Albenia, Marquis de Gazna, is showing his paintings in Eaton's, in Belleville. The Marquis, a well-known Spanish painter and composer, brought some of his paintings to Canada for display at the Canadian National Exhibition. He fell ill though, and because of the illness, he missed the show. After he recovered he flew out to Picton, to rest and do some Canadian paintings.

Friends around Picton insisted, while he was there, that he arrange a show, and he agreed. There was no place in the town willing to show the paintings, but Eaton's in Belleville agreed to provide space for them. The show goes on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. About 21 paintings will be offered for sale.

A graduate of the Collegio de Bueras Artes de Madrid, and of the Conservatories of Paris and Madrid, the Marquis is the grandson of Isaac Albeniz, Spain's most famous composer.

PASS DEFENCE BILL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress completed action Tuesday on a $47,220,010,000 defence department appropriations bill, sending it to President Kennedy. The figure was a compromise of differing amounts previously voted by the two houses. The Senate passed the measure by voice vote after the House of Representatives had acted by a 335 to 3 role call.

Time, Money Lost in Accidents

Accidents in industrial firms, and manufacturing plants throughout Ontario cost great sums in lost earnings. They also are costing member firms in the Industrial Accident Prevention Association more than 20 million dollars annually, as well as inestimable production man-hours, according to General Manager R. G. D. Anderson.

In addition, many thousands of dollars are being spent annually for machinery guards, safety devices, warning signs and other devices in an effort to reduce accidents and save lives.

Despite the precautions, there were 56 fatal accidents in the plants of member firms of the I.A.P.A. during 1962. In addition, 26,104 compensation cases were reported from the 26,700 firms which comprise the I.A.P.A.'s membership.

"Last year the number of compensation cases over 1961 represented an increase of 10.7 per cent", Mr. Anderson pointed out. "Such a trend is a disturbing thing about the safety work of the Associations are the results obtained in the past 40 years. Temporary disability injuries have been reduced from 70 to 37 per 100 employees. Permanent disabilities have been reduced from about 8 to 5 per 1000 employees. Fatal accidents in our membership have been cut from 3 to less than 1 for every 10,000 employees."

October has been designated as "Safety Month in Canada" and employers and employees are uniting in a combined effort to curb the accident toll.

The prime objective is to make October an accident-free month. The I.A.P.A. is sending campaign literature, signs, slogans and other material to 12,500 Ontario firms employing 6 or more employees. Additional 15,000 smaller firms are being urged to participate in the drive. Nearly 15,000 retail outlets will receive posters. In all, a work force of more than 850,000 is being asked to take an active interest in the project.

Wildcat Strike Halts Work At Ford Co.

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — A wildcat strike today halted work at the Ford Motor Company big plant here as production lines were gearing for full output of 1964 models.

About 1,300 day-shift workers were stopped from entering the plant by about 500 pickets who barred the main entrance gates as they were to report to work around 7 a.m.

The United Automobile Workers of America (CLC), which bargains for most of Ford's 4,200 employees, called a meeting of union directors and the plant committee and declared the strike illegal.

Those Interested in Child Welfare Asked to Attend

TRENTON — On Wednesday, October 30, there will be a public meeting in the auditorium of C. E. Elizabeth School and all those Trenton citizens who are interested in child welfare ... asked to attend. The meeting is being set up by the Belleville branch of the Children' Aid Society.

At this meeting it is hoped to form a local committee to work with the Belleville representatives of the society and to find some way of financing the salary of a full - time or part-time case worker for the town.

For many years Trenton made a token grant of support to the Belleville district unit and in return, received the services of a caseworker. The grant, says the Belleville CAS head, was not meant to finance the Trenton services entirely, and from time to time the council would be asked for additional funds.

In the spring of 1961, the council of the day decided that the cost of the local operation was too high for the size of the job and the society withdrew all services except those required by the Courts. Since then the Belleville branch at Belleville has only dealt with neglected children in Trenton and with such unmarried parents as came to their attention at the Bellevue Hospital. There have been no prevention services given locally and no adoptions arranged, no work with disturbed children on a local level.

A local committee could organize annual campaigns, tag days, teas, etc. to raise money with which to pay a caseworker. Members of the committee could also publicize the work of the CAS and the Board of Commerce and others in many phases of the work.

For several years a group of women, all members of a neighborhood bridge club, has assisted the Belleville branch of the CAS in a small, but telling way. Meeting once a week, the ladies have sewn or knitted for the babies under CAS care and last summer used club dues to send a child to camp.

Members of the club are Mrs. Bernice Taylor, Mrs. Gordon Winder, Mrs. Elizabeth Aziz, Mrs. Grace Langdon, Mrs. Muriel Johnson, Mrs. Isobel Miller, Mrs. Viola O'Krafka and Mrs. Ruth Ireland.

Vandalism Continues at Public Schools

TRENTON — Spotty, week end vandalism continues at North Trenton School, reported principal J. F. Delong to the Trenton school board Monday night. The latest incident occurred recently, said Mr. Delong, he arrived at school to find outside water drinking fountains ripped out of their moorings and thrown up on the school's roof.

At Holy Charles' School, Principal James Amm reported that the vandals who had visited the school all summer had seemingly disappeared. Mr. Amm suggested that the two lads (or vandals) had been suffering from seasonal unemployment and had now found a job and was too busy to indulge his fondness for such pursuits as window breaking.

33 CALLS IN SEPTEMBER

The Trenton Fire Department responded to 33 calls in September, Fire Chief Cecil Ellis reported to town council Monday night. Three of the calls turned out to be false alarms. Two calls came from Murray Township.

Fire losses for the month were set at $7,150.

One fireman was treated for a cut right hand, suffered while fire-fighting — another man cut his hand while checking fire-fighting equipment.

During Fire Prevention Week — next week — two banners marking the event will be strung across the main street.

School children will carry out fire drills under the direction of fire inspectors and be shown films dealing with prevention.

Stores, service stations, and factories will be checked for fire hazards.

YOUNG DRIVERS

Drivers under 19 have an accident rate almost twice as high as the average for all drivers.

Soccer Big Game in Many Schools

TRENTON — Trenton boys are going in for soccer in a big way. Four of Trenton's six public school principals commented on their students' interest in the sport in their reports to the Trenton school board Monday night.

At North Trenton school, J. F. Delong, school principal, reported that a Soccer House League is in operation. This school has a team entered in the inter-school Soccer League to defend the cup North Trenton won last year.

Before the North Trenton teams could get practice underway, they had to clear the school soccer field of long grass, cut by the Board of Education maintenance men.

At Queen Elizabeth School Walter T. E. Bedford is principal, about 50 boys are taking part in House League games three days a week and the school also has a team entered in the inter - school league.

Principal C. O. Amm at Prince Charles School says that his boys have been fined soccer field in town and are making good use of it and R. E. Hamilton at College St. school also reports good progress in the game at his school.

PARADE SHAPING UP.

Trenton's Santa Claus Parade, scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 23, is shaping up, according to the Board of Commerce secretary, Nostrand Sprague. Mr. Sprague said this week that a new group of majorettes, the Kay Wannettes of Peterborough, would take part this year and 70 Quinte majorettes will be in town to repeat a standout performance. Added to this, six show horses have been signed up for action on the big day.

Truck Slides In Loose Gravel

TRENTON — A Moira Schmister tag truck, carrying oil, ended up on its side in a ditch on the Old Smithfield Road Tuesday afternoon, when it slid on loose gravel on the shoulder of the road. Driver of the truck was Terrence William McMaster of 228 Dundas St., East, Trenton. The driver was not injured and damage to the truck, which was pulled from the ditch by a tow truck, was negligible. No oil was lost. Provincial police from Brighton investigated.

MUST PAY FINE

TRENTON — In Magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday, Roger Arsenault, 17, of 19 Front St. was found guilty in absentia of carrying a passenger on a bicycle after having been warned not to do so by a Trenton police constable. He was fined $3 and ordered to pay costs.

FOUND GUILTY

In magistrate's court on Tuesday, three persons were found guilty, two in absentia, of travelling more than 30 m.p.h. in a 30 mile speed zone.

James R. Myles of Frankford pleaded that his speedometer wasn't working but was fined by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Constable Edward McGeachy of Frankford testified for the Crown was the cases against Shirley Doris Mitts of Batawa and Gary Stuart Walker of R.R. 7, Belleville, who did not appear in court. Fines were levied in both cases.

Charges Laid After Driver Is Apprehended

TRENTON — An early morning race between a pick up truck and a police cruiser through downtown Trenton streets yesterday resulted in charges of careless driving and of operating a vehicle without a licence against a young Toronto man, working in Trenton on a road construction project, Brian McGee, 22, pleaded not guilty to the charges in magistrate's court yesterday afternoon.

Around 12.40 a.m. on Tuesday Sgt. Gordon Steenburg began to chase a pick up truck at Gilmour Hill in east Trenton. The vehicle, with the cruiser in pursuit, raced across the town bridge and on up Dundas St. W. near Catherine St. the truck suddenly stopped and the driver was seen by the police officer to leap from the truck and run northwards in the residential area. Shortly after, McGee was apprehended by Constable Carman Schwager in another cruiser, three blocks away from where the truck was abandoned.

McGee, who pleaded not guilty in court yesterday has been remanded on cash bail of $100 until Oct. 29.

COUNTERFEIT BILLS

Trenton's police chief, F. J. Taylor said today that his department is on the lookout for counterfeit $10 bills. To date, 17 of the bills have been passed locally. The bills began to trickle in to banks and store deposits on Monday. Serial numbers of the counterfeit bills are E/D 90737852 and W/D 87064552.

Councillors Refuse to Change Stand

TRENTON — In spite of a plea from Councillor Gerald Weaver, that their decision might "affect 30 or 40 apartment construction adversely," Trenton councillors voted Monday night to stick to the terms of a recently-passed by-law and prohibit parking on the town's boulevards.

Apartment owner P. Gauen asked a few weeks ago to be allowed to park his boulevard, to permit tenant parking.

Five councillors Monday night voted him down on Mr. Gauen's request and let it be known that any similar request would receive similar treatment.

Councillor Weaver argued that this stand could be taken when considering new apartments, but that some leeway should be allowed to the owners of existing apartments.

"Our responsibility ends at the sidewalk," Councillor Edward Todd summed it up, "Let 'em park on their own property."

Senior Citizens Hold Banquet

TRENTON — Last night, 41 members of the Trenton Senior Citizens' Club held a pot luck supper in the recreation hall on Ontario Street. The supper was by way of being a Thanksgiving celebration and following a short business meeting at the end of the banquet, the club members square danced to music supplied by Mr. Downs, (piano), Mr. Johnson and Mr. Cecil, (violins) and Mr. Nancarrow, (mouth organ.)

Two new members, Mrs. Moss and Mrs. Burtt were welcomed into the club and Mrs. Moss went on to win a mystery prize. Mrs. Annie Potts won a mystery prize and the usual door prize. Money from the door prize collection goes to finance trips out-of-town for the members. Last year, the club visited Northern Ontario, Cobourg and the 1000 Islands. Club members hope to visit Canada Village next June.

Mrs. Mary Robinson was last night's luncheon convener. The club this year is headed up by Mrs. Emma Foster and has broadened its activities, alternating social evenings with nights devoted to euchre.

Oct. 22 has been set as the date for a Hallowe'en party and the members have been asked to come to the affair in costume.

Premier Robarts Will Officially Open New School

TRENTON — Ontario's Prime Minister, John P. Robarts will be in Trenton on Sunday, Oct. 20 to officiate at the official opening of the high school's new vocational wing. The new addition has been in use since the opening of school this autumn ... but parts of it have been in use since last spring.

Meanwhile, the Trenton Board of Education plans to get together a number of local industrialists to show them what facilities the new vocational wing has to offer and to get suggestions as to how the curriculum could be changed or expanded to meet with local training needs.

OVER ESTIMATE

Last spring, Trenton's public school supervisor, V. P. Carswell forecast that 2,152 elementary students would enroll this September. By Oct. 1, 2,185 pupils were answering to roll call in the town's public schools.

In a report to the Trenton school board Monday night, Mr. Carswell commented on the "devotion and conscientiousness" of the elementary school teachers, and said further that the leadership of the principals now in charge is "above average."

PLAQUES DEDICATED—Two enscribed bronze plaques, honoring memory of the fallen, were dedicated in the Air Force Garden of Remembrance in Stanley Park, Vancouver, during the 13th annual convention of the RCAF Association September 26-28th. Shown following the ceremony are James O'Bryan, 418 Wing, Belleville; Air Commodore G. G. Diamond, representing the RCAF, and W. R. Menzies, 413 Wing, Trenton.

W. H. O'Brien Named as Asst. Manager

William H. O'Brien, formerly accountant at a Bank of Montreal office in Toronto, has been appointed an assistant manager at the bank's main Belleville branch.

This new appointment creates a second post of assistant manager at the branch and reflects its growing importance, according to Norman R. Keith, the manager. In his new appointment, Mr. O'Brien will join Gene Forester, the present assistant manager.

Mr. O'Brien joined the Bank of M at Zurich in 1940 and later served at St. Marys and Niagara Falls. In 1956, he was appointed accountant at an office in London and, three years later, became accountant at the Front and Yonge Streets branch in Toronto. He leaves that post to take up his new duties here.

Longshoremen Reject Proposals

MONTREAL (CP) — Striking longshoremen today rejected settlement proposals made by a federal mediator in an effort to end a walkout, now in its sixth day.

The longshoremen rejected the proposals at a mass meeting in Atwater Market, a building in Montreal's southwest end.

Phil Cutler, counsel for the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC), told newspaper men after the meeting broke up:

"The next step is to inform all parties concerned that the meeting has discarded the recommendations made by Judge (Rene) Lippe and that the longshoremen will stay put on the stand they took last Sunday."

Fighting the Trend

Belleville Industrial Commission is continuing the program it apparently evolved last year in expanding its activities well beyond the borders of pamphlet promotion.

Not so many months ago it acted as host to industrialists and leading businessmen in Toronto. Now, it plans a similar venture—this time below the border in Chicago or Detroit.

The facts of modern municipal industrial promotion being what they are, these are steps in the right direction. Unfortunately, further progress is dictated by the funds city council believes it can spare for commission activities. Compared with the job that contemporary promotion demands, these are meagre enough.

Most Canadian municipalities are caught in a vicious squeeze play in matters of industrial promotion. Ontario is a microcosm, albeit a large one, of a nation-wide threat, the roots of which might some day temple the foundations of nationhood itself.

For years, the magnet of industrial location in this province has been west of a line drawn through Central Ontario. This is to the crown of the founding commercial settlers in that area. It also now reflects poorly on their contemporaries—in this east section of the province—ironically the historic centre of Ontario pioneering.

For more than a decade this magnetism to industry has contracted into a horseshoe pattern around Metropolitan Toronto.

Since it is also the seat of provincial government, the result has been an ever-swelling head that some day threatens to loom larger than the provincial body. This, of course, is sound and proper business—for a businessman. It is common sense that a producer, in a competitive system, must locate as closely as possible to the consumer. Thus the availability of cheaper, easily-accessible goods attracts population. And increased population boosts the market potential, thus allures more producers.

This is the squeeze which Belleville's industrial commissioners and many of their municipal counterparts must try to snap. Yet, if Eastern Ontario municipalities find themselves in increasing difficulties because of a static economy, the comparable plight in the province's north country could well be critical before many years are out. The fear, there, is not of remaining static, but of actual shrinkage. It is not inconceivable, that some of our northern communities could be wiped off the map by a single economic setback. That is the pattern of Ontario expansion in the 1960's.

Apply this across the country on a national scale and there emerges a similar dilemma in the Maritimes. In this context, history may well record the biggest threat to Confederation in our time, not in the heated disputes of French and Anglo-Saxon Canadians, but in terms of economic common sense.

Government, provincially and federally, realizes this. The formation at long last of a new federal department of industry is indicative of this. Provincially, the Department of Economics and Development under Hon. Robert Macauley has been involved with this problem as it pertains to Ontario.

Yet, the threat looms larger than ever? Compared to the urgency of the challenge, governmental may be less adventurous than the stakes dictate.

Meantime, for the regions outside the areas of prosperity, they must strike out on their own despite the odds. It is a battle in some cases of progress, in many, for survival. Whatever, the goal local groups, such as Belleville's industrial commissioners, are crucial.

And let us be realistic.

For some areas, including Belleville, these groups are faced with stiff odds. Much lost time in promotion must be made good. Lack of enterprise in earlier years, before Canadian industrial revolution trend settled in their current patterns, is greatly to blame for the underprivileged positions of many communities. In this one respect at least, it is vital that we, regrettfully, break faith with our fathers.

The Belleville Industrial Commission is embarking on-new ventures. Any results it gleans should be treated with the same imaginativeness by our city fathers and citizens of this city.

Switch Pitch in Little Rock

Lake Charles (La.) American Press

If one accepts the evidence of mathematics, September of 1957 was but a short six years ago. As measured in terms of men and events, however, it seems a Neanderthandedly long time ago.

In September of 1957, Central High School of Little Rock was ordered out by a federal district court to desegregate. There was a rumbling of discontent in certain quarters of the city.

Governor Orval Faubus made a statewide radio address, in which he predicted that desegregation would result in widespread rioting and violence. He ordered out the Arkansas national guard to nullify the court order.

Just as Gov. Faubus h a d predicted, violence did break out. President Eisenhower ordered federal troops into the city to keep order.

Extremists had a field day. "Little Rock" became an international symbol of violence. Newspapers from London to Tokyo spread stories and pictures across their front pages, showing "brutality" and "race hatred" in the United States.

American diplomats a b r o a d were booed and were asked, "What about Little Rock?"

Arkansas extremists on the other side vowed that integration would never be accepted. Bomb scares were reported at the school, and at other places.

Members of the school board, and the Mayor of Little Rock, who had attempted to put the court order into effect, were threatened with bodily harm and with political reprisal.

Little Rock settled down uneasily for what was expected to be a long siege of violence, bitterness and disunity.

The other day, the Arkansas Gazette, which proudly proclaims itself to be "Arkansas' Leading Newspaper Since 1819" took a look at Little Rock today.

The city's parks, golf courses motion-picture theatres, buses, baseball park, hospitals, libraries, the largest downtown department store lunch counters, and rest rooms, the city buses, the local medical society, and the schools are all wholly or partly integrated.

Some of the city's "white" churches have opened their doors to Negroes. Visiting African officials have been welcomed — and often entertained — without discrimination in this "notorious" city.

This year the Arkansas Travellers, the Little Rock baseball team in the Southern association, has been the property of the Philadelphia baseball organization. The Travellers acquired a Negro player from the parent club. When he was not given a home run, he got a standing ovation.

Little Rock is booming economically. The city has gained a substantial number of new industries, and some 1,000 jobs have been created for Little Rock citizens, both white and Negro.

There seems to be a new atmosphere. In downtown stores, there are signs which say "Negro Customers Welcome." Integration in the schools now seems to be accepted as a matter of course, though as we said ago it was fought with mob violence.

• • •

What brought about this drastic change in such a short time? Is the result of a conscious effort on the part of the city's leading citizens, who sought to eradicate the bad name that Little Rock suddenly had acquired.

They suddenly realized that fear and violence were not conducive to good business or to good relationships. They set out to change things.

Influential and wealthy backers of Gov. Faubus let it be known that they would not back he the new order of things. City officials began working quietly to ease the tensions. The people backed them up, and in the next election, the members of the school board were defeated.

In Little Rock, the change has not been perfect, but one can only wonder what all the fuss fighting was about six years ago.

Little Rock's problem was not an isolated one. Other cities, New Orleans, Birmingham, Atlanta, Houston, Dallas, Nashville — have solved their problems and peaceful way of going about the situation.

They have arrived at t h e same solution as Little Rock, but without the violence and rioting.

These experiences seem to point up one thing — as long as the community responsible element retains control, progress in race relations is orderly and self-perpetuating.

When the responsible element loses control, or refuses to take control, the only result is violence.

Spoctor Dooner

BBC London Letter

Recalling in a recent BBC 'Woman's Hour' broadcast many eccentrics he had known at Oxford, Dr. C. S. Russell, a former Oxford don, corrected the idea that the famous Dr. Spooner, ex-Oxford Warden of New College, was in fact responsible for the host of 'spoonerisms' attributed to him. To the best of his belief he had contributed only two to the saga: he had once said 'Shoving leopard' instead of 'conquering kings' when announcing a hymn and another time 'three cheers for the queer' instead of 'through a glass darkly'.

Dr. Spooner's eccentricity had lain in action rather than in words. "At a station, once, instead of saying good-bye to his wife and tipping the porter, he is said to have kissed the porter and given a shilling to his wife. On another occasion when about to go home from a party he forgot set in. His host asked him to stay the night. He agreed and disappeared. He was discovered later he reappeared at his host's house drenched to the skin — he had gone home in the interval for his night things. Meeting a young man in the quadrangle one day he greased him to dine in college the next evening to meet the new Fellow, Mr. Casson. 'But I am Mr. Casson' said the astonished young man. 'Never mind' said Spooner, 'come all the same'.

PT for Hogs Inadvisable

Windsor Star

British researchers are experimenting with a new fangled idea of how to get leaner pork. They would do it simply by giving pigs more exercise. They would even have elevated troughs, making the hogs stretch to get at the food.

Hogs being pigs, they probably would stretch as far as they could so they could get their greedy snouts in the trough. This might exploit their natural propensity for growing fat. But we wonder if these researchers really have thought this all out through.

Fat is one of the elements which makes meat tender. The best roasts of beef or pork are those which have had a proper proportion of fat, even though some of it be trimmed off. Exercise tends to toughen meat. The best poultry meat now comes from birds which have been penned up with little opportunity for exercise.

The best way to get lean bacon is to raise the best bacon type hogs and to give them the proper feed. In that way lean bacon also is tender bacon.

To Your Good Health

Says Rare Lung Disease May Be Confused With Cancer

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What are the symptoms of a disease called Wegener's granulomatosis? Can it be treated? — Mrs. S. O.

It is a rare lung disease. The cause is not clear, but it does have its origin in a special kind of allergy.

Symptoms may include fever, cough, asthma, difficulty in breathing. X-rays have a spotty appearance which may be confused with cancer of the lung, and often a biopsy is required to make a positive diagnosis.

To my knowledge, the steriod (cortisone-type) drugs are the only effective treatment.

Dear Dr. Molner: My daughter is going to take swimming lessons at an indoor pool and her period will probably come on the last couple of days of the session.

Would it be advisable to continue with the lessons? — Mrs. J. T.

To swim or not to swim during the menstrual period — that's a question that deserves some answers.

Medically, there is no harm in it. Nor, from the matter, is there harm in any physical activity or sport in which a girl or woman engages during her period. In fact, the girl or woman who is reasonably active has a great deal less trouble with cramps and similar troubles than do those who don't ordinarily get much exercise. But that's some what beside the point.

Swimming can be continued if you like, in the ocean or in a lake or river.

However, in a pool, it is somewhat different, not from a health standpoint but from one of daintiness and modesty.

Contamination of the water isn't a problem. Chlorination in the pool would take care of that. Any well-operated pool, whether at home or at a club or gymnasium is (or ought to be) chlorinated to prevent the passage from person to person of such itinerant bacteria as may frequently be in the nose or throat or on the skin.

So make your decision on the basis of facts.

I consulted a prominent swimming coach, and he said that it is customary to excuse a girl from practice or training while she is menstruating, but if she is on the team, and there is a competitive meet, she is allowed to compete.

A race usually lasts only a matter of minutes, so that's why he follows that policy.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes a cleft lip or palate. Is it hereditary? Can it be dealt with so family history of it have a chance of having a normal baby? — B. M.

It isn't always hereditary, but it may be. Infections such as German measles or heavy exposure to X-rays may produce it and other deformities. Damage is most likely to occur from such causes early in pregnancy.

Is Contrition Really Deep?

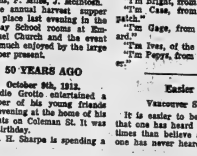
Montreal Star

Most white segregationist leaders have deplored, publicly at any rate, the hideous and tragic bombing of a Negro Sunday school in Birmingham. This was the least that could be expected, for even the lowliest can accept the principle of killing, especially the killing of children in the shelter of church. But is the contrition really so deep? Governor Wallace and other racists have expressed their horror but in the next breath suggested that the murdered Negroes themselves or "Communists" committed the crime.

Who committed the crime, or who should share the blame? It would be simple to say that Governor Wallace, in his hitherto refusal to heed federal orders, in his defiance of legal rulings, of daintiness, has set a good tone for deadly outrages. But Governor Wallace, it must be remembered, was elected on a platform of keeping Alabama white. He has the backing of the majority of the white population. In other words, he speaks for them as much as he lists them.

Only two days before the Sunday tragedy motorcades of segregationists, among them teenagers bearing Confederate battle flags, sped through Birmingham streets with placards that urged "Obey Little, Resist Much." This was the direct answer to the intervention by President Kennedy and federal courts that opened the doors of nine previously white schools to two dozen Negro children. The avowed policy of whites is to "give in" on the law as it is absolutely necessary at the moment, and then to pull back as fast as they can.

Negroes are aware of this strategy; now the fatal bombings can only deepen their impatience and fury. What Governor Wallace and other whites in the South do not realize is that they are making their stand not only against Negroes "uppity" They are engaged in a desperate oversimplification by ignoring the fact that among their midst are a mass of Negroes who take courage from federal support, from other cases and even from martyrdom.



When a responsible Negro such as Martin Luther King warns of the possibility of "civil war" unless there is a miracle, he is not forecasting racial pandemic. Negroes in Alabama can count on the support of Negroes in other states. If the "miracle" is to happen, Governor Wallace will have to set a strong tone for moderation, despite a third marriage that ended in divorce. She preached to mass audiences in Los Angeles, Calif., for about 30 years, and died in 1944.

1877—The first railway locomotive on the Prairies reached Winnipeg by boat.

surprise to ministers who attended a cabinet meeting with him in London early Tuesday.

The prime minister concealed from them the fact he had been ill during the night and already had been examined in a preliminary medical checkup.

BUTLER TAKES CHARGE

An official announcement said Deputy Prime Minister Richard A. Butler, 61, would take charge of the government while Macmillan was ill.

Butler is a leading contender for party leader, and this could strengthen his chances. But he was passed over when Macmillan succeeded Sir Anthony Eden in 1957, and there is considerable sentiment for a younger man.

The announcement of Macmillan's illness produced a series of conflicting rumors.

One story spread that Macmillan's cabinet colleagues resented his failure to advise them on his illness. He was reported to have told them at a meeting Tuesday he would stay in office and to lead the party into the election after the East - West summit conference he anticipated.

Another story making the conference rounds was that the Conservative high command had prevailed on Macmillan to ulline his illness to make a graceful exit.

Police Credit Safety Belts For Saving Two From Injury

An American couple return home unscathed from a trip in Ontario despite a serious highway accident.

Police credit safety belts worn by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Brown, of Wilmington, Delaware, with saving the couple from serious and possibly, fatal injury yesterday.

The accident occurred on Highway 2 on the western outskirts of Deseronto where the 73-year-old Mr. Brown lost control of his automobile as it hit road-shoulder gravel. The automobile veered across the highway and flipped in the opposite ditch.

Main body damage was caused the front of the car, around the windshield. The Browns scrambled from the vehicle shaken but otherwise unharmed. A police officer at the scene said the safety belts worn by the couple on the drive had probably prevented them from being thrown through the front of the car.

Constable Ed. McAllister of Belleville OPP detachment, was in charge of investigations.

Fulton Says He'll Remain As PC Leader

VANCOUVER (CP) — Davie Fulton, leader of the British Columbia Progressive Conservative party which failed to gain a legislature seat in the Sept. 30 B.C. election, says he'll remain as leader and begin immediate preparation for the next election.

"I've been in politics 18 years," the former federal justice and works minister told a meeting of the Humanities Association of Canada Tuesday night. "I'm sure I've spent another 18 years ahead of me. I believe I can be of service to the public."

Mr. Fulton was beaten by Highways Minister Phillip Gagliardi in Kamloops riding.

Construction of New School In Sidney Street Area This Fall May Be Undertaken

Subject to cost approval by the Ontario Municipal Board, construction of a new $270,000 ten-roomed public school in the Sidney Street area of West Belleville could conceivably get underway this autumn.

Monday night city council accepted the request of the city public school board for the issue of debentures for the proposed new school and application will be made for approval of the Ontario Municipal Board.

Immediately approval of the O.M.B. is granted an architect will be retained to draw plans and depending on weather conditions a start on construction might be made later this year.

Schools superintendent L. A. Kells said that most, but not all of the cost of the proposed school was included in the city's capital works budget for this year.

Site of the new school will be west of Sidney Street on the extension of Leland Drive.

Judge Lonely

LONDON (AP)—"Silence in court," bellowed the bailiff. "All stand."

Into the divorce court waddled a tilt-nosed Pekingese, an usher holding the dog on a lead and Judge Samuel Richards Edgedale, 66.

The judge, wearing his gown and wig, took over the lead and manoeuvred the dog under the bench. Then he signalled the court was open for business.

The judge told reporters later:

"Other judges take their wives into court, so why shouldn't I take my dog?

"Mine is a lonely life travelling around the country to divorce courts, and that is why I take Pinkey Boodles with me."

"Take who, your lordship?"

"Pinkey Boodles. That is my dog's name."

Serve a Duck For Thanksgiving Dinner

by Mary Moore

For the first time in 7½ years all of our clan will be on Canadian soil for Thanksgiving Day. There are too many for one house to hold all that are within driving distance but it is a great day and we give thanks for it.

Four weeks in advance of the day I held a preview Little Thanksgiving Dinner for 8 people and served a large Muscovy duck. We all thought it was so wonderful that my guests said "Why isn't duck served oftener?"

When your family is gathered around the dinner table on Thanksgiving Day and have given their formal thanks, I think they will add an extra thank you to you if a duck dominates.

THANKSGIVING DINNER MENU:

Shrimp Cocktail
Or French Onion Soup
Roast Muscovy Duck
Mint or Wine Jelly in Orange Cups
Mashed Squash with Border of Buttered Whole Onions
and
Green Beans Amandine
Or Bright Green Brussels Sprouts
and

ROAST DUCK WITH STUFFING (these amounts will serve 8):

All of the pin feathers were carefully removed from my duck because it was raised with many of its little brothers and sisters by my friend Barb. It weighed 6 lbs. and was fresh (not frozen). It required no preliminary preparation so I just made the Stuffing For Duck (lemon-flavored): One-third cup butter, ½ teaspoon rosemary, 1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes, 1 teaspoon green onion flakes, ¼ teaspoon accent, ¼ teaspoon seasoning salt, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, about half loaf (10 slices) white bread (one-day-old). Gently over low heat melt but do not brown butter in huge frying pan. (I used my chicken fryer.) Add the rosemary, parsley flakes, green onion flakes, accent and seasoning salt and stir until soaked with butter. Remove from heat. Cut the sliced bread into ¼ or ½" dice and add and toss in the butter and seasonings. Drizzle the lemon juice over and mix. Spoon into duck cavity rather loosely. Fasten with 3 small steel skewers. Tie wings snugly to sides of duck. Place on trivet in roasting pan. Sprinkle skin sparingly with seasoning salt (or if you have no seasoning salt, with salt, pepper and paprika). Roast duck uncovered without water at 325 deg. Fahr. for 3 hours, brushing skin with a little melted butter at half time. The duck sliced perfectly and was tender and moist and the stuffing was succulent and excellent.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Fried Chicken Legs; Curried Rice; Creamed Broccoli; Relish Tray: Celery and Cucumber Sticks, Radish Roses; Compote of Peaches; Sugar Cookies; Coffee.

Duck Gravy: Simmer the giblets and heart from the duck in 1¼ cups water, covered, for 2½ hours. Add liver and remove from heat, when liver will cook sufficiently in about ½ or 10 minutes. Remove giblets and chop. At mealtime carefully tip about 1-3 cup of fat from duck roasting pan into saucepan. Add 1-3 cup flour and blend. Make giblet liquid up to 3 cups by adding water and add it and chopped giblets and stir until thick. Add 1 chicken bouillon cube and taste to see if it requires a little more salt. Serve boiling hot.

NOTE: Tomorrow (Thursday, October 10th) for recipes for desserts suggested in Thanksgiving Dinner menu above.

Leaves gradually brown and wither as the sun no longer has its grading charm.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

THE HEAD COLD IS A SOCIAL LIABILITY

If you're feeling under the weather, stay home and try to get over it.

This is what I always advise when anyone asks about the social restrictions imposed by a runny nose and wheezy sinuses.

Naturally, a well-mannered guest hates to cancel out of a dinner or a tea at the last minute and a cold in her head doesn't seem to be an adequate excuse. A cold puts a host or hostess in even a worse spot. If they have to call at a "do" at the 11th hour, disappointed guests might attribute the cancellation to cold feet, instead.

Social engagements are not to be taken lightly, and they should not be broken without good and sufficient reason. A heavy cold, complete with sneezing and coughing, certainly is a bona fide excuse for calling off any appointment. Actually, it's very inconsiderate to go anywhere and bring along a bevy of cold germs that might infect others. And until a bad cold has run its course, about the only person who should be invited into the home is the family doctor.

A guest often feels guilty about cancelling an engagement and often will dose himself with cold remedies to "try to get through the evening." Maybe he'll get through it all right, but chances are the woman sitting on his right at dinner will be meeting next day, through the courtesy — or discourtesy — of her ailing dinner companion.

True, a bad cold does cause some social inconvenience, but let's look at it this way! Besides the risk of infecting others, a guest with a severely stuffed-up head is hardly the most charming person to have around. He has to exert himself to be agreeable, and usually he's constantly apologizing for his inability to talk above a whisper or through an attack of coughing.

A host similarly infected finds the party drudgery. Looking after guests becomes more of a chore than a pleasure. On the other hand, guests feel so sorry for him in his plight that they simply can't relax and enjoy themselves the way they should. So, besides spreading germs by direct invitation, the host also spreads a gloom over the proceedings that greets find hard to overcome.

Anyone with a cold may feel that he's inconveniencing others by breaking an engagement — whether he's a guest or the one who's supposed to be giving the party.

Actually, the inconvenience may be more widespread if a person who feels under the weather puts in an appearance. So, if you've been bitten by a cold bug — and who hasn't been so far this season! — remember it's exempt enough to break an engagement without seeming discourteous. And we'll be glad to add a kind word for you: Gesundheit!

Chi Rho Club Enjoys Travelogue

On Wednesday last, the Christ Church Chi Rho Fellowship, enjoyed a most interesting word and picture trip to the Australian Island, State of Tasmania. The members were taken on this trip by the Rev. James Smith, Curate of Christ Church and whose home is Canberra Tasmania.

Prior to the travelogue, a recreational period was held followed by a brief business meeting and a film on physical fitness.

The meeting ended with refreshments followed by the benediction.

Strips of adhesive tape fastened across the inside of boots or galoshes at the top will keep them from having slugs on toes or legs.

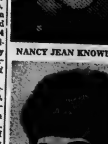
Three Scholarships Awarded by U.W. Club

The University Women's Club of Belleville and District has announced the award of the three scholarships which it made available this year to girls graduating from Grade XIII in the city and district high schools. The scholarships are awarded to the three applicants who have achieved the three highest aggregates in any eight Upper School papers written in the current school year, which must be their first year in attendance in Grade XIII. They must be able to accept the scholarship without having any other bursary or scholarship deducted.

Winner of the University Women's Club Scholarship, $300, is Miss Nancy Jean Knowlton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Knowlton, of 34 Greenlawn Ave. Miss Knowlton attended Quinte Secondary School and is now taking Honors Arts at the University of British Columbia.

Winner of the Manly Macdonald Scholarship, also $300, is Miss Lynne Meagher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Meagher, 67 Cherrier Avenue. Miss Meagher, a graduate of Nicholson Catholic College, is now at the Conservatory of Toronto in the Honors Science and Biology Course.



Miss Joan DePaul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor DePaul of 83 Palmer Avenue, is the winner of the Beverley Macdonald Scholarship, also $300. Miss DePaul, who attended Bellevue Collegiate and Vocational Institute, is now taking Sociological and Philosophical Studies at the University of Toronto.

THIRD AWARD ADDED

Through the generosity of the well-known artist, Mr. Manly Macdonald, and of the interested public, the University Women's Club raises money for scholarships each year at its Spring Fair and exhibition of Manly Macdonald paintings, when tickets are sold on an oil painting donated by Mr. Macdonald. The money from the sale of tickets on this draw painting is added to the Scholarship Fund. Because of the steadily increasing interest in the annual Spring Fair, the Club this year has been able to add a third Scholarship to the two which were being offered in the past. This new award has been named the Beverley Macdonald Scholarship, in honor of the artist's wife.

Sidewalk Cafe Is Setting For Exhibition of Art

Something novel in the presentation of an art show was undertaken on Tuesday evening by Group Eight of Tabernacle United Church, when a sidewalk cafe was used as the centre for a display of art by 22 exhibitors.

On entering the basement of the church, colorful posters of France and particularly of Paris set the stage for the interior. The figure of an artist, brush in hand, stood before an easel with a partly finished portrait of a young girl on it. The artist's model was seated in a chair opposite as though posing for her portrait.

In the main room a square was formed by flower boxes, a lamp post, a fountain with three basins in which flowers floated, wrought iron garden carts painted white and filled with potted plants; and juniper brushes. Four girls with coffee trays mingled with the guests carrying carafes and cups. Red and white checked cloths covered the tables, which each bore a candle in a green glass decanter. The serving table was covered with a red cloth. A toy cat, a dog and a monkey with a hurdy-gurdy gave the cafe an air of gaiety.

A salon des empreintes was edged with coatainers of mauve "mums and several paintings was played all through the were hung there. French music evening and the whole atmosphere was one of informality, with most of the the exhibitors present to discuss their work.

Mrs. Clifford Booth, convener of Group „Eight, assisted by Mrs. Lewis Andrews who conveved the art show, greeted the guests as they arrived. Mrs. Keith Day was treasurer.

Some 118 paintings were hung around the walls of the room, done in different media including water colors, line prints, oils, serigraph, and some with textured or sculptured surfaces using string and clay.

Interest in the pictures was enhanced by the different modes of expression used by the artists, some in abstract and semi-abstract, some representational realistic and stylized.

All exhibitors had shown previously in jury shows, which made them semi-professional.

Local exhibitors were Mrs. Margaret Robbins, Mrs. Dorothy A. Pidgel, Mrs. Philippa Faulkner, Mrs. Barbara Whelan, Mrs. Dorothy Brown, Mrs. Bea Williamson, Mrs. Muriel Andrews, Mrs. Dorothy Heaven, Miss Helen Keeler, Mrs. Nancie De Paul, and Miss Mary Mooll. View Slides Of District At Meeting

On Thursday evening October 3rd the members of the Kiwanis ladies' auxiliary met at the Kiwanis Centre for their first meeting following the summer recess.

The president Mary Denton welcomed everyone back after the summer holidays.

A short business session followed and it was announced a blood donors' clinic would be held at the Centre on October 10th.

The speaker for the evening was Mr. Gerald Boyce, introduced by Mickey MacDonald. Mr. Boyce is head of the history dept. at Moira Secondary School, and came to Belleville in 1953. Born in Hamilton, Ont. he received his B.A. at McMaster University and his M.A. at the University of Manitoba, Winnipeg. Mr. Boyce is also president of the Hastings County Historical Society. Mr. Boyce showed some interesting slides on the history of Belleville and Hastings County and some taken in the Trenton district illustrating a typical day in this area about a hundred years ago. Victoria Park at the mouth of the Moira river was once an island and sawdust from saw mill at the mouth of the river helped to fill it in to the shoreline.

Mr. Boyce was thanked on behalf of the Kiwanis ladies by Jeannine Sweeney and a gift of appreciation was presented to him.

Lunch was served by Edna Hume and her group and a social half hour followed.

Clean, convenient glass but that's not all

Of course, mothers appreciate the convenience of Gerber Strained and Junior Foods in glass. The Wide-Top jars make it easy to spoon out baby's food . . . the re-usable Quick-Twist caps help preserve freshness of unused portions. But most important to any mother is the quality of the food itself.

A big advantage of Gerber Baby Foods is that they're "custom-cooked." Each food is prepared according to its own requirements. Whether flash-cooked or slow-cooked (and some foods must be), cooking times and temperatures are scientifically controlled to preserve the utmost in nutritive values. "Custom-cooking" also contributes to the exceptionally fine flavours, true-to-nature colours and unusual smoothness of Gerber Baby Foods.

Important: Gerber Baby Foods are prepared by specialists who work solely in the interest of better infant nutrition. All their efforts are devoted to the most important people . . . your baby and all babies.

Few Women Have Jobs On Highways

TORONTO (CP)—Three British policewomen are zooming through Canada and the United States in a sports car—the same kind they use to cover their police beats in Lancashire.

Jean Stewart, one of Britain's seven female police superintendents, and constables Winnifred Cross and Sheila Criggall said during a brief stop here that few women have jobs in highway patrol in Britain.

Of the 2,600-member Lancashire force, only 122 are women and of these, only six are on highway duty.

Although few women do highway patrol, British policewomen enjoy favorable status in a force.

"We have women in every branch of police work including the department of criminal investigation," said Miss Stewart.

And the women in the force today enjoy equal benefits, equal promotion opportunities and almost equal pay.

During their short visit to Canada, the trio met policewomen in Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Ont., and Toronto.

They were surprised at a rule of the Toronto force that if a policewoman marries a policeman, she must leave the force.

"Five of our girls are married to policemen on our force and the rules permit them to stay on until they start a family," said Miss Stewart.

She said every effort is made to husbands and wives on the same shift and it has worked out "very satisfactorily."

Looking for "teen party food" that is sure to please and satisfy? Macdonald Institute, Guelph offers these suggestions for hot sandwiches, using warmed hamburger rolls. Try boiled minced steak topped with cheese and a thin slice of apple. Or, try hot chicken slices topped with hot undiluted cream of mushroom soup and finely chopped raw celery. Broil until bubbly.

Three Girls, All Blind, Due To Graduate

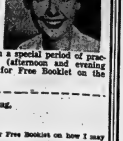
TORONTO (CP)—Three girls due to graduate from a Toronto school next spring are expected to make top-notch secretaries.

They will have impeccable telephone manners and be expert on the dictaphone as well. They will be able to type better than 70 words a minute and be able to run errands.

Yet all three girls are blind.

Janis Nicholas of Cobourg, Ont., Helen Steele of Ottawa and Shirley Zlbrosky of Roblin, Man., all 18, will graduate from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind's dictaphone-typing course.

Their teachers say they will probably be better-than-average secretaries because blind persons work harder to compensate for eyes that will never see.



Janis, blinded in an auto accident three years ago, plans to seek a job in a hospital, while Helen and Shirley, both blind since birth, intend to work in a downtown Toronto business office.

Their chances of getting employment are excellent, CNIB officials say, noting that this year the institute has found work for almost 70 per cent of its graduates.

Speaking Personally

By Gladys Ward

O, MY RED FACE

Sometimes on television people are asked to describe their most embarrassing moment. This always takes me back to one of my embarrassing moments when I was young.

When I was in High School our English class was to study Shakespeare's Macbeth. Now my father was of Scottish descent and a frugal man. With a library of over a thousand books including a complete set of Shakespeare's works he could see no reason for my buying the abridged edition for use at school when we owned a perfectly good copy. So that was the copy I took to school.

Our English teacher assigned our parts to us and we read it like a play. I was unlucky enough to get the part of the porter at the gate who gets into a drunken and ribald discussion of the three effects of drink on an uproarious person. As I was reading I was aware of a silence in the room. I was sure it wasn't my eloquence, but I plowed on until the teacher stopped me, and explained that part was not in their book. I still have that copy heavily inked out in certain places.

If Miss Madelon Young should read this, she may remember, for she was the teacher, and a good one.

A TURFUL OF JELLY

Here is a new use for gelatin — to wash blankets. I have never tried it so I cannot promise that it works, but I am assured that it does. The directions say to allow one envelope of gelatin (the plain kind, not the flavored kind) to each blanket. Put the gelatin in a quarter pint of cold water; leave for three minutes; then add one pint of boiling water, and stir until gelatin is completely dissolved. Add mixture to a bath of warm, not hot, water, sufficient to cover the blanket. Soak blanket in this bath for thirty minutes, stirring occasionally. Then rinse three or four times in plenty of warm water, squeeze, shake out, and hang in the wind to dry. Result —the "blanket" is clean, soft, and fluffy. This recipe comes from Australia, which is a good safe distance away, but I am going to try it, and I hope it works.

If you would rather use gelatin in the conventional way, it converts leftovers into tempting salads, and makes delicious desserts. It has a high protein content so it is good for the dieter, and makes an attractive dish for the invalid, and for children.

A DOG'S LIFE

Kitlis is a black Scottie dog. I think he wanted to be called Haggis, or Black Angus, or MacGregor or something typical like that, but since everyone called him Kitlie, he decided to answer to that.

One day two little girls came to the door and asked, "Can Scottie come out to play? We just love Scottie." Now as everyone in the newspaper business knows everyone likes to be called by his right name, and his name wasn't Scottie but he was willing anyway, and went outside. They played ball for awhile and Kitlie retrieved for them.

After a while one of the little girls complained, "You won't let him bring the ball to me. He's half mine you know."

"I know he's half yours," said the other, "But he's mostly mine!" Now anyone like you or me who knows fractions might have been a bit puzzled by this. But Kitlie understood perfectly and went right on, belonging half to one, but mostly to the other.

Far East Hungry for Canadian Books, Pictures

By RUBY HEWITT BROWN

With the fact of the newly-forming Malaysia very much in the news, and especially the trouble with the hesitating provinces of Sarawak and North Borneo, it is stimulating and exciting to talk with someone from that region.

Such a one who visited Canada this summer from those faraway places was Miss Norma Arkles, B.A., of Sarawak, who came home to spend a few weeks with relatives near Colborne, also including in her visit Belleville, Toronto, Hamilton and Windsor.

Miss Arkles is an instructor in the Kuching Teachers' College, her subjects being music and psychology. Her appointment is sponsored by the Federal government in connection with the Department of External Aid through which teachers and technicians are sent to underdeveloped countries, part of the Colombo Plan. She returned this fall for her third year in "the Spice Islands."

The Far East is a joy to Miss Arkles, and though she (diplomatically) talks to her friends tactfully along the line of politics, she falls freely of the amazing new experiences she has had, of the unusual people she meets, deals with, and makes friends with; of visit to enchanting Singapore and Hong Kong. She wears exotic dresses bought in the Eastern cities, and has with her for fleeting[?] of her friends, odd Oriental jewellery of jade, ivory, and other materials, little known in Canada.

One of the things Miss Arkles talks about specially is the interest being aroused in that part of the world regarding books, pictures and magazines from Canada through Canadian organizations. For these, the Eastern people are hungry. If a child living in a rural hut gets at least one of these pictures or books it makes him inordinately happy. Hospitals, too, are most anxious for this service.

Twenty-one flying hours, with stops for fuelling along the way, took Miss Arkles back to Sarawak, and the job she is so interested in.

Her arrival was just shortly before the "Birth" Day of Malaysia, and on that day she posted to a delighted Canadian friend—a philatelist—a "first-day cover" which took only five days to reach this country. The envelope has on it a picture of the new flag also three brand-new handsome Malaysia stamps marked - respectively 50, 12 and 10 "cent" as well as three different-from-one-another Sarawak stamps, designated 30, 2 and 1 "cents."

the second year, and payment of time-and-a-half for Saturday work in the third year.

He also suggested an inquiry under the Labor Relations Act into the position and the administration of the longshoremen's pension fund.

The pension fund operation has been severely criticized by some members, who say there is $5,000,000 in the fund and they don't know what is being done with it. They also don't like the payment of pension benefits starting at the age of 65, since few longshoremen can continue heavy manual labor to that age and would like to start drawing pension benefits earlier.

MET DEMANDS

On this one point, union lawyer Phil Cutler agreed, the report by Judge Lippe met the minimum demands the longshoremen had given their executive a mandate to get.

The ILA members have twice turned down proposed contract settlements this year, even though one of the settlements was approved by their executive. Judge Lippe asked the executive to get a clear mandate to sign a contract without further member consultation, and the union got it Sunday.

Edward M. Strang, chairman of the negotiating committee for the shipping federation, would not comment on the results of Tuesday's negotiations.

OPTIMISM RIFE

Optimism was generated Monday when shippers described the union's revised demands as "more realistic" than the original ones, which had called for a 35 - cent hourly increase spread out over two years, plus a boost in the value of fringe benefits by 10 cents an hour.

It is believed the revised union demands, never made public, scaled down wage demands considerably but stuck to the fringe benefit clauses.

In March, the executive and the federation agreed on a wage increase of 12 cents an hour over two years, plus four cents in fringe benefits, but the union members turned down the proposed settlement.

Shortly before launching the strike, the members also turned down a unanimous conciliation board report that would have awarded them a package increase of 22 cents an hour over two years including three cents an hour in fringe benefits.

SEE FURTHER SHUFFLES

There was immediate speculation that a more far-reaching cabinet shuffle was not far off. Among possible successors to the economics and development portfolio was Stanley J. Randall, 35, who left the presidency of General Steel Wares Limited to become first head of the Ontario Economic Council, then quit that post to run successfully in Don Mills riding in the Sept. 25 general election.

Mr. Macaulay will continue to sit as member for Toronto Riverdale, an industrial constituency he has represented for 12 years.

His eyes misted and his voice catching, the retiring minister said at first that he did not know whether he would return to a more active life of government if his health improves.

He quickly recovered composure and said he hoped that would be the case, "but one can't write blank cheques."

After cleaning out his desk and reading for a few weeks, Mr. Macaulay will resume his law practice.

EXPRESS SORROW

Farquhar Oliver, Liberal House leader, and New Democratic Leader Donald MacDonald both expressed sorrow at the manner of Mr. Macaulay's leaving. Mr. Oliver describing him as a "very bright chap with an excellent future" and the NDP chief calling him a "political animal in the finest sense."

Mr. Macaulay invited superlatives.

Son of Leopold (Leo the Lion) Macaulay, a long-time Conservative cabinet minister in Ontario before 1934, the younger Macaulay entered the legislature in 1951, the same year the voters of London North sent John Roberts to Queen's Park for the first time.

He was named a minister without portfolio five years ago by former premier Leslie Frost and second vice-chairman of Ontario Hydro. Stepping himself in hydro affairs, he engaged a University of Toronto professor to teach him about atomic energy and then produced a layman's guide to the subject which has become almost a classic.

CONTESTED LEADERSHIP

He became minister of energy resources in 1959 and developed a strong following among young Conservatives. In 1961, when Mr. Frost retired, he was one of seven contenders for the party leadership. He survived four ballots at the party convention, then publicly swung his support to Mr. Roberts to assure his friend of election over then attorney - general Kelso Roberts.

Mr. Robarts's first cabinet shuffle gave the commerce and development portfolio to Mr. Macaulay, and also transferred the economics department to his jurisdiction from the treasurer's office.

His departments produced a steady stream of legislation.

the economic council with its host of sub-committees, a housing branch to get slum clearance and urban redevelopment moving, a start on long - range economic planning, expansion of Ontario's representation abroad, and most recently the government's trade crusade.

Mr. Macaulay suffered a mild heart attack last spring and his doctors told him to slow down. After a brief pause, he plunged again into his burgeoning crusade to increase Ontario's exports and encourage foreign imports. He worked tirelessly on the election.

Russia's Nikolai Fedorenko sat silent Tuesday as Sosa-Rodriguez asked whether there were any objections to accepting the vietnamese invitation. The UN fact-finding commission was proposed by Buu Hoi, South Viet Nam's special representative at the UN.

Only a day earlier, responding to a similar query, Fedorenko had said it would be "quite incorrect" for the UN investigation to bypass machinery set up by the 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina.

He suggested that the International Control Commission investigate. That body was set up by the Geneva conference with Canadian and Polish members under the chairmanship of India.

The assembly heard a policy statement by Paul-Henri Spaak, Belgian foreign minister, in which he stressed the importance of current relaxation in East-West tension.

Spaak, president of the first General Assembly, said Premier Khrushchev had become "an apostle of peaceful coexistance," and that his idea that war has become avoidable "thus assumes enormous responsibilities, even in the Communist world."

He said it would be a "terrible and unforgivable fault" to discourage Khrushchev.

SKOPJE SHAKEN AGAIN

BELGRADE (AP) — A new earthquake shook the quake-wrecked city of Skopje Tuesday, causing sudden panic among the city's survivors. The quake brought fresh damage to buildings still standing after the disastrous earthquake that virtually destroyed the Macedonian capital July 26.

Caouette

Thompson's 11-member Social Credit party.

The Creditiste leader said at a press conference here he did not care about parliamentary precedence involved in the Internal Social Credit dispute so long as his following was awarded a separate block of seats in the House of Commons.

But he warned that if Parliament did not accord his group recognition as a separate party "we will fight." He did not specify how.

Mr. Caouette was interviewed before appearing on a CBC television program and a few hours after the Commons privileges committee in Ottawa decided to give the Thompson group preference in Commons seating over the Caouette group. The committee passed the issue of what privileges the Caouette group should get to the Commons law clerk and the Speaker.

The Creditiste leader said he did not care whether his group was ranked fourth in the opposition—after the Conservatives, the New Democratic Party and the Thompson Social Credit party.

"I don't care about seating. All I want is recognition as a separate group and me as leader."

Why is Chevrolet building a fifth line of cars when it builds four great ones already?

A General Motors Value

Chevelle Malibu Super Sport Coupe

A fair question.

And we could give you a lot of impressive-sounding answers. But basically the explanation is quite simple. It has to do with people.

Each year their tastes become more discerning, more selective. They want a car that fits their particular needs. "Almost" isn't good enough.

So for '64 we're building the Chevelle — a totally new line of cars that combines some advantages nobody else has come up with yet. Chevelle's ride and room, for example, compare favorably with many of today's bigger cars. Yet it gives you the handling ease and agility you expect in a smaller car. And as for looks — it's styled with a fresh and youthful flair all its own.

And, of course, you'll find the kind of quality craftsmanship and reliability you've come to expect of a Chevrolet-built car.

Matter of fact, once you really get to know it, we have a hunch you'll come up with some reasons for building the Chevelle that haven't even occurred to us yet.

Ann Landers

Third Party Must Not Be Allowed to Imperil Marriage

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have a bunch that letter from the unhappy widow who moved in with her children was written by my mother-in-law. I'd like to present the case of a daughter-in-law who is equally unhappy.

Do widowed mothers realize when they are invited to move in that they are being offered a home, and the not the position of Chairman of the Board?

My mother-in-law has been with us only five months and already I am developing ulcers. She tells the children what to wear, how to speak and with whom to associate. She still calls my husband "Sonny" which burns me up — and she has taken to making special dishes for him. According to her, "Nobody cooks like a boy's mother."

My husband and I used to get along beautifully. Now we are arguing —and all the arguments are about his mother. So you see Ann, she is not the only one who is miserable. Now, how do I tell her to move without alienating my husband forever? — ALSO MISERABLE.

DEAR MISERABLE — When a third party — be it mother, mother-in-law, uncle, cousin or whoever — presents a threat to a marriage, the third party must be removed.

Inviting your mother-in-law to live with you was a mistake. The sooner it is admitted — and rectified — the better for all of you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I've been dating a man for almost a year. We plan to be married in a few months.

My fiance lives at home with his folks. His father had a house guest for several days and the guest shared my fiance's bedroom. Yesterday the guest left and my boy friend told me something which has made me a nervous wreck. This guest was supposedly invited to stay with them to recuperate from an operation in an army hospital, but the truth is that he was recently discharged from a leprosarium.

I love my boy friend and I want to marry him but he has been living with a leper for a week and seeing me at the same time. Maybe I have already caught the loathesome disease. Perhaps I have already passed it on to members of my family.

Please tell me what to do. But don't print my name, initials or city because my friends and family will be just as panicky as I am. — NAMELESS.

DEAR NAMELESS — Relax. Hansen's disease (they don't call it leprosy any more) is one of the least communicable diseases known to medical science. Many wives who visited their husbands in the leprosarium in Carville, Louisiana, have tried to get the disease as they, too, might be incarcerated — but no one has succeeded.

No patient is released from a leprosarium in an infectious state. The man who shared your fiance's room was probably less of a threat to his health than most of the people he encounters during his working day.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a "Boy-and girl who is going with a very nice guy. Ted and I are not going steady — just steadily.

Last week Ted bought me a ring with a small diamond as a symbol of our friendship. When my square old man saw it he hit the roof. He said that's where he comes from, a ring with a diamond, no matter how small, means engagement and he ordered me to give it back.

Several of my girl friends are wearing rings, and I don't see any reason why I shouldn't be allowed to. Do you? — BABY FOREVER.

DEAR BABY — Yes, I see one darned good reason. Your father doesn't approve of it. Now give it back.

Increase

miles to defend his government's record, the premier said "we still try to justify this confidence."

From almost every angle the Conservative victory was stunning.

They increased their majorities in 26 of the 37 ridings they won in 1960 while the Liberals had reduced majorities in three of the four seats they won.

The premier himself chalked up the biggest majority—6,281 in Colchester. The biggest Liberal majority was 211—recorded by Peter M. Nicholson in Annapolis West.

TREND INTACT

The government victory kept intact a trend that has marked Canadian provincial politics in the last 11 months. Since last Nov. 14 when Quebec returned Premier Lesage's Liberals, every province except Saskatchewan has voted and each has returned its governments.

The PCs and Liberals contested all 43 seats, the NDP only 38. There were no independents among the 106 candidates.

Seventeen NDP candidates failed to poll the required 20 per cent of the winner's votes in their ridings and thus lost their $500 deposits. Five Liberals also lost their deposits.

The youngest and oldest candidates in the field each won. Dr. George Burrige, 30, won for the Conservatives in Yarmouth, and Gerald Doucet, 86, was the man who defeated Mr. Diefenbaker in Richmond.

Mr. Stanfield's cabinet was returned to a man.

With 95 per cent of the polls reported, 328,170 votes had been recorded compared with 1960's record vote of 347,680.

U.S.

was forward, or advance, pricing that would disrupt normal commercial transactions.

The Canadian-Japanese wheat agreement is between governments with prices fixed over a period of time. U.S. commercial transactions are carried out on a flexible futures market, where the prices have been rising. Thus, the price of wheat for future delivery might vary from the current price.

HAS POTENTIAL

The Japanese market is considered by the Americans of having a great potential and the U.S. has made considerable effort to cultivate it in recent years, in the form of subsidies and other inducements.

In the past, Canada and the U.S. attempted to co-ordinate their wheat-marketing policies through a consultative committee that met periodically. It was mainly through this committee that Canada was able to overrule what U.S. wheat sentiment under the American "give-away" program could have dictated in terms of Canadian commercial markets.

Protests by Canada usually led to changes in U.S. giveaway practices.

A Canadian informant said it should be stated in fairness that the consultative program worked well for Canada and that the U.S. generally yielded to Canadian complaints.

But then came the massive Canadian sales to Communist China and the Soviet Union, followed by an aggressive Canadian selling program to other markets that virtually left the U.S. hanging on the ropes. A U.S. informant said Canadians appeared to be paying less and less attention to co-operation with the U.S.

Pension

the unions—all except the SIU—have accepted the need for the trusteeship.

The government intervention applies only to the unions in Canada, but it will indirectly put heavy pressure on the U.S. government and the American labor movement to co-operate with the Canadian cleanup.

APPROVES INCREASE

Parliament turns to the trusteeship debate after approving the $16 boost in old-age pensions, raising payments to $75 a month for all Canadians 70 years and over.

The raise, effective this month, will be financed by an increase starting Jan. 1 in the special personal income tax earmarked for the pension fund. The new tax is expected to pull in an extra $100,000,000 into the government's pension fund in a full year.

In a last-minute bid to upset the tax-boost provision, the New Democrats forced a vote on that section of the bill.

However, the tax clause was carried 137 to 35 in a standing vote, the Conservatives and two Social Credit members supporting the government. The New Democrats were backed by Creditiste members and one Social Credit MP.

SENDER ANSWERS

During the pension debate NDP Leader Douglas pressed Health Minister LaMarsh to state categorically that the government will proceed at this session of Parliament on its contributory Canada Pension Plan —even if Quebec and Ontario dropped out from the scheme.

Miss LaMarsh said she still sticks by her earlier statement that the government hopes that the plan will be introduced "before too long."

"I can only say that my intentions are as always with respect to the Canada Pension Plan," said the Liberals' first woman cabinet minister.

"I do not like playing cat and mouse with questions like this," insisted Mr. Douglas, quickly apologizing and substituting "kitten and mouse."

"I like to pet," said Miss LaMarsh, but gave no further answers to Mr. Douglas.

LET RICH PAY

Arnold Peters (NDP — Timiskaming) said the great majority of Canadians want a broader application of the tax increase to pay for higher pensions. "Let the rich pay, not the poor," he said.

J. Waldo Monteith, former Conservative health minister, charged that the government broke an election promise by boosting taxes to finance the pension increase.

"Another broken promise," he chided some Conservative MPs.

Once the Commons started to roll on the pension bill, several Conservative MPs waived their right to speak in the debate so that the bill could be whisked through all its stages. It was approved in principle, in detail and in reality and sent to the Senate for consideration.

The longshoremen's strike at four ports on the St. Lawrence River was raised in the Commons.

Mr. MacEachen denied that the government had made any decision to impose compulsory arbitration in the dock dispute to force the strikers back to work to handle a growing lineup of cargo ships stalled by the walkout.

of more than 200 members of five Cosa Nostra mobs operating in New York. Shanley said this was just a sampling of about 2,000 members of the gangs, all sworn to live and die by the gun and knife.

Shanley said a sixth unit or "family" of Cosa Nostra operates in New Jersey.

Valachi has testified he was a killer in a Cosa Nostra mob headed by Vito Genovese, whom he pictures as the dominant figure in organized crime across the country.

Valachi said he decided to begin singing about the mob's workings after receiving a "kiss of death" from Genovese in prison.

NULLIFY SENTENCE

BONN, Germany (Reuters)—The West German Federal Supreme Court has nullified the 15-year hard labor sentence imposed last November on former S.S. officer Wilhelm Doering and has ordered new proceedings, Doering's lawyer announced here Wednesday. Doering, 45, was sentenced for aiding in the murder of 667 Jews and 18 mentally sick children in the Soviet Union during the war.

Columnist Looks at His Mail And Finds Things He Never Knew

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Babies are thoughtful little critters . . . Fewer are born during the cocktail hour than at any other time of the day or night.

Compliment: The greatest praise an old-time cowboy could give a fellow saddle tramp was to say to him: "He is someone you can ride the river with."

It takes an office secretary 15 more calories an hour to work a manual typewriter than an electric one.

Bragging takes energy . . . An Australian veterinarian insists that hens would lay more eggs if they could be made to stop clucking.

Legal milestones you may have missed: A Colorado court ruled that a telephone booth is a building. In Barre, Vt., an old law required everyone to take a bath on Saturday—whether he needed it or not.

Our quotable notables: "The man who is already worrying about whether or not his soul would be damned generally has a soul that isn't worth a damn."—Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Funny geography: There's an Odear, Me., an Ash, Kan., and a Hoody, Miss.

An idea does little good if you can't get it across to others . . . The inventive genius of Leonardo da Vinci, who conceived the airplane, submarine and the printing press, remained unappreciated for 500 years—because he wrote his notes upside down and backward in an obscure dialect.

Worth remembering: "The ablest man I ever met is the man you think you are."—Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Unique village: The community of Gildersleeve, Alaska, is built on 17 log rafts, which are towed from place to place when logging is to be done.

Unemployment is strictly a human problem at present . . . The number of jobs for performing animals has increased by 600 per cent since 1950.

Oddities: Fish are believed to experience no pain . . . A giraffe can go as long without water as a camel . . . The sloth is always hungry. He eats so slowly that before he has finished one meal he is late for the next one . . . The mockingbird can imitate the songs of at least 32 other kinds of birds.

It was William Hazlitt who observed, "If mankind had wished for what is right, they might have had it long ago."

Red Chinese Leader Said Planning Purge of All Opposing Split With K.

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — Gen. Chiang Chunk Kuo says Chinese Communist Leader Mao Tse-tung is planning a big purge of all party elements opposing his split with Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

The elder son of President Chiang Kai-shek declared in an interview Tuesday that the Peking-Moscow rift has spread confusion among Chinese Communists and has affected the morale of the armed forces.

Chiang, who recently returned from a visit to the United States, is minister without portfolio in the Chinese Nationalist cabinet and is deputy secretary-general of the National Security Council.

In these positions, the younger Chiang keeps in touch with intelligence reports from the mainland. On occasion, these reports have been shown to be accurate.

WON'T BE LIQUIDATION

Chiang predicted the purge will not be one on the likes of Mao's bloody liquidation (execution), but take the form of ousting from the party those who like Mao's break with Khrushchev.

Chiang said the split has affected the morale of the Chinese Communist military forces to such an extent that many junior officers of the navy and air force had been summoned to Peking for training.

"The ideological conflict within the Chinese Communist party is like a bomb which will sooner or later explode in the party's face and hasten its doom."

He added:

"A major uprising on the Chinese mainland is inevitable. All the explosive elements are there: All that is needed now is an external force to ignite the fuse."

By external force he obviously meant the Chinese Nationalist attack in strength on the mainland.

Blonde Twins Slain by Brutal Killer

ENDERBY, B.C. (CP)—Donna and Dianna Ring, identical 15-year-old twins, always did everything together.

Monday the beautiful girls died together, victims of a slayer who police say bludgeoned them with a rifle butt.

The death of the two high school girls—such look - alikes that they were often mistaken one for the other—shocked this fruit-growing centre in the north Okanagan Valley, 40 miles north of Kelowna.

Their beaten bodies were found in bush a short distance apart and not far from where they alighted from a school bus for the mile-long walk home Monday afternoon.

Lawrence Herman Haase, 25, of Kelowna, a service station attendant, was charged with capital-murder in the double slaying. He appeared in court Tuesday and was remanded without bail to Oct. 16.

70 VOLUNTEERED

When the call went out for volunteers to help police search for the missing twins, almost every able-bodied man in the immediate area answered the summons. They made up a party of 70 — loggers, hydro workers and residents — who helped police search throughout Monday night until the body of Dianna was discovered early Tuesday morning. The body of her twin was found some hours later.

The dead girls' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Ring, operate a small summer resort at Mable Lake, 20 miles east of here. Only other member of the family is a brother of the twins, Dwayne, 17.

"They always did everything together," Mrs. Ring tearfully told a reporter after learning of the brutal slaying. "They had planned to be nurses."

Police said an autopsy will determine if the girls were sexually attacked.

Rejection Order Embarrassment For Govt.

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Rejection by the United States Congress of a projected $21,700,000 U.S. Army order for 45 more Canadian Caribou transport planes is a definite embarrassment to the Canadian government, authorities here say.

Embarrassment No. 1: Defence Production Minister Drury announced June 7 after a meeting with U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara that the two countries "reaffirmed positively" support of the defence production - sharing program. Mr. Drury added:

"Assurances were given that the difficulties experienced by both countries in respect of balance of payments problems should not be allowed to interfere with the continuation and enlargement of this program."

Embarrassment No. 2: The U.S. Army replacement for the Caribou may be the Lockheed C130E—at a time when the Canadian defence department is considering purchase of more Lockheed Hercules transport.

The RCAF bought four Hercules planes some three years ago and has long wanted more, especially for northern supply operations and support for Canadian troops serving with United Nations peacekeeping missions.

One informant said Lockheed's chances of selling more planes to the Canadian government have decreased considerably since the U.S. congressional action.

The U.S. Army had already purchased some 125 Caribou transport planes—from de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Limited, Downsview, Ont., and was preparing to order 45 more.

Congress stepped into the picture at this point, mainly because it felt such orders should go to manufacturers at home.

In Russia this week are local businessmen Jack Aillin and John M. Parrott and Mrs. Parrott. They are seen on the eve of their departure from Montreal last Sunday with Campbell C. Holmes, tour conducter, Bob Askew, publisher of Homebuilding News, the industry newspaper that organized the trip.

In three weeks they will visit Moscow, Leningrad, Helsinki, Stockholm, Copenhagen and Oslo before returning via London and Amsterdam on October 28th. Purpose of the tour is to study foreign building techniques which might help improve efficiency and reduce building costs.

Federal PC Members Happy Over N. S. Vote

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal Conservatives said it with flowers Tuesday night in welcoming the party's sweep in the Nova Scotia election.

Former Conservative finance minister George Nowlan, and his colleagues pressed blue—for Conservatives—and white—for available Nova Scotia Liberals in the House of Commons. The blooms were sent anonymously.

Mr. Nowlan personally attended to the buttonholing of Labor Minister MacEachen, his successor as Nova Scotia's cabinet representative, and others across the floor of the Commons.

But other parties could take little comfort from the result of 39 Conservatives and four Liberals, replacing the previous standing of 26 Conservatives, 15 Liberals, one New Democrat and one—formerly Conservative—vacancy.

Mr. MacEachen said he deeply regretted the loss to public life of both a good personal friend and a devoted Nova Scotian figure in Earl W. Urquhart, Liberal leader of nine months who was defeated.

REGRETS, NDP LOSS

National leader T. C. Douglas said he would wish Premier Stanfield of Nova Scotia congratulations in his "resounding mandate." But he said the defeat of Michael J. MacDonald, member for Cape Breton Centre since 1945 and the lone NDP man in the last legislature, robbed the party and the province of an excellent servant.

Mr. Nowlan commented that the results were a "great tribute to Premier Stanfield and his government and to the co-operation between it and the former government of John Diefenbaker."

Mr. Diefenbaker did not comment publicly but his office said he sent a telegram expressing congratulations for the "magnificent victory."

Prime Minister Pearson's office said he would contact the Nova Scotia Liberal leader personally.

Five Testify They Received Commissions

QUEBEC (CP) — Legislative Councillor Gerald Martineau, former president of the Union Nationale party, Tuesday pleaded not guilty to 24 charges of fraud or conspiracy to defraud the province.

Trial date was set for Nov. 5 and Mr. Martineau chose trial by judge alone after a preliminary hearing in which nine witnesses testified.

Five said that, through Mr. Martineau, they received commissions on sales by Sico Paint Limited to the Quebec government between 1952 and 1960.

Robert Gervais, 67, of Disraeli, Que., a real estate agent, said he went to see Mr. Martineau on business and was given a cheque for $1,200.

"I was always under the impression that Mr. Martineau was a shareholder of the Sico Company," Mr. Gervais said.

Questioned by defence lawyer Joseph Cohen, he said the legislative councillor had not benefited from the $1,200 personally.

SAY SUMS RECEIVED

The other four witnesses also testified that they received sums varying from $500 to $9,000 though they had never worked for Sico. They are Eugene F. Roy, 51, Sillery, Que., building materials salesman; Lionel Baillargeon, 48, Ste. Foy, Que., personnel officer; Rene Bedard, 57, Quebec City, manufacturers' agents; and Leonard Block, 58, Quebec City, civil servant.

The testimony in general was a repetition of what the same witnesses said before the Salvas royal commission into the purchasing practices of the former Union Nationale government.

The commission reported to the government last July and recommended that judicial action be taken.

Charges of fraud or conspiracy to defraud the government also have been laid against Antonio Talbot, Union Nationale member of the legislature for Chicoutimi and former roads minister; Joseph Damase Beguin, former colonization minister and Union Nationale chief organizer; Alfred Hardy, former director of purchasing service under the Union Nationale government, and Quebec City businessman Arthur Bouchard.

Mr. Hardy testified Tuesday under the protection of the court.

He said he received numerous requests from cabinet ministers, members of the legislature and legislative councillors to place names on the kick-back list.

He often consulted with Mr. Martineau on such requests to insure names were not duplicated, he said.

Kenya Independence Talks Bogged Down in London

By ROD CURRIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Kenya independence talks have bogged down in London because Prime Minister Jomo Kenyatta has belatedly balked at accepting a governmental system similar to that in Canada.

The provisional constitution, drawn up after months of hard bargaining, had in fact included the idea of a federal government along with seven district or provincial governments, each with a legislature and president or premier. At the time the party's conference agreed in principle.

Now the strongly nationalistic Kenyatta, his hand strengthened in last May's general election, is seeking to change the constitution in favor of a British-style government, with power concentrated in the federal authority and district assemblies reduced virtually to county councils.

The Opposition Kenya African Democratic Union, champion of the smaller, even backward tribes, is violently opposed.

The British government, which has played a major part in all these negotiations, is taking a concerning although it has always supported the original constitution.

WANTS SAFEGUARDS

It insists on effective safeguards to establish a balance between the two concepts but has found unanimous reasonable arguments consistent with this position.

The basic difficulty is the wide variance in regional and tribal attitudes between the 8,000,000 population of the African country, land of the dreaded Mau Mau secret society that terrorized Whites and many African natives in the 1950s.

Kenyatta's Kenya African National Union draws its support from the numerically strong and politically experienced Kikuyu and Luo tribes of the central, eastern and Nyanza provinces.

In the May election the prime minister, once jailed for seven years for his Mau Mau activities, swept 82 of the 117 House of Representative seats and won control of the Senate.

He interpreted this as a mandate to change the constitution — and then the trouble started.

The smaller tribes, concentrated in the coastal, western and Rift Valley areas and supporting KADU, fear a strong central government could lead to dictatorship by the influential tribes.

They insist that the constitution give wide powers to the regions as protection against usurpation of their rights and status.

SLOW PROGRESS

So far the London conference has made slow progress—according to Commonwealth Secretary Duncan Sandys "we are plodding along."

Continued failure to agree could force postponement of independence, now set for Dec. 12, and upset an elaborate timetable involving Kenya and neighboring Uganda and Tanganyika.

The three hope to form a political federation of East Africa and apply for United Nations membership before the UN session ends about the third week of December.

Prime Minister Awaits Surgery On Thursday

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Macmillan, in hospital for a prostate obstruction, was given a routine medical bulletin today to be "very comfortable" while waiting for surgery Thursday.

A spokesman for King Edward VII Hospital, Lady Bird-watching 69-year-old prime minister was "well and cheerful" despite the prostate condition. He has an operation to clear bladder fairly common in men of his age.

The prime minister's illness has thrown his Conservative party into disarray as its ablest political convention began today at Blackpool. A flood of sympathetic messages came to the prime minister from all over the world.

The Queen, Harold Wilson, opposition Labor party leader, newspapers and others all expressed their sympathy for the Conservative leader.

PRESIDED AT MEETING

Macmillan became ill early Tuesday, but after treatment, was able to preside over a cabinet meeting, although he was in pain.

Then his official residence at 10 Downing Street announced Tuesday night:

"The prime minister has tonight been admitted to the King Edward VII Hospital for Officers for an operation for prostatic obstruction.

"It is expected that this will involve his absence from official duties for some weeks, and he has asked the first secretary (deputy prime minister) Mr. R. A. Butler, to take charge of the government while he is away."

A British Medical Association spokesman said treatment in such cases usually involved hospital confinement for about three weeks and six to eight weeks of convalescence. Complete return to health could take up to three months, the spokesman added.

Canada Will Sell Wheat To Bulgaria

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada added another Communist country to her list of grain customers Tuesday with announcement of a sale of up to 16,500,000 bushels of wheat to Bulgaria.

The deal, part of a three-year trade agreement, provides for the East European country to buy 100,000 metric tons (3,675,000 bushels) a year for three years and an additional 150,000 metric tons (5,512,500 bushels) during the current crop year, depending on the Canadian supply picture.

It is the first time Canada has ever sold wheat to Bulgaria.

The sale could be worth up to about $33,000,000 based on current prices of about $2 a bushel, but no firm estimate of the value was given.

The agreement, signed Tuesday by Trade Minister Sharp and I. Boudinov, Bulgarian minister of foreign trade, was announced by Mr. Sharp in the Commons.

Its conclusion after months of secret negotiations, came hard on the heels of the $500,000,000 Russian wheat deal announced Sept. 16 and major sales to other Communist countries, including China and Poland.

Unrestrained Application Of Free Trade Not in Cards At This Time Says Speaker

QUEBEC (CP) — Canadian businessmen were told Tuesday they have a moral obligation to give underdeveloped countries special trade advantages so the countries can build up the standard of living of their populations.

The statement came from both a British and an American business executive, but was challenged by a Canadian who said the unrestrained application of free trade "is hardly in the cards for Canada" at this time.

Sir Nutcombe Hume, chairman of Charterhouse Investment Trust Limited of London, told the annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce that highly developed Western countries must be prepared to accept the hardships involved in taking manufactured exports from underdeveloped countries while they protect their industries by tariffs.

R. W. Macdonald, of Detroit, vice-president of the international division of Burroughs Corporation, said the objective today should be to industrialize underdeveloped countries to produce their own local requirements instead of exporting the commodities to these countries.

CANADA FIRST

Carl Pellock of Kitchener, immediate past president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, said however that Canada still has to look out for its own manufacturing industry.

The principle of free trade "is one to which we can all pay homage, but in practical life unrestrained application at this time is hardly in the cards for Canada."

He told the 800 chamber delegates from all across Canada that there is much to be said for step-by-step experiments to determine what reductions or adjustments in tariffs could be made "in the interests of all nations without imposing special or undue hardships on any."

The day's meeting, devoted chiefly to a study of international trade, also heard some strong words about the potential benefits that could come from selling to Communist countries.

Edwin P. Neilan president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said more and more Americans are of the time has come to sell food to Communist China and possibly deal in nonstrategic goods with other East-bloc countries.

"Businessmen know that good sound trade cements peaceful relations," he said.

REPORT FEWER VESSELS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. interior department reported Tuesday a sharp reduction last month in the number of Soviet fishing vessels on and near Georges Bank in the northwest Atlantic. Officials said about 100 vessels were in the area at the end of September, compared with about 200 throughout the summer and until August.

THE FEAST IN THE SUCCAH for the Hebrew school students of the Sons of Jacob Synagogue yesterday was arranged by Rabbi Joseph Berglas, and attended by many of the parents. The feast, a combined harvest-time festival and commemoration of the flight across the desert from Egypt, marks the beginning of the second half of the Succoth holiday.

Flames Destroy Bewdley Hotel, $50,000 Loss

BEWDLEY, Ont. (CP) — The owner of a hotel and restaurant here stood by helplessly on crutches Tuesday as fire flared through his property. He estimated damage at $50,000.

The buildings had been closed for the season, and no one was injured.

Harold Rahn of Hanover, Ont. owner of the Bewdley Hotel and restaurant in this resort village 17 miles south of Peterborough, was unable to fight flames that destroyed his two - building frame hotel, the restaurant, six cabins and a boathouse containing 19 small craft. He is recovering from a torn ligament.

Mr. Rahn, helped by two men, was pulling up a floating dock on the front of Rice Lake when a small explosion was heard in the hotel dining room.

The flames spread rapidly and within minutes 19 small boats in a storage building behind the hotel were destroyed.

COULDN'T GET NEAR

Maurice Myers, one of the men helping Mr. Rahn, said: "Before we could do anything about the fire it was too bad to get anywhere near the building."

Firemen from three volunteer fire brigades brought the blaze under control after about 2wo hours. They were hampered by a 20-mile-an-hour wind that threatened to sweep the flames up a dry-grassed hill behind the hotel.

Four homes on the hill were evacuated as firemen watered down other cabins, cottages and permanent homes.

At one stage two firemen surrounded by flames, turned off the supply of a steel-encased, 50-gallon gas tank, used to supply fuel to boats at the waterside.

Speeding Car Mounts Walk, Kills Girl

BROCKVILLE (CP) — A 15-year-old girl was killed Tuesday night when a speeding car mounted the sidewalk, carried her 100 feet and then disappeared around a corner without stopping.

Joan Sagar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Sagar of Brockville, was walking with a friend to the library.

Eyewitnesses said the car involved appeared to be racing with another car when it apparently went out of control at a bridge and struck the Sagar girl. The other girl was not harmed.

Weekly Worship Urged For Church Members

J. M. Hartwick Re-Elected Dairy Head

TORONTO (CP)—A panel of experts at the National Dairy Council of Canada's 46th annual convention expressed optimism Monday for the dairy industry and also grave concern over the inroads made by competitive products.

Figures showed that while marketable dairy products were on an upward trend, the increase was not consistent with population growth, council delegates were told.

Mrs. A. F. W. Plumptre of Ottawa, president of the Consumers' Association of Canada, one of seven panelists discussing possible methods to increase markets for dairy products, expressed concern of the consumer for different butter tastes. She suggested distributors make a definite distinction between first- and second-grade butters, indicating whether the butter is for table or cooking consumption.

F. V. Moyse of Toronto, editor of Food in Canada, suggested the Canadian industry follow the lead of its European counterparts by expanding into the specialty field. He noted a recent shipment of cheese cubes wrapped as sweets are a popular item in Holland.

Panelist A. E. Gignac of Windsor, Ont., agreed there is a definite need to reactivate the entire industry from its complacency.

Meanwhile, J. M. Hartwick of Preston, Ont., re-elected president of the council for a second term, said he was a "dedicated and incomplete image of the importance of the dairy industry and dairy foods." He said there is a need for improved communications between the dairy industry and consumer.

Today, some 400 delegates take a break and travel to Niagara Falls. They return for final sessions of the council's meeting Wednesday.

CASSINI CHANGES PLEA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Igor Cassini, the society columnist who wrote under the name Cholly Knickerbocker, changed his plea Tuesday to no contest on a five count indictment charging that he failed to register as a publicity agent for the late Dominican dictator Rafael Trujillo. U.S. District Judge Matthew F. McGuire, in accepting the plea of nolo contendere, delayed sentencing until an unspecified date. The government offered no recommendation for sentence.

TORONTO — The United Church Observer, in its current issue, says that "what a congregation does on a Sunday morning, or whenever its people gather for common worship, is the most important thing it does all week."

In reply to its own question, Does a Christian really have to go to church every Sunday? the Observer says: "It is important for church sessions in local congregations to be insistent that their people come to church regularly every Sunday, 12 months of the year."

Particularly is this important now the church journal says, because there has been "a decline in personal piety, a passing of the small prayer meeting, a drop-off of family worship and private prayers".

Many decent, well-meaning people become careless in their attendance at public worship, the Observer points out. "They can easily find excuses. They say they don't understand or appreciate the minister's sermons. Their minds wander through the scripture reading and prayers so indifferently read. They can't sing the new-fangled hymns."

Admitting that there are churches where the preaching is poor, the leadership indifferent and the congregational singing bad and getting worse, the Observer says that regular church-going is important.

"And in time, in the church where the worship is real and the members are faithful, the congregation becomes a family, part of the household of God, in such a congregation we rejoice in one another's victories, we comfort one another in sorrow, we bear one another's burden. We lift up those who fall, restore those who have backslidden, call on the sick, help the unfortunate. And when the most meaningful of all our services are held and the bread is broken and the wine is poured, then the fellowship of believers and the communion of saints becomes a reality to us."

Three Fined In Shooting of Bushworkers

COCHRANE, Ont. (CP)—Three men were fined $100 each Monday for possessing an offensive weapon, apparently winding up nearly eight months of hearings into the shooting deaths of three striking bushworkers which saw some 275 men before the courts.

The three men fined were Independent, log-cutting settlers Paul Emile Coulombe, 34, and Laurent Tremblay, 39, both of Val Rita, and Herbert Murray, 34, of Harty.

They and 17 other settlers had originally been charged with non-capital murder and rioting. Monday they were told by Chief Justice J. C. McRuer that a grand jury of the Ontario Supreme Court had found there was insufficient evidence to go to trial on the more serious charges.

The 17 were dismissed, the rest pleaded guilty to the lesser charge. Chief Justice McRuer said it was not his duty to take into consideration the "tragic events" which led to the charges against the three, nor did he wish to impose suspended sentence because he wanted the matter finished then and there. He then imposed the fines.

The settlers had been charged after the death last Feb. 12 of three members of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union (CLC), engaged in a 34-day strike at Spruce Falls Power and Paper Company in Kapuskasing.

The men were shot when an army of strikers descended on the settlers' cutting camp maintained by the settlers of Reesor Siding, 38 miles west of Kapuskasing, and were met by a hail of bullets from inside the camp.

Of 234 strikers charged with unlawfully assembly, 138 were convicted and fined $200 each. The fines were paid by the union's national office.

Joseph LaForce, president of the Kapuskasing local of the union, said Monday he has sent telegrams to W. J. Bowman, director of public prosecutions for the attorney-general's department, and to Attorney-General Fred Cass.

The telegrams said the result of last week's grand jury hearing into the murder charges "makes a mockery out of justice in this part of Ontario." He asked that the charges be maintained and that a royal commission be appointed to look into the whole handling of the affair.

15 Leftist Labor Leaders Are Arrested

SINGAPORE (Reuters)—Mr. layed as authorities arrested 15 leftist labor leaders today in an effort to head off "a Communist plot to create famine and unrest" through widespread disorders.

Police and security forces were on alert as almost all 60,000 workers in Singapore, the island's seven major trade unions went on strike. The stoppage threatened to paralyze industry and commerce.

Dr. Ismail Bin Dato Abdul Rahman, Malaysia's internal security minister, announced the arrests in a statement issued in Kuala Lumpur, the federal capital.

Thanks Abdul Rahman, Malaysian prime minister, said he may fly to Singapore to take personal charge of the situation.

He told reporters in Kuala Lumpur: "I want to be on the spot to take charge if the situation gets worse."

Ismail described the actions of those arrested as designed to set off "a political campaign in furtherance of a Communist plot to create famine and unrest in the state."

Singapore is linked with Malaya and the two North Borneo territories of Sarawak and Sabah in the British-backed Malaysian federation.

PREPARED TO FIGHT

Ismail said the labor leaders "had intended to intimidate and even clash with some bus workers who were prepared to fight the Communists by taking out buses in defiance of pickets.

"They intended to attack buses on their routes and burn them."

Workers at Britain's Singapore naval base went on strike at midnight Sunday. They are striking for better pay and working conditions.

Among the labor leaders arrested was S. T. Bani, president of the 60,000-strong Singapore Association for Trade Unionists.

All were held under a public security ordinance which provides for detention without trial.

Bani, an extreme left-wing opposition member of Parliament, accused the Singapore government of seeking to wipe all left-wing unions off the industrial scene.

Bothered About Her Past

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS — When I asked my mother questions about babies she said wait until you are older. So I learned about love, the wrong way, by giving in to men. Love at home wasn't for me and I wanted someone to love.

I had a slight bit of infection then and had it cleared up. Now I am married and this health nurse who sees my mother quite often calls to see me. She is in such a rush for me to have a child.

The other day she was here and she got talking to me about the infection. She keeps harping at me as if I committed a crime. I want to live my own life. How can I do this when she keeps up this horrible nightmare that's driving me insane? — NEARLY MAD.

DEAR NEARLY — Hold on. It's your body and Your Life. Your decision — and your husband's — about when to have a baby. Since your husband knows of your past (and that's all over now) you have nothing to fear. If we haven't the right to live down our mistakes we're all in trouble!

DEAR DORIS — My biggest problem is my little sister. She is nine years old and I am 15. My problem is that she always tags me around. I don't really mind it once in a while, but everything I do and everywhere I go she's there.

I've tried neglecting her. I've tried treating her like a queen without even a harsh word, I've tried talking to her about it, but none of these have worked. Maybe it's because she's the baby of the family and is "babied" by my parents.

Would you please help me, Doris, as this is very disturbing and interfering. — FORLORN.

DEAR FORLORN — Being shadowed can be irksome. But would it help you to realize that she is doing a little heroine worshiping?

Ask your mother to be a pal and find other nine-year-olds for little sister to play with. With her help they could have their own special tea parties — and you could be miles away! Mom may hardly realize that her older girl is growing up and needs this freedom.

DEAR DORIS — I am a 16-year-old girl wondering about a handshake. To me it has always seemed a friendly welcome to anyone. However, I have found that many appear embarrassed and confused when I extend my hand.

Is or isn't it proper etiquette and are there certain ages to which it is restricted? By this I don't mean just going up to every Tom, Dick or Harry and shaking hands, but what does one do when introduced to another? — WANTING TO KNOW.

DEAR WANTING — And so it is friendly. The right response to an outstretched hand is to take it. Yet handshaking is optional between girls. And if you are introduced to an older woman or man, or someone in a superior position, you wait for them to reach out first.

Men always shake hands when introduced.

(Don't just muddle along. Write to Doris about what's bothering you. And remember that stamped envelope!)

Cancellation of Frigate Program by Former PC Govt. Is Expected Soon

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Cancellation of the $374,000,000 eight-ship frigate construction program announced by the former Conservative government in April, 1963, is expected to be announced in about a month, informed sources said Tuesday.

Only $8,400,000 was allotted for the program in the current fiscal year, mainly for drawings and specifications.

Informants said the government likely will substitute another shipbuilding project, not necessarily military, to keep the shipyards working.

Defence Minister Hellyer, who has had the frigate program under review since he assumed his portfolio April 22, told the Commons defence committee Tuesday a decision will be reached "very soon."

He drew the ire of some opposition committee members when he said this decision will be reached without benefit of any recommendation from the committee.

"We might as well sojourn now," said Hebor Smith (PC—Simcoe North).

The main witness before the committee, Vice-Admiral Herbert Rayner, chief of naval staff, said the navy urgently needs new ships—submarines and surface ships—to replace ones now "rapidly" wearing out.

Admiral Rayner said in reply to John Matheson (L—Leeds) that new naval ships should have been laid down some months ago. Canada was "falling astern" of its naval commitments to NATO.

Cigarettes Cause Fires In Forests

Careless hunters and leaf-littered forest floors are causing fire hazards in the Tweed district, Lands and Forest Dept. official said today.

Cigarettes tossed carelessly away accounted for two fires in the past week.

One destroyed five acres in Brougham Township while another is ravaging a four-acre hardwood stand in Ashpenie township.

The blazes ups the season's total in the district to 112 as against 106 in 1962.

While the general fire hazard is moderate, dry weather is increasing it to high.

Department officials again urge weekend hunters to use care and caution with cigarettes and camp fires.

RECALL OUTBREAK

An outbreak of inflammation of the brain in Florida in 1962 caused 18 deaths.

Pinch Hitting

By Garry Alexander

Baseball on the local front wound up in something less than a blaze of glory this past weekend.

Jones Motors, falling apart with room to spare in the second inning, dropped by the wayside at the hands of a good Chatham club.

Meanwhile, here at the Fairgrounds, the Kenmore bowed to the Galt Terriers in an exciting, if not well played, OBA Senior championship series.

Kenmore were on the spot from start to finish, losing the opener here Saturday afternoon, winning the second, then coming within one pitch of winning it all on Sunday.

First, the series came too late and faced too many top counter attractions to make it a good drawing card. The fans stayed away by the hundreds, about 200 turning out Saturday afternoon, less than that Saturday night and approximately 300 on Sunday.

One local sport enthusiast remarked Saturday night that Belleville fans do not deserve sport of any type here since they just refuse to support it. He may have something there but that is another story. The people who do not come out to back their local clubs are the losers, not the fans who do.

Both Galt and Kenmore were guilty of loose play in the series, but on the other side of the ledger, both turned in some excellent clutch plays afield and timely hitting. The second and third games were won in the ninth innings.

We will say this, the Terriers were a good ball club, but not as good as they thought they were. If they played the game as well as they "umpired" it there would have been no need for the Kenmore to show up at all.

There was far too much complaining about the officiating in the series. Sure, the umpires made mistakes, one costing Galt a base runner when he was hit by a pitch in the first game, another robbing Belleville's Larry Sedon of a home run in the second game. Other disputed calls were close enough to go either way without the players making a federal case out of them. We would like to have Mr. Kelleher remember, however, that the fans come to watch a ball game, not the umpire.

Kenmore manager and coach Sid Forster was likely the saddest person at the park following Galt's ninth-inning win Sunday, but he did not deserve the abuse he handed out by a few of the so-called local "faithfuls."

Forster went by the book when he sent Stan Reid in to face the meat part of the Galt batting order with two men out. The hitters were left-side swingers and Reid is also a southpaw. He had stopped the Terriers cold with a scratch hit and eight strikeouts in relief on Saturday.

And the pitcher switch should have paid off... Reid went to a full count on the first batter he faced and the double that beat him was a pop fly, one that fell inches from three gloves. Eight times out of ten it would have been caught and the Kenmore would have retained their title.

I can't say how many of us would have made the decision that Forster did, but after all, he is the manager and the decision was his. It takes guts to make such a move and although it backfired this time, Sid said later he faced with a similar situation he would have to do the same thing again. He has done a tremendous job with the club for the past two years and kept it together this spring when odds were that it would be broke.

We hope to see the team back bigger and better than ever next season and it should be hard to find a team to do as good a job as Forster has in the past.

This corner, at least, hopes to see him back—and we believe that the players do, too.

Miss Stewart, 17, is described on the page as Canada's female athlete of the year 1961 and 1962 and holder of many records.

Ferguson Scores Two Against Boston ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Habs Rookie Stars In 4-4 Opener

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The National Hockey League is into a spanking new season, and Montreal Canadiens appear to have made a find in a tall spunky kid from Vancouver.

Crew-cut chisel-featured John Bowie Ferguson came to Montreal from Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League after a 36-goal season.

Coach Toe Blake plunked Ferguson down on a line with old hands Jean Beliveau and Boom Boom Geoffrion, and took a let's - see - what - you - can - do attitude.

Tuesday night, before 13,000 fans in Boston, Canadiens and the Bruins inaugurated the NHL 1963-64 schedule and Ferguson responded with two goals and an assist in a 4-4 saw-off.

Murray Oliver of the Bruins matched Ferguson's performance, potting his second goal with less than two minutes to play to salvage the tie.

Canadiens opened last season in Boston the second day of the schedule and dropped a 5-0 decision.

Ferguson's two goals were the 18 games without a win and ultimately wound up last.

BLOW LEADS

Tuesday night, Bruins twice blew two-goal leads.

Tom Williams and Dean Prentice, acquired from New York Rangers in the offseason, were Boston's other goal-getters.

Geoffrion and young defenceman Terry Harper rounded out the Montreal attack.

Canadiens fired 42 shots at Eddie Johnston, the Boston goaltender, a 10 - shot edge he leashed 34 at Lorne (Gump) Worsley, who came to Montreal in a seven-player swap with New York last June.

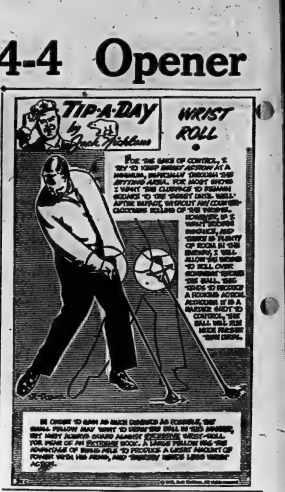
Oliver's tie-maker was a 25-footer—set up by a drop pass from Williams—at 18:35 of the final period. His first goal made the score 3-0 for Boston at 9:46 of the opening period after Williams opened the scoring at 6:39 while Montreal's J. Yvon Labay was serving a minor penalty.

Ferguson counted his first at 9:58 from a goalmouth scramble with Ballevaun assisting. Then in the second period Prentice pushed the Bruins in front 3-1 at 14:37.

PENALITIES HURT

Habs came back quickly, beating Johnston with two power-play goals 30 seconds apart. Ferguson fired goal No. 2 at 16:35 while Teddy Green was off and with Dave Balon set up Geoffrion at 17:15, squaring the count at 3-3 while Guy Gendron was serving a penalty.

Harper sent Montreal ahead at 14:18 of the third period and then came the late goal by Oliver.



Rangers meet the Black Hawks in Chicago tonight.

Hawks will have Stan Mikita in the lineup, a prospect that seemed uncertain for a time. The scrappy centre was a contract holdout and he missed the All-Star game because of it.

He came to terms with the front office Tuesday. They were undisclosed but it was understood he obtained a considerable raise above the $12,000 he was reported to have earned last year when he led Hawks in scoring with 21 goals and 45 assists.

New York will be minus defence veteran Doug Harvey. Business pressure kept him at home in Montreal and he signed his contract only Tuesday after missing most of the club's preseason training.

Harvey will play himself into shape with St. Paul of the Central Professional Hockey League and that would mean at least three games.

Leafs Mr. Imlach Predicts

Habs Won't Make Playoffs

TORONTO (CP) — Montreal Canadiens, who once seemed to own Stanley Cup, won't make the playoffs this season, says the man whose team now owns the cup.

Punch Imlach, manager-coach of the National Hockey League champion Toronto Maple Leafs, made this prediction Tuesday as he picked the Leafs to lead the league once more.

Imlach predicted New York Rangers, who finished fifth last year, will fill Montreal's place in the playoffs and may finish as high as third. It depends on Jacques Plante and Doug Harvey, he said in an interview.

"I think Plante can put them York in the playoffs practically by himself," said Imlach. "And if their defence gets the help it could from Harvey, there's no reason that team couldn't make it to third place."

The order of finish, as predicted by Imlach, was Toronto, Chicago, Detroit or New York, Montreal and Boston.

He suggested inexperience on the Montreal line of Jean Beliveau, Bobby Rousseau and Phil Goyette, will spell Montreal's downfall.

Earlier in Montreal, Canadiens' managing director Frank J. Selke recognized the team will finish third. The Habs, Stanley Cup champs in 1960, haven't been in the finals since.

"Cop" Tickets Gift Car

Koufax Loses First To New York

By MIKE RATHET

NEW YORK (AP — What makes Sandy run?

A new sports car—and a driving ambition.

Sandy is Mr. Koufax who was honored at a luncheon Tuesday as the hero of the World Series, and presented with a new sports car. He admitted that his ambition is to win more games than anyone else in baseball.

He has a long way to go—and even the slender southpaw of the Los Angeles Dodgers admits . . . "I'd have to be fortunate to do that."

Koufax has two marks to aim at—the 511 victories posted by Cy Young from 1890-1911 and Walter Johnson's mark totalled by 42-year-old Warren Spahn of Milwaukee Braves, still going strong with 350.

At 27, Koufax is behind Young at the same stage in their careers, but is well ahead of Spahn had won only 28 games by the time he was 27 while Koufax has 81 victories after this year's 25-5 record.

Koufax, however, seems out of reach. He had 138 victories at age 27 and finished with an overall 311-213 won-lost record when he was 44. If Koufax were to pitch until he was 44—17 more seasons—he would have to average 25 victories a year.

It's not inconceivable, but it's not going to be easy.

"But anyway I'd like to win as many as I can," said Koufax.

TALKS ABOUT SERIES

Koufax quickly steered the talk away from himself and to the Dodgers as a whole.

"We did everything right for four days," he said of the sweep of the Yankees. "We had fought and scratched to win the pennant. We had the kind of club where every day we needed somebody to do something special.

"I can't help but feel we were fortunate. If the Yankees had beaten us in the fourth game I think they might have taken four in a row."

After the pleasantries, Koufax went outside to get his car, parked on the sidewalk in front of the restaurant. On the shiny new car was a green ticket, courtesy of the New York police department.

As someone noted: "Even Koufax can't win 'em all."

Dodger Scouts Plotted Big Sweep

Pitchers' Secret Weapon

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers' stunning four-game World Series sweep over New York Yankees was the result of a perfect book—actually 19 pages of loose leaf paper—compiled by three top scouts.

Carrying out the instructions and recommendations in the secret report, Dodger pitchers Sandy Koufax, Johnny Podres and Don Drysdale were able to limit the American League's toughest hitting team to four runs and 23 hits, only five for extra bases.

The weapon was provided by the information put together by director of scouts Al Campanis and two of his aides, Leffy Phillips and Ted McGraw.

The reports contained information on the strengths and weaknesses of every Yankee in the hitting, fielding and pitching departments. In addition to routine information, the Dodger pitchers learned which batters would lay off certain pitches, which they preferred, which they were most likely to hit—and in what direction the ball would probably travel when hit.

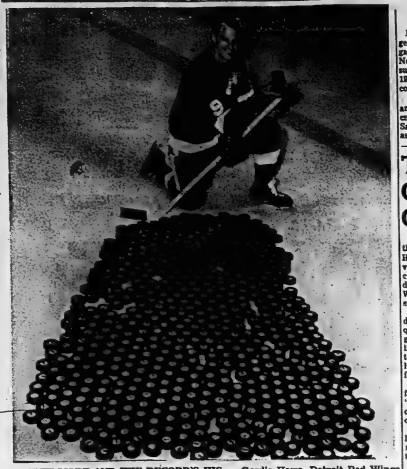
PRAISES REPORT

"I have never seen a more thorough scouting report," said Buzzy Bavasi, Dodger general manager.

The players were told which Yankees were fast-ball hitters and when they were most likely to try and steal or attempt to hit-and-run. On the other hand the Dodgers also learned when and against whom they could try to take the extra base, and which pitchers could be walked out and which could not.

Here's how some of the knowledge was used:

1. Drysdale picked off Tony Kubek at first base in the third inning of the third game, won by the Dodgers 1-0. The scouts had detected a give-away move by Kubek, which indicated the hit-and-run play was on.



2. Jim Gilliam did not stop at second when Clete Boyer's throw got by first baseman Joe Pepitone, racing to third and eventually scoring the winning run in the seventh inning of the fourth game. The scouts had known that Pepitone had a weak arm.

3. Shortstop Maury Wills was able to grab John Blanchard's grounder, to the right of second base, in the fifth inning of the third game. The scouts had noted it when they saw Blanchard he never hit to the left of second base.

WEAK ON CURVES

4. Clete Boyer of the Yankees was able to get only one hit in 12 at-bats, while striking out six times. The scouts had recommended a steady diet of curves.

5. Elston Howard, a right-handed batter, hit only one ball to left field in the four games. The scouts planned the pitches. Campanis, who revealed the nature of the scouting report only in general terms, declined to make public the more personal and secret disclosures in the reports. He said he didn't want to give the impression of gloating, didn't want to put the Yankees in a more embarrassing position and felt it would be a breach of ethics to reveal in detail the exact findings.

FIVE MORE AND THE RECORD'S HIS — Gordie Howe, Detroit Red Wings great rightwinger, will set an all-time scoring mark in the National Hockey League when the five pucks in his hand become goals. There are 540 pucks on the ice in front of him, one for each of the goals he's scored in his 17 seasons in the league. Maurice (Rocket) Richard, former Montreal Canadiens scoring ace, holds the lifetime scoring record with 544 goals in regular season play. Howe, who notched 14 goals in 10 pre-season exhibition games, is expected to break the record early this season. Detroit plays its first game in the NHL season at home this Thursday against Chicago.

Tiger-Cats Criticize Officials

HAMILTON (CP) — Although their team won the game 36-14, Hamilton Tiger-Cat officials are voicing disapproval of the officiating in Monday night's Canadian Football League game in Winnipeg with the Blue Bombers.

General manager Jake Gaudaur said Tuesday he "must question the officiating in this game" and indicated he will likely send a letter of protest to CFL Commissioner Sydney Halter, who viewed the game from the press box.

"I want to analyse the films first, of course," said Gaudaur. "But I feel that for the good of the game I must question the officiating in this game."

Coach Ralph Sazio said he had no further comment to make. "I spoke my piece to them after the game," he said.

Winnipeg lost 5) yards on penalties, Hamilton 99, but officials said it wasn't so much the penalties assessed as it was the infractions called and the interpretation placed on some of the rules which irked them.

HAVE TWO AFFILIATES

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League will be the only minor league club affiliated with two major league teams for the 1964 season. General manager Frank Pollock said an agreement with Washington Senators of the American League has been completed and the Triple A club's agreement with the National League Milwaukee Braves will continue.

Firemen Nudge Works 8-7

The Firemen, down and apparently on their way out of the Interdepartmental softball league finals a few games back, have forced a seventh and deciding game in the titular series with the Public Works.

The boys in red nipped the Works 8-7 last night to tie the set at three games apiece. Public Works led three games to one at one time.

The final battle will be played Thursday night, at the CNRA Park. Game time is 5.00 p.m. sharp.

Firemen unleased their heavy attack last night, pounding the Works pitcher, Gary Reid, for 10 assorted base hits. Reid walked a pair and his club committed three errors. Gordie Green was the Works catcher.

George Woodhouse pitched the victory, allowing 11 hits and walking one, while his mates bobbled but once. Al Ryan was his receiver.

Lyle Wannamaker continued his long-ball clouting with a home run and two triples for local winners. Paul Stephenson had a double and three singles while Harry Danford hit three doubles and a single. Reg. Christopher also contributed two hits, one a double.

Bill Pierce was the pick of the losers with a triple, double and a single. Goodie Green belted a homer and a double while Gary Reid had a pair of singles.

Tyder Team Captain

If Right, Palmer Will Play Palmer

By WILL GRIMSLEY

ATLANTIA (AP) — Captain Arnold Palmer isn't going to be timid about using Arnold Palmer in the Ryder Cup golf matches against Britain starting Friday.

"I intend to play the men who I think can win for us," the Frank Sinatra of Latrobe, Pa., said today. "If I feel I am playing well, I won't let my modesty stand in the way. I'll pick myself. If I'm off, to the sidelines I go."

As playing captain and star of the United States team, Palmer is in a bit of uncomfortable position and admits that the job has its drawbacks.

"There is one advantage," he said. "A non-playing captain can't be as familiar with the pros as a man who has been batting it around with them all year. On the other hand, the added responsibility conceivably could affect the golf of the playing captain.

"But I'm not going to worry about it while I'm out on the course to their liking. Neil Coles and start worrying, if I have to, when I get back to the clubhouse."

FALLON LEADS TEAM

The British are led by a non-playing captain, John Fallon, a Scottish Ryder Cup veteran living in England.

Palmer is optimistic over the Americans' prospects of retaining the stylish gold pitcher which they have won 11 of 14 times and never lost on a U.S. course.

In the first full-scale practice Tuesday, Palmer shot a 69, one-under-par for the 6,898-yard, par-70 East Lake course. Gene Littler, former U.S. Open champion, also had a 69, as did Dow Finsterwald. The other players were said to be around par.

The British also found the course to their liking. Neil Coles and Ireland's Christy O'Connor both shot 69s. Geoffrey Hunt and Brian Huggett had 70s. The others were close to par. They include Julius Boros, Bill Casper Jr., Billy Maxwell, Johnny Pott, Bob Goalby, Tony Lema and Dave Ragan.

Liston Or Nobody

Clay Won't Fight Chuvalo

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Cassius Clay has changed his mind again—he won't fight Toronto heavyweight George Chuvalo.

Clay said Tuesday he will not fight anyone until he faces world champion Sonny Liston for the title "in four or five months."

Clay said previously he would meet the winner of the Chuvalo-Mike DeJohn bout, which Chuvalo won.

But, Clay said, "Chuvalo fights like a woman. He uses his head to butt, fights in close and he's dirty. I could get a cut eye or something like that.

"My people and the Liston people are getting together now and we may sign for a fight within the next week or two. The fight may be held in four or five months."

However, Clay's comments were hardly uttered before promoter Bill King protested and state boxing commissioner Bob Evans said he would hold a hearing on the whole matter Friday.

Evans said: "King thinks he has a grievance and I haven't heard from the Clay group. I can't make a comment until we all sit down and talk about it. Clay did sign a document of intent to fight Chuvalo here, but that's not a contract."

VICTORIA (CP)—Billy Foster has won so many trophies in auto races he doesn't know what to do with them.

The 36-year-old Victorian won every trophy race he entered last season in the Canadian-American Modified Racing Association's Pacific Northwest circuit and easily captured the points championship.

The race promoters like to dress their events with big trophies and Foster, his wife Beverley and three children are finding things crowded around the house.

"They're becoming a serious nuisance, especially cleaning them," says Foster, who is nevertheless happy to win them.

"We keep the bigger ones in the basement and spread the rest around sideboards."

How many trophies has he won?

"I haven't calculated lately—around 100 I guess."

Foster, sales manager for an automotive company, says the Pacific Northwest circuit "isn't profitable" and he hopes next year to break into professional racing in the U.S., where top drivers earn more than $50,000 a season.

LOST MONE Y

"I won $6,300 winning car races last season but my 300-horsepower roadster cost $3,200 and I spent $4,480.67 on maintenance. So I lost about $500."

The cost of a car for the big American tracks is upwards of $10,000 and as a result Foster will seek a sponsor-owner.

"It's better for me to be a non-owner driver. I get a percentage. This November three of us will be trying out in Portland, Ore., for the owner of a $10,000 rear - engined Offenhauser. If I'm good enough I hope to get the opportunity to race it."

Foster started racing stock cars 10 years ago at Cobble Hill near Victoria.

"It was a lot of fun but eventually my interest lagged and I dropped out of racing. But when I started driving modifieds (cars specifically built for racing, usually by their owners) it was a new feeling. The faster traffic gets you. It's a challenge."

Watkins Threat To Brown

NEW YORK (AP)—Although Jimmy Brown staged another explosive running performance for Cleveland Browns against Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday night, Tom Watkins, Detroit Lions' punt return star, came nearest to being a one-man explosion in the National Football League last week-end.

Watkins played second fiddle to league champion Pat Studstill in running back punts last season. When Studstill was knocked out of action this year with a pre-season injury, Tom had to take over.

Watkins returned one punt Sunday 90 yards for a touchdown against San Francisco 49ers, ran back two others 26 and 43 yards to set up scores and had returns of nine and 16 yards on two more.

His total of 196 yards was an NFL record and his 90-yarder was a Detroit club record. Both had been set by Jack Christiansen, who hardly enjoyed his first game as 49er coach while watching Watkins.

CONTINUES TO LEAD

Brown, running to the outside as well as smashing through the line, gained 175 yards and scored one touchdown against Pittsburgh and held his place as leading ground gainer and scorer in the NFL. In four games he has run for 604 yards, averaging 8.5 yards a try, and has scored 42 points.

The next-best figures are 397 yards by Green Bay Packer fullback Jim Taylor and 36 points by Pittsburgh's Lou Michaels, who has kicked 10 field goals and eight extra points for 36 points. Brown also holds season records for the longest run from scrimmage, 80 yards, the best one-game total, 232 yards, and shares the one-game scoring high of 18 points.

Watkins, despite Sunday's performance, ranks second on punt return averages with a 20.5 mark. New York's Eddie Dove, who barely qualified with the minimum of four returns, went to the top with a 23.8-yard average.

RESIGNS GALLERY POST

OTTAWA (CP) — J. Russell Harper is resigning as curator of Canadian art at the National Gallery to devote the next 10 months to writing a definitive history of Canadian painting, it was announced Tuesday. The history, the first thorough study of the field in Canada, is being undertaken as a centennial project by the Canada Council in co-operation with the University of Toronto Press.

Cards' Keane Named NL Manager of Year

By SHELDON SAKOWITZ

AT THE PARK — Lloyd Boone and Mariette Hartley share the romantic lead in "Drums of Africa" opening Thursday at the Belle Theatre, with young singer-actor Frankie Avalon heading the cast of the exciting new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture to be filmed in Technicolor. The setting of the adventure-drama is Equatorial East Africa at the turn of the century. It is in Metrocolor. On the same program is "Frankie Avalon Presents Dolphin starring Chuck Connors. Both films are first Belleville showings.

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Keane, who piloted St. Louis Cardinals to a surprising second-place finish, was named today as National League Manager of The Year for 1963.

The 51 - year - old Redbirds' skipper was an overwhelming choice in the annual Associated Press poll of sports writers and sportscasters. Of the 71 ballots cast, Keane received 53 votes.

Walter Alston, manager of the world champion Los Angeles Dodgers, was second with 15 votes. Bobby Bragan, whose Milwaukee Braves finished sixth, got the remaining three votes. Gene Mauch of Philadelphia Phils, who was Manager of The Year in 1962, failed to get a vote this year.

The balloting was based on the team performances during the regular National League season.

NOT RATED THREAT

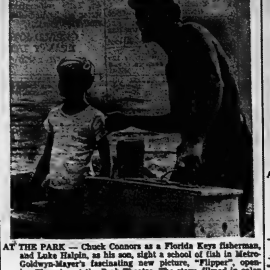
Cards, who weren't rated as a pennant threat in the pre-season, were trailing Giants in contention for first place most of the year. They began to fade in late August and were a third place, seven games behind Dodgers on Aug. 30.

St. Louis then launched a stirring stretch drive, winning 19 of 20, including a 10-game victory streak. Cards passed the second-place Giants and moved to within one game of the leading Dodgers by Sept. 15.

In a vital three game series at home-against Los Angeles. St. Louis ran out of gas. The tired - up Dodgers swept the three-game set, captured the flag and kept right on going to sweep New York Yankees in the World Series.

Cardinals finished six games behind Los Angeles and five games ahead of third-place San Francisco. They wound up with 93 victories and 69 defeats.

SIXTH IN 1962



In 1962, St. Louis was a sixth-place finisher with an 84-78 won-lost record, 17½ games off the pace.

Despite the lack of a 20-game winner, Keane molded a steady pitching staff that was led by Ernie Broglio and Bob Gibson, both of whom won 18 games. The hitting was solid with Dick Groat, Bill White, Ken Boyer and Curt Flood providing most of the punch.

Stan Musial, in his last year, supplied some key hits down the stretch and young Tim McCarver proved a capable catcher in his sophomore season.

But it was Keane who made the team mesh in his second full season at the helm. The veteran minor league manager had been a Cardinal coach when he replaced Solly Hemus as pilot on July 6, 1961. St. Louis was in sixth place when Keane was appointed manager and the club ended the season fifth.

Keane, who never made the majors as a player, was an infielder in the Cards' farm system. He worked his way up as manager through the chain.

AT THE PARK — Chuck Connors as a Florida Keys fisherman, and Luke Halpin, as his son, sight a school of fish in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's fascinating new picture, "Flipper", opening Thursday at the Park Theatre. The story, filmed in color in the Florida Keys, Bahamas and Virgin Islands, tells the story of the extraordinary friendship between a boy and a delightful dolphin. On the same program "Drums of Africa" in Color, starring Frankie Avalon. Both MGM hits are having their first Belleville showings.

Junior 'A' Exhibitions

KINGSTON (CP) — Peterborough Petes mustnstled Montreal Junior Canadiens for 40 minutes Tuesday night, then held on in the final period for a 5-4 victory in an exhibition Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game.

The Petes scored two first-period goals against Rod Vachon, Andre C hon and Rocky Farr, who shared netminding in the final two periods for Montreal, blanked the Petes after that.

Jim Sprott and Roy Pyke scored for Peterborough, and Yvan Cournoyer replied for Montreal.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) Niagara Falls Flyers gained their first pre-season victory Tuesday night, defeating St. Catharines Black Hawks 6-4 in an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A exhibition game.

Centre Ron Schock scored two goals and assisted on three others to lead the Flyers. Right Winger Ted Snell added two and newcomers Bud Debrody and Brian Bradley each scored once.

Fred Standfield scored three for St. Catharines, all in the third period, and Dave Steele got the other goal.

N.H.L. Stars

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston's Murray Oliver and Montreal rookie Ferguson Jenkins both two-goal scorers when the Bruins and the Canadiens played to a 4-4 tie at Boston in the season-opening game.

MAKES COMEBACK

LONDON (AP) — Terry Downes, former world middleweight boxing champion, made a comeback as a light heavyweight Tuesday night, knocking out Rudolf Nehring of West Germany in the third round of a 10-rounder. London promoter Mike Parrett said he has agreed with Angelo Dundee, manager of world light - heavyweight champion Willie Pastrano of Miami, for Pastrano to fight Downes for the world title in London next February or

Things That Actors Do To Change Their Image

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"Image — that's my lucrative today," said Clyde Mack, the cynical flack.

"Look, I've got a deadline," I insisted, but the unemployed press agent blithely continued.

"Take Elizabeth Taylor," he said.

"Heaven knows her image hasn't been the greatest," Mack said, "what with playing mistical handmaids, and all. The smartest thing she could have done was that tour of London on TV."

"How so?" I foolishly asked.

"Everybody loves a tour director. Did they throw wingdings at Burton Holmes and James A. Fitzpatrick? Not on your life. When the man got into that West and we had to say a fond farewell to Sarawak, everyone fell warm all over. How can you dislar Miss Taylor's husband."

"Which one?"

"Eddie Fisher, of course. His image got a big boost when he sang the national anthem at the World Series last Sunday. You have got to like a guy who sings 'Oh say can you see' at the World Series—unless you're a Yankee fan, maybe."

"Okay, you've made your point. See you later."

"I'm not finished. Another case in point: Frank Sinatra."

"What about Frank Sinatra?"

SINATRA IN TROUBLE

"He got in trouble because he allegedly put up Sam Giancana, the Chicago mobster, at his Lake Tahoe inn. So a few days later Sinatra is announced as executive assistant to Jack Warner at Warner Brothers. That will help improve his image."

"How do you figure?"

"An actor as Warner's assistant? He's bound to get the sympathy vote."

"They got to learn about image making in television. Jerry Lewis has been humble for two hours on the free screen every week and a mockup in the Ed Sullivan Show and then Mort Sahl's monologue gets cut and he calls the help 'incompetent idiots.' Jerry Lewis is telling people idols—it's bad for the image."

Laughs for Sale to Replace 100 Grand Sunday Night

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — After four or five days of soul searching, ABC has decided on the Sunday night replacement for the deceased 100 Grand. It is called Laughs for Sale and will consist of material by "as yet undiscovered comedy writers" performed by professional comedians.

Another panel show, it will have its premiere on Oct. 20 with Hal March, late of The $64,000 Question, as host.

CBS, after full, live coverage of last week's testimony by Joseph Valachi before the Senate subcommittee, quietly dropped the whole thing Tuesday except for a half-hour roundup which pre-empted an afternoon re-run of Love That Bob.

CBS last week let it be known that Valachi hearings had cost it $250,000 daily—and that they drew lots of complaints from housewives about omitting game shows and soap operas.

Ed Sullivan will present Wally Cox in Steve Allen-satiric sketches with topical themes next Sunday, with the bright comedy team of Bob and Ray among the satirists . . . NBC's February Hall of Fame special will be an adaptation of Robert E. Sherwood's Abe Lincoln in Illinois, with Jason Robards Jr. in the title role.

Horace McMahon, late of Naked City, has not much to do and few funny lines on CBS' Jackie Gleason show but, anyway, its steady work . . . Jerry Lewis has Sammy Davis Jr. for a guest shot next Saturday—and if he can't help the show, nobody can.

Recommended tonight:

Chronicle, CBS, 7:30-8 EDT—Three elderly people talk about changes they have witnessed of the years; Danny Kaye Show, CBS, 10-11—Carol Lawrence is guest star.

Name Triplets After Dodger Trio

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Mrs. Eddie Turner of Compton gave birth to triplets Sunday, a few hours before the final game of the World Series.

Tuesday, she and her husband named them after three Dodger pitchers. One is Donald Scott, for Don Drysdale; one is Sandy, for Sandy Koufax, and the third is Ronald Peter, for Ron Perranoski.

In the case of Koufax, the Turners decided not to borrow the proper first name. You can't very well call a girl Sanford.

LOCUSTS RETURN

Landslide Bursts Dam Killing 4,000

Gigantic Flood Wipes Out Whole Villages

Cascade of Water, Mud Overflows Italian Dam

(CP from AP-Reuters)

BELLUMO, Italy — A mountainous landslide plunged into the Valont Dam reservoir Wednesday night, causing a gigantic flood that wiped out whole villages and left an estimated 3,000 dead.

U.S. Army authorities—summoned to help in the catastrophe —said this estimate of the toll was given to them by Italian sources.

The cascade of water and mud that overflowed the 875-foot concrete dam — third highest in the world — all but wiped out several villages with a total population of about 5,000.

The U.S. Army's Southern European Task Force (Setaf), with headquarters at Verona, south of the disaster area in the Italian Alps, sent helicopters to the area.

A Setaf information office report said Gen. Lemuel Mathis of the U.S. command "indicated the toll may run into the thousands."

The Italians reported to Maj. Harvey Mayse (commanding the U.S. helicopter unit) an estimated 3,000 dead."

BODIES RECOVERED

Italian authorities said 200 bodies had been recovered by dawn, with thousands missing.

One of the hardest hit towns was Longarone, a community of 4,600 about 2½ miles downstream from the dam on the Vaiont River, a tributary of the Piave River. Longarone is at the junction of the Vaiont with the Piave.

"The town of Longarone practically no longer exists," said Mario Lavedor, town secretary, who was one of the few survivors. "Its life ended," he said, "there remains only an enormous mass of mud."

Lavedor told disaster struck the town at 11:15 p.m. when the sleeping population was awakened in terror by the roar of onrushing water.

Ford Men Call Talks On Walkout

OAKVILLE (CP) — Some 4,700 production workers at the massive Ford of Canada plant here continued today a wildcat strike which has paralyzed the entire assembly line since Wednesday morning.

The strikers, members of Local 707 of the United Auto Workers (UAW), planned a mass rally this afternoon at an indoor arena in Hamilton, 25 miles southeast of here.

Near-peak production on 1964 cars and trucks at the Oakville plant was halted early Wednesday. The production line, stopped with the close of the night shift, failed to start again when day-shift pickets blocked plant entrances.

Company and union officials had hoped production would restart with Wednesday night's shift. Instead, the workers went en masse to a union rally at a nightclub hired earlier by the day shift.

The union had attempted without success to arrange separate meetings, to keep the night-shift at work.

Picket lines encircled the plant during the night but did not interfere with management and maintenance staff.

MEETING ORDERLY

The 114-hour meeting was orderly and businesslike.

Edward G. Bruce, president of the union's Ford local, and Jack Taylor, UAW international representative in Canada, appealed to the men to return to work and pursue their differences through normal channels.

The men have demanded improved working conditions before they return to the assembly line. Company officials said earlier in the day they had received no official explanation for the strike.

Union directors and their plant committee called a hasty meeting and termed the strike illegal. They went among workers asking them to return to work.

"They weren't angry, but they told us to go back to our of-

U.S. Permitted to Store Nuclear Arms At American Bases in Canada Says P.M.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson announced Wednesday in the Commons that Canada has given the United States permission to store defensive nuclear warheads for jet interceptors at the Americ-an bases at Goose Bay, Labrador, and Harmon Field, Nfld.

All three opposition leaders complained that the new agree-ment, like the Aug. 16 Canada-U.S. nuclear custody - and - control arrangement covering Canadian forces, will now be made public.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said the available information is so sketchy that MPs cannot know whether "the sovereignty of Canada is protected or whether Canada is placed in a subservient position."

He said Mr. Pearson had promised to negotiate out of a nuclear role for Canada but that the government is spending millions of dollars for storage of nuclear warheads in this country.

T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, said the new agreement "forges another link in the chain which now binds Canada to the U.S. as a military satellite." Canada was being "boxed more and more into the United States."

Robert Thompson, Social Credit leader, said full information on the arrangement should be given to the Commons defence committee. The government should be pushing ahead with a non-nuclear mobile defence force.

Mr. Pearson said it would be "quite improper" to make the agreement public for security reasons.

He said there is adequate provision for joint control over the nuclear warheads at the U.S. leased bases. The agreement was based substantially on a draft prepared by the former Conservative government.

Mr. Diefenbaker said hotly this latter statement was not in accord with the facts.

Mr. Pearson retorted that Mr. Diefenbaker forgets he as prime minister now has access to the records and that what he had said was correct.

Mr. Pearson did not say—and was not asked—when the agreement was signed or whether nuclear warheads now are stored at Goose Bay and Harmon Field. The U.S. maintains one interceptor squadron at Goose Bay and a smaller detachment at Harmon Field.

Mr. Pearson said the agreement complements that of Aug.

House At Boiling Point

OTTAWA (CP)—Two highly-charged issues — recognition of Real Caouette as a party leader and storage of nuclear arms on Canadian soil—were fused in the Commons Wednesday and the sparks flew in all directions.

Prime Minister Pearson boosted the political voltage by announcing that Canada has given the United States permission to store nuclear warheads for U.S. jet interceptors based at Harmon Field, Nfld., and Goose Bay, Labrador.

All three opposition party leaders attacked the move, charging that Canada had been pushed deeper into the nuclear camp.

Mr. Caouette, the emphatically anti-nuclear leader of the Creditiste faction, rose to make his comments on Mr. Pearson's announcement, a traditional prerogative of party leaders. He was rebuffed by Speaker Alan Macnaughton.

The Speaker ruled that until he receives formal instructions from the Commons, he is bound by the rules to recognize only party leaders as recognized parties in the House."

APPEAL RULING

But the 13 Creditiste MPs appealed the ruling and the Speaker was upheld by a vote of 122 to 26. The Creditistes received support only from 13 New Democratic Party members.

Macmillan Won't Lead Party At Next General Election

BLACKPOOL, England—Reuters — Prime Minister Macmillan told the annual Conservative conference here in a message today that it would not be possible for him to lead the party at the next general election.

Macmillan's surprise announcement came in a personal letter to the conference and to Foreign Secretary Earl of Home.

The message said: "If the operation proves successful it is clear that I will need a considerable time of convalescence and I would not be able to face all that is involved."

Macmillan underwent an operation today to correct a prostatic obstruction. The operation was termed a success.

"I would not be able to face all that is involved in a prolonged electoral campaign," he said.

"Nor could I hope to fulfil the tasks of prime minister for any considerable time," the letter informed the Queen.

"In these circumstances I hope that it would soon be possible for customary processes of consultation to be carried out within the party about its future leadership."

'National Commodity Tax' Requested by Car Makers

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Automobile Chamber of Commerce, an associate of Canada's major car makers, said today the present federal sales tax, now applied at the manufacturers' level, should be replaced by a "national commodity tax."

This would, in effect, be a retail tax, applying to the end consumer of any product.

The CACC said the chamber in a brief to the royal commission on taxation urged elimination of the present administrative problems, allow the free play of commercial governments to establish one collection system for various regions in Canada, and use lower prices and the existing tax rate.

Because the tax is applied to the manufacturers' price level —substantially lower than retail prices—the existing 11-per-cent tax could possibly be replaced with one at seven per cent, said the brief.

Some goods should be exempt from the proposed tax—such as food, fuel, water and perhaps communications—and basic primary or secondary industries should be exempt, the brief traditionally exempt goods. If these industries resold the goods, they would pay tax.

Only goods used directly in the process of production would be exempt, the brief suggested. Such things as automobiles and office equipment would be taxed.

Under the present system, said the brief, the tax results in "ownership of the economy. It is included in percentage markups as the goods are passed down to the finals-

Ready To Take Control

OTTAWA (CP) — Backed solidly by the three opposition parties, the government today unwraps its legislative proposals for taking control of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada and four other sailors' unions.

Labor Minister MacEachen gave the Commons its first peek Wednesday at some of the unprecedented powers with which he plans to arm a special three-man board of federal trustees for a five-year cleanup of Great Lakes labor lawlessness.

Among their jobs, the trustees could throw out of office SIU President Hal Banks, named by a federal inquiry as the man responsible for violence and tyranny in the long history of lakes shipping strife.

Conservative, New Democratic and Social Credit spokesmen eagerly supported the government's move Wednesday to waive Commons rules and press through with debate on the controversial issue.

CRITICIZE DETAILS

The spokesmen criticized some details of the trusteeship plan but were united in support of its basic aims—to restore clean and democratic unionism to Canadian sailors in the SIU.

Opening debate on the trusteeship resolution, the labor minister warned that the Great Lakes situation is potentially

Jury Rules Four-Year-Old Died From Drugs Prescribed in Error

OSHAWA (CP)—A coroner's jury ruled Wednesday night that the death of four-year-old Gisi resulted from the administration of drugs prescribed by dentist Peter Cowan in error through an error in judgment.

Darlene Gaudett of Oshawa died in hospital June 25, a day after she had seven teeth filled. Dr. Cowan had treated nearly 1,000 children without difficulties of any kind.

The jury recommended that the administration of drugs by dentists to children under 10 be undertaken only after consultation between the dentist and the family doctor.

The girl died of bronchial pneumonia and cerebral edema.

The girl's mother, Ruby Gaudett, told the inquest her husband collected fruit jars at Dr. Zakarow's office June 19. She said she gave the pills to Darlene shortly before the girl's dental appointment. After taking the pills, the girl became drowsy, Mrs. Gaudett said.

Mrs. Gaudett said she and her husband made several telephone calls to Dr. Zakarow's office later in the day because Darlene had not awakened. She said she was told the pills made her daughter sleep but that she would be all right.

About 9:30 p.m. the girl seemed to stop breathing and was taken to hospital, where she died next morning.

Dr. Zakarow, who was given the protection of the Canada Evidence Act, said Darlene seemed nervous, highly-strung and apprehensive during a den-

Sobbing Pilot Tells of Horrors After Flying Over Dam Disaster

CORTINA d'AMPEZZO, Italy (AP)—"The night was just simply terrifying," the pilot said as he stepped from his little plane at the Cortina airport after the disaster. He shuddered and controlled a sob.

"I have never seen anything like it — not even in horror dreams," added Dino Menardi, 42.

Menardi and two companions flew over the scene of disaster shortly after dawn. Constantly brushing tears from his eyes Menardi told this tale of horror:

"As we came in over the town (a population of 4,600 residents) I could not see a single house standing, or any one of the two or three big churches. I believe everyone in the town must have been crushed in their homes while sleeping.

"All I could see was a bell tower, a tree sticking up and about a meter (three feet) above the water. Where I used to see the lovely vineyards and orchards, all I saw were huge boulders. They looked like they had been pitched by a huge pile, a rasp.

"You know, Longarone normally is way, way above the level of the Piave River, but the force of the water must have shot more than 100 metres (yards) in the air.

"It flattened a hamlet of 100 houses called Pirago near Longarone. Only the church bell tower is standing at Pirago. Large pine trees and beeches planted more than 25 years ago in the area are just gone.

"There was a large, strong wall of bricks and stone and mortar along a road from the railway station to the centre of the town (Longarone). That wall no longer exists.

"The valley—about four kilometres (2.5 miles) wide at Longarone—looked like a horrible desert.

"But what astonished me most was the sight of the place where two hamlets—each with

President Approves Wheat Sale to Russia

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Kennedy has agreed to allow the private sale of more than 150,000 bushels of surplus American wheat to Russia and Eastern Europe with the stipulation that none of the exports will go to Cuba or Communist China.

His decision, which in so many words was just good business for the United States, drew both bitter criticism and praise.

The reaction ranged from Democratic Senator Strom Thurmond's denunciation that it amounted to "arming our enemy," to Vermont Republican Senator George Aiken's view that "the deal should prove beneficial to both the United States and the people of the purchasing nations."

In announcing his decision at his press conference Wednesday night, the president noted that more such transactions may be made.

The Soviet-bloc countries, he said, "may also wish to purchase from us our surplus feed grains and other agriculture commodities" and he added:

"After consultation with the National Security Council, and informing the appropriate leaders of the Congress, I have concluded that such sales by private citizens of American dollars or gold, either cash on delivery or normal commercial credit terms, will be prohibited by the government."

Kennedy did not specify how many bushels and how many dollars would be involved in wheat sales.

Kennedy did cite a figure as an example to show how the United States could benefit from the transaction. He said:

"The sale of 4,000,000 metric tons ($158,800,000 bushels) of wheat, for example, for an estimated $250,000,000, and additional sums from the sale of American shipping, will benefit our balance of payments and gold reserves by that amount and substantially strengthen the economic outlook for those employed in producing, transporting, handling and loading farm products."

However, Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, assistant Senate Democratic leader, who was among congressional leaders briefed by Kennedy before his announcement, said the authorization cleared the way for wheat sales of $350,000,000 to $400,000,000.

Humphrey said some 146,800,000 bushels of grain would go to Russia, and 36,700,000 bushels to Bulgaria, Hungary, Poland and Czechoslovakia. Some other legislators said the sales are expected to total 256,900,000 tons.

The sales, however, will involve at least two U.S. government subsidies designed to keep higher-priced U.S. wheat and shipping competitive in world trade. Kennedy made clear that the wheat "will be exported at available American ship, supplemented by ships of other countries as required."

Kennedy said the sale would be made at regular world prices plus about 60 cents less than the domestic market price. The federal government has an export subsidy that makes up the difference. While the Communist countries will pay the low world price, the U.S. dealers will receive the higher U.S. price. De-

Hugh McMahon Killed Minutes Before Midnight

Post-Mortem Is Held At Belleville Hospital

KALADAR — (Staff) — Senior provincial police officers from Belleville today took charge of investigations into the shooting of a 63-year-old logger near here last night.

Hugh McMahon was killed minutes before midnight at his home, a small house on Highway 41, just two and one-half miles south of this community.

Police were still seeking the weapon late this morning in bushland and swamp surrounding the home, as officers sought details of the death.

Full details surrounding the incident were not immediately available from officers here. Investigations continued throughout the morning with persons being questioned at the local OPP detachment office.

Heading investigations here are Inspector Alec McDougall, and criminal investigator Lyle from Belleville OPP district headquarters.

Local provincial police were joined by officers from Belleville later this morning in the search for the gun which may have caused Mr. McMahon's death.

Police say he was shot in the neck about 11.45 p.m. last night. A post-mortem was being conducted on his body this morning at Belleville General Hospital.

Strike Being Felt Over All Canada

MONTREAL (CP) — Dogged and patient, mediator Judge Rene Lippe tries again today to settle the St. Lawrence River longshoremen's strike.

Judge Lippe, after seeing the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC) turn down his own plan for a new contract, called in the ILA for an afternoon session of more talks with the Shipping Federation of Canada.

For the first time since the strike broke out last Friday, the ILA's international president, Teddy Gleason of New York, is to sit in with the mediator and the shippers.

Consequences of the strike, which some authorities say is costing Montreal $2,000,000 a day were being felt Wednesday in various parts of Canada and as even as far away as France.

Western Canada would be particularly affected if as some fear, the strike causes Canada to lose some of the wheat sales she has made to Russia.

Some 60,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat were scheduled to move to Russia through Montreal, Quebec, Trois - Rivieres and Sorel which have all been closed by the strike of 3,800 ILA members.

MAKE APPEAL

The St. Lawrence strikers appealed Wednesday to Mr. Gleason for a request by international headquarters of the ILA locals in Saint John, N.B., and Halifax for an immediate sympathy strike. Locals there said they had not received any request, but members would vote on any such request when it is received.

The Canada - bound Cunard liner Carinthia, avoiding Quebec City where her sister ship the Carmania was into dockside violence while departing last Friday, was diverted to Halifax where she docked without incident. Her passengers are to go on to Montreal by train.

But the 27,200-ton Canadian

Suburban Areas in East Bellevil e and Hillcrest Get Posta Delivery Routes

Hint Necessity Development Of Haig Road

With residential construction pushing rapidly toward the eastern limits of the city, there is strong talk about the necessity of Haig Road being developed, complete with asphalt pavement, concrete curbs and storm sewers.

At the moment two draft plans for housing sub divisions are in for approval covering land on the east side of Haig Road from Dundas Street to Victoria Ave.

If the two sub-divisions are approved City Engineer Wilbur Purcell feels that development will have reached the point where improvement of the road will be necessary. The engineer has recommended to the public works committee that steps be taken to authorize construction of asphalt pavement, curbs and storm sewers under Section 8 of the Local Improvement Act.

Total estimated cost of the work has been set at $72,000 of which about $31,700 would be for the storm sewer.

The full cost of the storm sewer would be the responsibility of the city, while the estimated city share of the pavement and curbs would be $7,660.

Council feels the work is not likely to be done for a year or so, but voted to request the engineer to prepare a full report on the proposed road improvements.

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec Labor Council, made up of representatives from 65 unions, has decided to send a letter to the federal government protesting against the reappointment of Donald Gordon as chairman of the board of directors of Canadian National Railways. J. B. Hamess said Wednesday a resolution protesting the reappointment of Mr. Gordon was approved at a Tuesday meeting by a vote of 38 to 19.

An extension of postal delivery routes within the suburban areas of Belleville — notably East Belleville and Hillcrest — appeared to be imminent.

Yesterday, Mr. Temple reported from Ottawa he had secured approval from the department for all the routes requested after some three months of discussions, locally and in Ottawa.

Mr. Temple said that letter-carrier service to these homes now has been approved by the Postmaster-General and commencement of mail delivery of the residents install suitable mail receptacles. They include areas in East Belleville and Hillcrest.

Says College Expansion Is Slowed Down

TORONTO (CP) — Donald C. MacDonald, Ontario's New Democratic Party leader, said Wednesday the government is slowing down the province's university building program despite a critical classroom shortage.

He said in a statement it is doubtful whether the New York University and Scarborough College campuses will be ready for students by 1965 as scheduled, and the opening of Erindale College in Toronto may already been abandoned.

A proposed faculty of arts school at Guelph does not appear to be shaping up according to the original timetable either, he added.

The NDP leader said that during 1963-64 the universities received only 60 per cent of the capital grants necessary for providing larger facilities.

Two Charged With Murder Of Taxi-Driver

TORONTO (CP) — The preliminary hearing of two murder charges against a Toronto separate school teacher and his wife was told Wednesday that about 70 cuts covered the body of taxi-driver Michael Wurtz, 40, who died last month from a fractured skull and two deep stab wounds in his chest and back.

John Garbella, 29, and his wife, Mary, 27 parents of two small children, are accused of the Sept. 10 slaying. It is the first case in Toronto in which a husband and wife are charged with a single murder.

Police found the wounded cabbie at the foot of a flight of stairs leading to the Garbellas' flat. The taxi-driver was separated from his wife who is expecting her fourth child in January.

Const. James Paton told the hearing that Wurtz's shirt was soaked in blood, a broken clothes iron was at his feet and a blade broken off a knife was found at the top of the stairs. Wurtz died in hospital soon after.

The hearing was adjourned until Tuesday for further testimony.

Macmillan Well After Prostrate Gland Removed

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Macmillan today underwent an operation for a bladder obstruction and hospital sources said it was successful.

The operation at King Edward VII Military Sospital lasted about one hour. It was performed by Dr. W. W. Badenock, a Harley Street surgeon who specializes in kidney and bladder diseases.

An official statement after the operation said Macmillan had his prostate gland removed. There were no complications.

Macmillan, 69, entered hospital Tuesday night after he experienced difficulty during an afternoon cabinet meeting.

CARRIES ON BUSINESS

The prime minister prepared cheerfully for the operation, sending much of his day in hospital that day at a stay conference of state and political business with callers.

A brief medical bulletin said:

"The prime minister has had his prostate gland removed. There were no complications and his condition throughout and at the end of the operation was excellent. A further bulletin will be issued early this evening."

Three Recounts After Official Figures Given

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Three recounts are indicated in southwestern Ontario as a result of Wednesday's official count of the Sept. 25 provincial election vote.

In Brantford riding, the official count showed Mayor Richard Beckett of Paris defeated 19 fewer votes than Liberal George T. Gordon, who wound up with a total of 7,965 votes. The Progressive Conservative mayor already has requested a recount.

The other recounts are expected in the ridings of Huron-Bruce and Grey-North. They must be sought within four days of the official count.

In Huron - Bruce, Progressive Conservative George McCutcheon is the challenger. He probably will demand a recount within the four-day limit. He lost by 92 votes to Liberal Murray Gaunt.

In Grey North, the official count gave Liberal Hamilton Sargent a 24-vote margin over Conservative William Forsyth, whose final total was set at 8,838.

Mr. Forsyth was in Toronto when the official count was announced, but his son Arnold said a recount will be asked, probably sometime today.

The official count in Huron-Bruce altered election night calculations, which gave Mr. McCutcheon a one-vote lead over Mr. Gaunt.

With Wednesday's count in Huron - Bruce, the Liberals gained one seat from Progressive Conservatives election night total, setting the final legislature standings at 77 Conservatives, 36 Liberals and seven New Democratic Party members.

WANTS INDIAN FIGHT

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Indians must be aggressive and learn to fight for what they want as Negroes have done in the United States, Rev. Adam Cuthand of Prince Albert said Tuesday. "Integration means more than attending the same schools," he told the Saskatchewan Federation of Indians. "It means belonging to the same churches and taking part in the leadership and social groups such as home and school and curling clubs."

Capacity Crowd Attends Colorful Fashion Show

TRENTON — Last night's fall fashion show at the Trenton Country Club drew a capacity crowd of ladies. A handful of husbands showed up too, to applaud the attractive, tasteless, forward models and the event highlighted the talents of a few male models, slightly embarrassed, but bent on putting on a good performance to please friend wifey.

The show was crowned by Mrs. Jeanna Steenburg, who was also responsible for last spring's successful show and was emcee by Mrs. Barbara Patrick.

For the ladies, the show was a riot of color, with "cranberry red," predominating, but "sapphire blue," "pumpkin," "golden-glow," "black walnut," "peacock blue," and "coral," featured in the ensembles. Dresses were slim and short; jackets individual in cut and designs; hats ranging from the wide - brimmed, bewitching models to velvet "toppers."

The over - so - useful "little basic black dress" showed up with a variety of colorful accessories and the ever - practical tweed suit was also recommended for Oc^te clfmes.

T^ink, in variety, highlighted the coat collection. Many of the coats were freshly back from a European showing.

The male models, unhappy in their roles for the most part, featured sports or lounging jackets, dark trousers and smart topcoats.

Taking part in the show were Brian Hussey, Jeanna Steenburg, Jane Downs, Theo Tuzzeo, Lynn Cardy, Barbara Lalschter, Linda Gammage, Gladys Scales, Hilda Dowden, Beatrice Rumble, Edward Herby, Donald Hasbrouck, Alec Wilson and Douglas Adams.

Co-ordinators for the show were Hilda Dowden and the mistress Dorothe and the mistress decor, backdropping the show itself. Music was arranged by Jean Condette and Virginia Weaver.

Background music was supplied by organist William Long.

Lawyer Urges People to Make Wills

TRENTON — Trenton solicitor Robert H. Smithrim last night told the members of the Kinsmen Club of King Street's United Church of the inadvisability of failing to make out a will and leaving the dividing of one's estate to well - meaning government officials, who would do their fairly, from the legal standpoint, but who would be ignorant of particular family problems . . . and actually powerless to make adjustments to fit in with these particular problems.

Money and property might go to undeserving persons, simply because of a closer relationship to the deceased than other members of the family to whom children are concerned, the wrong sort of person might be appointed, by virtue of his relationship, as guardian.

The gist of Mr. Smithrim's address was that while you can't take it with you, as least you can see that your worldly goods go to the right people if you take the time and trouble to make out a will.

Fall Film Festival Will Be Held

TRENTON — On Monday, October 21st, the Trenton and District Film Council is presenting a Fall Film Festival. The sponsoring group for this event is Christ United Church and its organizations.

One of the films chosen is "Sky," a 10-minute film newly purchased by Zone B of which Trenton is a member.

The height of the Rockies on the rim of the Alberta plains, the film catches and condenses the astounding spectacle of a day in the life of the sky.

Another film, 28 minutes in length will be "Japan." This is an up-to-date report on the very big achievements of a very small country. Of interest to parents and teachers will be the film in color, "Kindergarten." It is a candid camera study of children being very much themselves in the delightful world of the kindergarten classroom. Concluding the festival will be shown "The Gift" where the artist employs color and music in the "animated" technique to produce a beautiful, thought-provoking work about Jesus Christ, our world and you.

Women's Club To Mark 10th Birthday

TRENTON — Next week the Trenton Business and Professional Women's Club will mark its 10th anniversary. Charter members are Mrs. Ethel Kennedy, Johnson who went on to become a regional advisor, and the present president of the club Mrs. Webb.

Coincidental with the birthday of the club is national B. & P. Women's Week, and a special convener appointed to arrange suitable activity to mark the event, Violet Kennedy, has planned a club dinner for the Trenton Country Club for next Wednesday night.

Guest speaker will be Maudie Bayley of Toronto and other members of the provincial body will be Margaret Ashdown, provincial president, Margery Pewtress, Colbourg and Dorothy Brown of Belleville.

The theme for this year's B. & P. Week, observed this week is "Reach Out and Grow," and might well be applied to the club itself.

In 1953, 25 "gaily-finished-off" Trenton women formed the beginning of the club and in 1954 the club was chartered, with 53 registered members. Now, 23 of the original members are still active in the 63-member club.

Each year, the Trenton club donates a $100 scholarship to a girl in 13 (grill), who is graduating from Trenton High School and the local club also contributes toward the national B. & P. project, "Ramallah," which is financing the education of seven refugee girls in Jordan.

Town Officials In Ottawa to Discuss Bridge

TRENTON — Today, Mayor James MacGregor, clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry and Councillor Gerald Weaver are in Ottawa, conferring with federal minister of transport, the Hon. George McIlraith and others of his department on the possibility of a 25 per cent government grant on construction costs for a new bridge for Trenton.

Ordinarily, the transport department assumes construction and maintenance costs for the swing portion of bridges crossing navigated waterways.

Present plans call for elimination of a swing portion for the proposed second bridge, as it will be built in such a way that boats may pass under it. But, say Trenton councillors, the moral obligation is still there as the department will be spared maintenance costs.

The Ontario government has already been committed by its minister of highways, the Hon. Charles McNaughton to pay 75 per cent of construction costs and Mr. McNaughton has made representation to Ottawa for the remaining 25 per cent of the cost.

Meanwhile, the usual traffic problem down Dundas St. E. and across the present bridge has been aggravated this week by detours set up for sewer construction. The block off of Dundas, Oct. 16 to 19 and highway will continue until Oct. 21.

Looking ahead to next summer's problems, Trenton council has asked the transport department to approve the swinging of the bridge at hourly intervals, instead of the present catch-as-catch-can method of swinging, which say councillors, aggravates traffic problems.

CROOK — In loving memory of a dear mother, Mary Ann Crook, who passed away October 10th, 1961. God saw you getting weary,
So did what he thought best,

You left us broken hearted,
And only God knows why.

Could hold,
Happy memories fond and true,
From us who thought the world of you.

New North Front Street Bridge Officially Opened, As Dignitaries Look On

Belleville's new North Front Street bridge was officially opened this morning and minutes after the 11 o'clock ceremony vehicular traffic commenced rolling across the wide four-lane structure.

Mayor A.M. Haig, assisted by members of the Legislature Assembly and with city officials, railway and highways department representatives looking on, cut the ribbon and declared the new bridge officially open.

"This new bridge means a big step forward in the progress of the city," stated Mayor Haig as he cut the official ribbon.

Also speaking briefly during opening ceremonies were W. E. "Sandy" Sanderock, MLA for Hastings West; Clarke T. Rollins, MLA for Hastings East, and K. E. Hunt, area manager for the Canadian National Railways at Belleville.

SCHOOL PUPILS ATTEND

Also attending the opening was Mr. Willers, representing the Ontario Department of Highways; Nick Dumas, of the firm of Dumas Construction Ltd., consulting engineers, who drew plans for the bridge; Mr. George Vandervaart, area engineer for the C.N.R., and Joseph Looby, president of Looby Construction Company, general contractors for the new bridge.

Close to 300 pupils from nearby King George Public School, took official time off from studies to attend the opening ceremonies.

The bridge opening will mean that school children once again will be able to cross the tracks by the North Front Street route instead of taking the roundabout detour route which has been in use since early spring.

Hastings East member, Clarke T. Rollins, said that with the opening of the new Belleville Bridge on the No. 14 Highway route out of the city, he hoped that the Ontario Department of Highways would now see fit to take over the Foxboro-Madoc county roads as a provincial highway.

And CNR area engineer, K. E. Hunt said the new bridge was a "wonderful step forward" as the railways' campaign for greater safety in the operation of its trains.

It is hoped that the proposed underpass at Cannifton Road could soon be constructed.

Alderman Jack Ellis acted as master of ceremonies for the bridge opening.

He said the total cost of the new bridge, including cost of construction and purchase of property for the bridge approaches was $432,130.

MANY BUILDINGS MOVED

Of this amount the Department of Highways paid a total of $154,982, as its share of construction and land acquisition costs.

The Department of Transport through its grade crossing fund paid $139,193, and the Canadian National Railways, $30,000.

Cost to the city of Belleville was $129,696.

Total cost of land and property acquisition was $191,876. Bridge construction costs were $170,763. Engineering and supervision cost $34,220, and miscellaneous items, including pedestrian ramp approaches, $15,404.

The Bell Telephone Company, Belleville Public Utilities and Lakeland Natural Gas shared in the cost of relocation of services, amounting in all to about $8,000.

Twelve buildings were demolished to provide new approach right-of-way and two others were moved.

FOUE LANE — Forty-eight-foot roadway of the new North Front Street bridge compares with the under 20-foot width of the old obsolete structure which it replaces. Bridge and approaches are lit with ten luminaires. Above is seen general view of crowd attending opening of the new bridge.

BIG STEP FORWARD in the progress of the city of Belleville was the way which Mayor A. M. Haig this morning described the opening of the new North Front Street overpass bridge. Mayor Haig is seen cutting the ribbon while W. E. Sandercock, MLA for Hastings West, and Clarke T. Rollins, MLA for Hastings East, help hold ribbon.

Quinte Power Squadron Opens Winter Program

The Bay of Quinte Power Squadron has once again opened its winter educational program, stressing safety in boating.

The program got under way this week with a sizable class for the qualifying course in piloting. The classes are held at BCIVS each Monday evening.

Also well under way is the seamanship course.

Other more advanced classes have been planned and will begin in the near future.

The program is used to equip power squadron members for safe boating and the principles learned on the classes have proven invaluable to devoted boatmen. Instructions are given free of charge to students.

Once again, the squadron is expecting one hundred per cent success for those taking the courses.

Youth Pleads Guilty to "Joy-Riding"

A Trenton youth, already on probation for taking an automobile without the owner's consent, today pleaded guilty to joy - riding before Magistrate T. Y. Wills in Belleville.

P.... Brunton, 17, was charged after an automobile, taken from the Middleton Park home of Francis Walsh, was found in Sutton, north of Toronto. In the car, said police, were Brunton and Walsh's son.

OPP constable Tom Hulme said the two youths rolled Mr. Walsh's car into a field away from the house before starting the motor, October 5th.

When Sutton police recovered the car the accused and Walsh's son were asleep in the car and the vehicle had run out of gas," said the officer.

The magistrate deferred sentence one week.

The United Appeal

The objective of the United Appeal here this year is $95,000. This it its maximum goal.

This is an increase over the objective set a year ago. This is because any organization expands at some cost and charitable organizations are no exception.

There is a great need in this city's midst and the United Appeal's services are in more demand than ever in the community.

It has been said the United Appeal would not be true to the reason for its existence if it did not grow. It exists primarily for the purpose of reducing the number of separate appeals, and to gain, by consolidation, greater savings in the operation of all.

Another advantage is that the various agencies can work closer together. Many problems that come to the attention of any welfare organization have more than one aspect. They need the care and help of more than one agency.

By being a group of agencies each experienced and equipped for a different purpose, any case needing help can get it in the co-operative ways needed.

Also a group of agencies makes possible overall planning in order that they may not carry out conflicting or duplicating services and may alter their locale and methods as changing times bring changing needs.

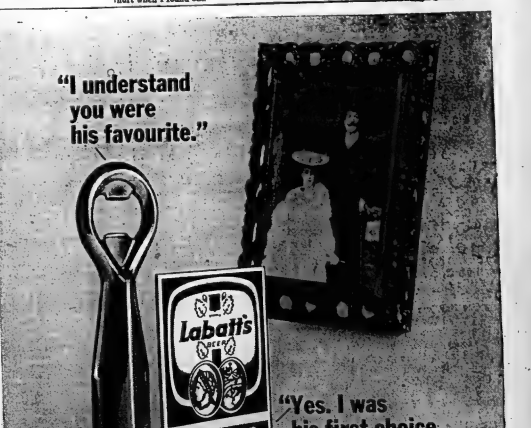
The face of human need is ceaselessly changing. And welfare services can function effectively only if they change also. Under the United Appeal general planning is keeping welfare in focus with community needs and is reaching out with foresight to anticipate the needs of the future before they arrive.

It is a big and varied service. In its campaign now operating the Appeal's higher objective is only the moderate measure of rising needs. And needs alertly seen and efficiently met are the strongest reason for support clearly recognized and loyally given.

It is a sad fact of life that some people do not get, for one reason or another, a fair share of the good things of life. They have a legitimate claim to help and understanding. The United Appeal in many ways helps them overcome their distress - and many times helps them to help themselves.

Think it over. Think how fortunate you are. You can appreciate this good fortune in a tangible way by giving generously to the United Appeal.

Wife Finds Out Hubby Has Another Woman



DETROIT (CP) — The Welsh wife of a University of Detroit professor charged Tuesday that her husband maintained her in one apartment in Detroit while keeping his Egyptian wife in another apartment three doors away.

Mrs. Hassan El-Sabbagh, 35, the former Frances Esme Jones of Wales, said she found out about her husband's arrangement because of a mis-delivered letter intended for the other wife.

Mrs. El-Sabbagh, whose 36-year-old husband is a professor of electrical engineering at the university, filed a circuit court suit for separate maintenance.

"I still care about him," she said. "I don't have any hostility toward him but I was very hurt when I found out."

Support Removed

Someday, when all the fuss and bother about conflicting ideologies has died down, someone is going to prepare a score card. And that someone, one suggests, may find that more democratic governments have been overthrown, and more tyrannies imposed, by anti-communists than by communists. In numbers of people ruled, the communists have an obvious edge over all other revolutionary regimes. But in numbers of regimes, the anti-communists have it.

In Honduras—the fourth Latin American country to fall to its own army this year—the new "provisional president" described his coup as anti-communist. The exiled president, the first one in a generation to have been honestly elected, claims the coup was planned to prevent an election on October 13th. The man who would probably have been elected, according to the deposed president, would have put strict controls on the army. And the provisional president is an army officer.

In the Dominican Republic, scene of the second last coup, the new government is anti-communist too. It claims the deposed government had been soft on communism, and it may be right. But friends of former dictator Trujillo, according to reports, feel it safe to return to the country now.

Few people are fooled by the "anti-communist" tag assumed by the new regimes. A military dictator is a military dictator, and while he may be opposed to terri-book communism, he would as soon see that as democracy or any other free government. But the anti-communist tag, to date, has usually been enough to inspire the U.S. to provide arms in support the new tyranny.

No more, though. The U.S. has broken relations, and more important, has stopped aid, to both the new governments. Anti-communist or not, tyranny must look elsewhere for support.

The trend is encouraging, to the democracies, and one possible side effect sounds hopeful. If there is no longer any military aid to be gained by being anti-communist, perhaps, fewer of these new tyrannies will call themselves anti-communist. And if that happens, communism has lost a valuable propaganda weapon.

No Smoking Signs Ignored

Smoking is not permitted at the Collegiate Institute when adult groups use the building at night. There are signs in the corridors warning against smoking, and the ruling is general knowledge. It is also often ignored.

Between acts of the Crest Theatre, Belleville Theatre Guild presentation Saturday night, the rule was flouted more openly than usual, perhaps because there was less than usual provision made to enforce it. And the reason is that the people who show up at such performances are not supposed to need watching like school children. Apparently they do.

In the double thinking logic of the average man, crime is only a crime when it is committed by someone else. The people who thought nothing of smoking beside the no smoking signs have respect for the law. They would be quick to call on it, for instance, if they felt their own rights crossed. But on all other occasions the law is expected to stand clear. And because the law has more important matters to attend to, the law usually does stand clear.

The corridors of B.C.I., obviously, are a safe place to smoke. The walls and floor are stone and brick, there is good ventilation, and the building is seldom crowded during an evening event. But for reasons known best to whoever initiated the ban, smoking is not permitted. And if the people who attend evening events there don't like it, they should do something about having the ban lifted. Laws do not improve when they are ignored.

The greatest task before civilization at present is to make machines what they ought to be, the slaves, instead of the masters of men. —Havelock Ellis.

It's a good idea to take up golf seriously at about the same time that you take up whiskey seriously, in the middle fifties. — The Earl of Longford.

Liberal Headaches Result Of Doing Too Much Too Fast

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — What this Government needs most, Senator Thomas Alexander Crerar has been quoted as musing the other day, is a tranquillizer.

And come to think about it, the Senator, one of Parliament Hill's oldest and wisest political hands, might have something there.

The 87-year-old Tom Crerar, veteran of former Prime Minister Mackenzie King's cabinets through the politically perilous 1930s and the war years, has been in Parliament as MP and Senator since 1917. That's a lot of years. Forty six, in fact.

SEE the aged-in-experience but very much alert political observer and participant, he has been one of the few authorities commanding respectful attention on all sides and in all parties.

Almost any veteran of the Mackenzie King cabinets — and two of them, External Affairs Minister Martin and Defence Minister Chevrier remain as Cabinet team mates of Prime Minister Pearson — would agree in his private heart of hearts with Senator Crerar.

The Liberal Government has got into trouble, it has been in a INDIGESTION.

IMPATIENCE COSTS:

Certainly, Stale Secretary and Liberal House Leader Pickersgill, that lifelong student of the Pearson Cabinet who worked so long in such close association with Mackenzie King, must realize that each time the government has tripped over its own feet it has been because of its own speed compulsion.

First, there were those "Glory Blazing Days of Economic Decision," a demanding deadline that the prime minister, in an expansive moment set for himself the day he went to Government House for his swearing into power.

That speed-up precipitated the Bank Rate crisis that continues to confuse and confound the Canadian financial community, fumbling around from bank sources, it becomes not merely dull but positively toxic.

Impostare falls when it must succeeds: the man who has fooled absolutely everybody must be the most lonesome and wretched creature on earth; for the love and trust he shared in order to experience any love.

Grave and prudent deliberation about marriage generally don't fare any better than hasty decisions; as Samuel Rogers remarked a long time ago: "It doesn't much signify whom one marries, for one is sure to find out something that it was someone else."

What it is totally impossible to know from even the most intense readings in history is whether people in remoter ages were happy as we are, happier, or less so; all such statements are conjectural.

Speaking of history, it is an arrogant mistake to assume that our age can be measured by us if past ages are not just as adult cannot be fathomed without comprehending his childhood; or, as Ortega so felicitously put it: "The song of history can only be sung as a whole."

Even all in all, if a man is dull he is considered "steady," even though he merely lacks the courage of his dullness.

The greatest danger to society does not come from demagogues and fanatics, but from leaders who lie to themselves; from self-deception is the most serious of human ills; every social reform must begin with individual insight, or it becomes meaningless and ineffectual. (If Hitler, for instance, had been simply a politician, and not a psychopath who believed his delusions, the German people would not have been enticed into such mass folly masquerading as "reform.")

The fundamental difference between the wise man and the fool — and perhaps the only real difference — is that the former learns from the mistakes of others, while the latter learns, slowly and painfully, only from his own mistakes, it at all.

It is much easier to hold to a negative than to a positive conviction; for every one person who knows what he stands for, a hundred know only what they are against — and can orient themselves only in opposition to something.

That's The Ticket

Hamilton Spectator

Some people are so sentimental. Each year provides a date worth celebrating. Either it marks an anniversary or something else very special. Even the challenge of getting that annual traffic ticket from a policeman. That's right, an annual traffic ticket from a policeman. Exactly what Lady Aline Barnett, 80, has been doing every year since 1905.

Last week Lady Barnett did it again. She drove her car in a careless fashion. At least that's what the arresting policeman said. So, for the 58th time since her first traffic ticket back in 1905, she has had a brush with the law. One would think that she gets into trouble on purpose in order to keep her record intact.

That's quite an achievement Lady B. But stay in England, please. Some of the others you social climbers that they might try emulating you.

To Your Good Health

High Blood Presure Does Not Cause Heart Attacks

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: A recent chest X-ray disclosed I have an enlarged left ventricle which the doctor says was caused by high blood pressure. I am taking medication for the blood pressure. How serious is this condition, and will it cause a heart attack? I am exactly 23 cents in coin and a self-addressed envelope for a copy of your booklet "How To Take Care Of Your Heart." — K. S.

Your doctor is quite right when he says that high blood pressure caused the enlarged ventricle, and no, it is not the sort of problem that causes a heart attack.

The left ventricle is the last of the four chambers of the heart through which the blood is, in turn, pumped. When it is called upon to work harder than normal, it tends to enlarge. And working harder it is, although not always, means that something is impeding the blood flow, so the heart works harder — and the pressure increases. That's what high blood pressure is about, really.

Enlargement of the heart, in itself, is not serious. But it is a result from some severe yet correctable problem. It threatens, however, the heart from not return to its former size, and more than the temporary legs of an athlete return to "normal" with retirement from sports.

Enlargement of the heart (or of the ventricle) is common in high blood pressure, and treating the pressure down to a reasonable level is important; restoring the heart to its former size is not. Indeed, hearts vary in size and shape to some degree, as do noses, but the point is making it difficult if not impossible to narrow down the word "normal" down to an exact set of dimensions. "Enlarged" could be compared to Clark Gable or Clark Gable was kidded about his big ears; however, he was not only a fine actor but also an attractive man.

So if your blood pressure is too high, take reasonable measures to modify it. Follow your doctor's instructions on medication — and you even have attention to what he tells you about keeping your nervous tensions under control, and the right sort of exercise.

Dear Dr. Molner: If a person has low blood pressure, is he not always stay that way? — S. A. S.

It doesn't necessarily remain low. However, there are some people whose blood pressure is naturally low, and it will stay that way. It's nothing for them to be alarmed about in most cases. In fact, it's a good indication that later in life they won't have to combat high blood pressure.

GEORGE DIXON
Seattle Post-Intelligencer

When I was a kid up here in my home town we used to go on Cockney hunts.

Anybody with an English accent was a Cockney to us. If a refined family from Liverpool, Leeds or Birmingham moved into the neighborhood we'd organize a Cockney hunt and chase the young.

This was all done in the spirit of lampoon and childish malice. If we'd heard of a racist, we'd have thought they were hablar de Cockneys race track nearby.

In this part of Canada we've never heard any French-Canadians; only heard of them. We thought of them as primitives, maybe akin to the Ignorites, who inhabited a remote region and communicated with each other by exclaiming "By gar!"

I've just discovered that Cockney hunts in Ontario are now old hat, but that the ignorance of English-speaking Canadians about French-speaking Canadians is as appalling as ever.

The Torontonians I used to play with have, unhappily, grown older in years, but not at all in understanding of their French-speaking fellow countrymen.

My Anglo cousins have no inkling whatsoever into the thoughts, yearnings and aspirations of the French-Canadians.

It isn't that my cousins are dead to sympathy; they've just baffled. They can't imagine what alternative to causing the French-Canadians to talk of seceding from the rest of Canada if they don't get bilculturalism.

Montreal bears a startling resemblance to Birmingham.

I can't mean just the bombings and killing over the race issue, although that experience has them the same as Alabama. The French-Canadians are determined to free Negroes to win job freedom.

The French-Canadians feel they've been discriminated against in job opportunities. That's true.

It used to be traditional that a French-Canadian who scraped past the education made a choice of life work in one of three: (1) priest; (2) doctor; (3) lawyer.

Now they want a wider choice.

Picton

Unveil Plaque At Court House, History Given

PICTON—Hon. Fred Cass, Attorney General of Ontario, officially unveiled a plaque at Prince Edward County's historic Court House and Gaol here Tuesday night. A large gathering of municipal officials and others witnessed the ceremony which designated the buildings as Historic Sites. The Court House was erected in 1832 - 34 at a cost of $12,000.

"This is a symbol of British justice and fair play," said Hon. Mr. Cass. In tribute to early settlers he remarked that the court house is evidence of their foresight. Take an interest in community affairs as your forefathers did, he urged.

Prof. G. F. G. Stanley, Kingston, representing the Dept. of Travel and Publicity, said this court house is one of the finest buildings in the province. He referred to the fact that Sir John A. Macdonald had his first law case in this court house, and he had been acquitted at another time of assault on a local doctor — in fact the doctor was fined six shillings.

Feature of the jail section is a double gallows used only a few times.

Norris Whitney, M.P.P., felt there should be a graduated scale to govern the provincial judicial grants towards court costs.

Others who spoke briefly were Judge Gerald Smith, Napanee; Mayor R. J. McFarland; County Warden Donald Bond; Sheriff H. J. Colliver; Major G. T. Wadsley, Prince Edward Historical Society president, David Taylor.

Donald Walker New Chairman Of Commission

PICTON — That another busy season is in the offing for Prince Edward County Agricultural and Recreation Centre at the Fair grounds was indicated at the annual meeting of the Centre Commission held Tuesday night. The Commission composed of representatives from various organizations, operates the Centre for eight months of the year under lease from the Agricultural Society.

Chosen by acclamation, from representatives of organizations present to serve on the Commission for a year were Gary Harris, Capt. William Weedle, Donald Walker, Thomas Walker.

Also members are Governors Mike Finnegan, Arthur Hamlin, Phil Dodds, and representatives were named by various groups who have a permanent member on the Commission. These are Herb Colliver, Emmerson Mason, Donald Stanton, a Rotary representative to be named.

The Agricultural Society members are D. O. Reynolds, Dr. Lionel Dockrill and Chris Lockyer.

The new board chose Donald Walker as the chairman; Herb Colliver, vice-chairman; Miss Avis Head, secretary; Arthur Hamblin, treasurer. Committee will be named at a meeting next Tuesday night.

REPAIRS to section of the Moira River's east bank below the Lower Bridge started yesterday afternoon as city works moved in a backhoe. Ground has been undermined by water.

Appreciation of the fine leadership and great deal of time given by retiring chairman D. O. Reynolds during the past two years was voiced by Chris Lockyer.

Mr. Reynolds referred to the past year as a successful one and noted the importance of junior hockey and the canteen in the financial picture. He expressed appreciation to many volunteers who contributed to the successful operation, and to the directors for their cooperation and thus given in this effort. He advocated more active committees.

Reports were given by committee chairman. Chris Lockyer said the Jr. hockey club is being rebuilt. Phil Dodds spoke of how profits from operation were put back into improving the Centre after one-third net profit was placed in a reserve fund for replacement of ice-making equipment. A great many improvements have been made during the summer, Don Stanton stressed the need for more time for minor hockey.

Mike Finnegan mentioned satisfactory operation of the ice plant.

Capt. Weedle revealed that the Jr. Canadian Guards would like to stage a great deal of activity at the Centre. He said many at Picton Heights are interested in figure skating classes.

Monthly meetings are planned on the second Tuesdays.

$3,335 PROFIT

Auditor's report revealed $5,235. profit on last season's operation, after $2,565 had been spent on improvements to building. Chief sources of revenue were junior hockey, $3,337 (profit); canteen, $3,337 (profit); public skating, $4,094; ice rental, $2,497; curling, $2,078.

Receipts totalled $33,152.56 including $3,843.46 balance from 1962 and expenditures of $27,917.65.

Citizens Object to Dawn Salutes

Crowing Cocks Get 'Pot' Luck

City Hall can now keep that rooster quiet which is waking residents with his early morning crowing.

This week city fathers added an amendment to the city by-law which prohibits the keeping of cattle, goats, swine, mink or foxes within the limits of the corporation. The amendment prohibits the keeping of domestic fowl.

It seems that during the summer months the persistent early morning crowing of a rooster in one section of the city resulted in a flock of complaints at the city hall.

But when the city ordinance prohibiting the keeping of livestock was passed some years ago, domestic fowl was not included and city hall could do nothing about the complaints.

So it was decided to amend the by-law.

But apparently the new amendment will not be a hard and fast rule for all sections of the city.

In other words if a resident in a non-built-up area has a rooster which doesn't annoy the neighbors there possibly will be nothing done about it.

"It is just to give a measure of control where a rooster makes a nuisance of himself," noted City Clerk Adam Stalker.

And there are possibly many residents in the city who wish a similar by-law amendment could be passed to afford some control over yapping dogs.

Self-Respect at Stake If Boy Accepts Hand-Outs

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm a boy, 18, who is going with a great girl. There is only one thing wrong with Jill and I would like your advice on what to do about it. In all the time we've been going together she has never once offered to pay my way to anything. I'd even settle for a Dutch treat once in a while.

I don't want to sound cheap, but when you go out these days it can get pretty expensive. Last week when we were leaving Jill's house her mother said, half joking, "Here's $5 — why don't you treat Wally for a change?" Jill looked shocked and answered, "Mo pay a boy's way? I wouldn't think of it!"

What I want to know is why wouldn't she think of it? What's wrong with helping out once in a while?

Please print this letter for me and for thousands of other guys who don't have money bushes growing in the front yard. — THIN WALLET WALLY.

DEAR THIN WALLY — To you, and to those thousands of other guys who are suffering from shell-out falter, I would like to say this: In our society it is customary for the male to pay for himself and his lady.

It is perfectly acceptable for the girl to crash through with tickets now and then, particularly if the boy has taken her out a lot. But no self-respecting male would want to be handed a $5 bill by his girl. She would be want her to dig into her purse at the box office window.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our lovely daughter was married to a no-good bum for almost two years. She tried every which way to get him straightened around but it was useless. Finally our own minister advised her to get a divorce. So she did.

After she filed suit for divorce she discovered she was pregnant. The baby is due any time now. Of course her ex-husband is the father of the child but she doesn't know how to word the baby announcements. Should she say "Mr. and Mrs. ..... announce the birth of ....." or should it just be Mrs. ..... announces ....." since she is no longer married to him?

Please set us straight. She is deeply concerned. — NEEDING INFORMATION.

DEAR NEEDING — Under the circumstances your daughter should skip the announcements. Friends and family will not need to be informed by mail.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband and I are in our middle 60's. We've both worked hard all our lives and now that we are at the stage where we could take things easier, our kids won't let us.

Every time we turn around somebody needs a loan. Last week our oldest son and his wife came over — depressed. They are "dead tired and need a vacation," but can't afford it. Will we lend them $400 so they can go to Puerto Rico for two weeks?

They own bills all over town yet they talk about taking a vacation on borrowed money. They still owe us $300 which they borrowed to get their furniture out of storage.

My husband says we should let them have the money or they will think we are stingy and mean. If they needed it for an emergency, I would say "yes," but I don't feel that we should lend them money for a vacation? What do you say? — STINGY AND MEAN ? ? ?

DEAR MOTHER — I say let them repay the $300 they owe you and when they can look the rest of their creditors in the eye they should save toward that vacation in Puerto Rico. It's a heavenly spot — and they ought to go — but not on your money.

Five Youngsters in One Family Singing Group

TORONTO (CP)—Mrs. Tom Craddock's children not only live in close harmony—they sing in it too.

Under her direction, the five Craddock youngsters have been welded into a singing group called The Teeter Totters.

Dressed in pink and white striped jackets, the four boys and one girl ranging in age from five to 10 have appeared on CBC television's summer variety show Front and Centre and may perform on the Juliette Show.

"I started off with a solo performer," says the petite and energetic mother, "then worked up to a duet, a trio, a quartet and now a quintet. Next it will be a choir."

Ken, 10, Tom Jr., 8, Bonnie, 7, and Tim, 5, all have attractive, strong voices with true pitch. And Philip, 2, does his best to follow their tunes in baby-talk.

Mrs. Craddock has never taken formal music lessons but has enough natural ability to sing in harmony, play the ukulele accompaniment and arrange the children's harmony parts.

The youngsters haven't had any formal training either but they have no difficulty with three-part harmony and only a little trouble memorizing the words.

They have 14 songs in their repertoire, including such Mills Brothers favorites as Dolores, Undecided and Balling the Jack.

Mrs. Craddock says she doesn't want her children to continue in show business as grown-ups but admits she has trained them as a group to obtain money for their education. She also works the night shift to help her husband support the family and paints in oils in her spare time.

GIVE WOMEN RIGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate approved in principle Wednesday a bill which would give married women the same rights as unmarried women in disposing of immovable property.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS BY PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E. Q.?

A person ordinarily may be the epitome of courtesy, but often he or she is thoughtless when it comes to a simple thing like a phone call.

Do your calls reflect good manners?

1. How should you announce yourself when you call someone?
2. If the person seems busy, what should you do?
3. How is an invitation properly extended over the phone?
4. If the person can't in, should you leave a message?
5. What should you say when you get a wrong number?
6. What courtesy should one observe when using a phone on a party line?
7. If you receive a call and it's inconvenient to speak at the time, how should you handle the situation?
8. If you receive a message saying a friend called, and that's all, is it necessary to call back?
9. Who should seek to end the call first, the person who is calling or the person receiving the call?
10. What's the proper way of answering the phone and of ending a call?

Answers:

1. You should give your name immediately. The person on the other end shouldn't have to play guessing game. Give your full name, "Mary Jones," when announcing yourself. Use of the title, Mr. or Mrs., is not good form.
2. Suggest you call back at a more convenient time.
3. Date, time and place should be clearly given. The conversation should be brief and to the point — but cordial, of course.
4. When an invitation is the object of the call, it's more polite to speak directly to the guest. If she is not in, find out when she may be reached. Call back yourself, rather than ask that she call you when she comes in.
5. Apologize, then hang up recheck the number and try again. Instead of becoming irritated, remember you're probably at fault for either writing down the wrong number or dialing the number incorrectly.
6. Calls should be brief, in case another subscriber wishes to use the phone. A call should be terminated immediately if another party breaks into your call to use the phone for an emergency.
7. No, not unless a return call is requested.
8. The person who is calling has the obligation to end the call when she's finished delivering her message, so as not to inconvenience the captive audience on the other end.
10. "Hello" is the most efficient and direct way to answer a phone call at home. "Goodbye," or "Thanks for calling," or some other pleasant phrase may be used to sign off.

Privacy can be frozen for later use in cans. Ring. It's best chopped while still crisp and fresh.

Contact Club Holds Harvest Hat Show

Christ Church parish hall took on a festive air Wednesday night when the Contact Club presented their Harvest Hat Show by Rita Minion.

Large decorated beach hats hung from one wall while another featured high-fashioned miniature hats uniquely framed in black. Colored leaves and fruit beautifully displayed, carried out the fall theme. The decorating was convened by Florence Lennox.

The guests were greeted at the door by Pat Spencer and Betty Tead.

MANY HATS SHOWN

The highlight of the evening was the many beautiful hats modelled by Mrs. Minion, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Knox and daughter Leslie. A large selection of rich velvets, straws, beaver felts, mariboux and feathers, all beautifully trimmed and lined, created and designed by Mrs. Rita Minion and Mrs. Laura Grainger were shown.

After the show, guests seated at individual tables decorated with candy filled nosegays and miniature hats were invited to come to the tea table, appropriately decorated with fruit, flowers and candles. Tea, coffee and an assortment of dainty cookies were served by Mary Niles, Barbara Jones and Doris Durand. The tea room was convened by Evelyn Beeby.

Other features of the evening were a variety table and bake table. Gaily decorated hat boxes, table centres and candles and artificial flowers delicately sprayed with gold and silver and fancy coasters were sold at the variety table convened by June Fisher and assisted by Irene Weatherstone.

DELICIOUS HOMECOOKING

A delicious array of homebaking was most popular and the tempting pies, rolls, bread, cakes and tarts were quickly dispensed. Shirley Harris convened the bake table, assisted by Dorothy Sinclair, Betty Kerr and Joan Ford. Those assisting Edith Pringle in the kitchen were Ann Trendell and June Woodley.

The advertising was convened by Connie Nash and tickets by Betty Tead and much of the success of the evening is due to Ruth Owen who convened the Harvest Hat Show.

"Lines on Life"

By Dr. Stuart S. Rossborn

The most painful thing for a human being is to grow up. To grow up means giving up earlier notions, favorite prejudices, previous mistakes, vested interests, habitual customs, modern and harmful patterns of behavior. We do not mature because we refuse to grow. One historian put his finger on the problem, when he said, perhaps sarcastically and perversely, nonetheless: "The only thing that history teaches us is that history teaches nothing." This is, ultimately, because we refuse to face up to the need of growing into new ideas and new arrangements of our personal as well as our group lives.

RETAIN POWER

The most devastating thing that can happen to a human being is for him to remain a child throughout the growing years of his life. We may perhaps be unaware of this, but the crucial thing about totalitarian societies is that which helps it to retain power over the minds of its people, is the fact that it treats its inhabitants as children and prohibits them from growing up. One most interesting example comes from the pages of a book written by Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, an astute psychologist and himself an inmate of the Buchenwald and Dachau extermination camps. He makes it clear that one of the basic perversions of the Nazi hate program was its calculated plan of making adults turn into children:

"The prisoners were developed types of behavior characteristic of infancy or early youth. ..ambivalence in the family, dependency, finding satisfaction in daydreaming rather than in active, time transformed action. During the transportation in a way in which a cruel and clumsy nurse might treat a helpless child; at the camp they were also debased by techniques which went much further into childhood situations.

The prisoners were forced to say "yes" to each question, which in German is indiscriminately used only among small children.

On the other hand, they had to address the guards in the most deferential manner, giving them all their titles. . .

NONSENSICAL

Another factor, contributing to the regression into childhood behavior, was the work the prisoners were forced to perform. Nonsensical tasks, such as carrying heavy rocks from one place to another, and back to the place where they had picked them up. . .There seems to be no doubt that the aim was perfectly planned, as well as the treatment by the Gestapo which they had to endure, conducive only to their disintegration as adult persons. . .

The prisoners lived like children, only in the immediate present. . .they became unable to plan for the future or to give up immediate pleasure satisfactions to gain greater ones in the near future. There were unable to establish durable object-relations. Friendship developed as quickly as they broke up. . . they were boastful, telling tales about what they had accomplished in their former lives, or how they had succeeded in cheating guards. Like children they felt not at all set back or ashamed when it became known that they had lied about their prowess."

My own experience in Russia, limited though it was, helps to bear out this truth about the nature of totalitarian societies. If you ask a Russian official an obvious question to which he is ashamed to give the true answer, he will respond in such a way as to make you feel that you are of low-grade intelligence that you have no real power of insight. The active program of turning adults into children, of prohibiting them from truly growing up is the basic prop and mainstay of totalitarian power.

LOW-LEVEL MATERIAL

In a not so similar way, we too, are confronted with a parallel situation. If you examine the contents of TV or of the average newspaper on this Continent, you cannot be unaware of the fact that these media treat people on the lowest level of common intelligence and appeal to the immature rather than the mature mind. They have so successfully done this now, and for so long a time, that they are prisoners of their own approach. The public has been treated to such low level material, such childish interpretations, that it has become used to it and now rebels against anything which might be done to raise the level. How many people are prepared to boycott TV until it gets rid of its stupid, childlike violence, treating all of life as if it were one endless run of cops and robbers, or sheriffs, wild-west shoot-outs and brawls? Not unlike other societies, we, too, fear growing up and prefer remaining children for as long as possible.

Speaker Says Canadian Fall Most Beautiful

The first business meeting of the Fall session of Christ Church Woman's Auxiliary (afternoon branch) was opened with Mrs. W. Ashton, president, conducting the meeting.

Rev. James Smith, Assistant Curate of Christ Church, and recently from Tasmania, Australia, used the devotional theme of "Thanksgiving". He pointed out to the members that the season of harvest in Canada is at a different time of the year than it is in Australia. Canadians celebrate theirs in September and October, while in Australia the season of harvest is in April. Very often the Australian harvest festivals conflict with the Lenten season, and it is very difficult to have a special celebration as the season of Lent is, of course, a penitential one. In the small mining town along the western coast of the Island of Tasmania there is not much vegetation, therefore the members of the church use the products of the ground to decorate the churches — even the mines, miners' hats, lamps and such small equipment as can conveniently be taken to the church to give and gather to give thanks for the products found in the mines.

BEAUTIFUL SIGHT

Rev. Mr. Smith reminded the members that they should be thankful for the beauty around them, speaking of the colored leaves on the trees in the fall season of the year. He has taken several trips into the surrounding areas of Belleville and said that he has seen one of the most beautiful sights in Canada in the fall of the year. It is a new experience for which he is thankful, and we who see it every year should be thankful for it for granted but give thanks for the beauty. In his homeland there is no fall of the leaves, except for a few ornamental shrubs around a home. Another thanksgiving is for the people, he noted was the coming national hockey weekend, when family and friends get together to give thanks for family and home life in this wonderful country of Canada.

As the devotional period closed Mrs. Jean Dennis and Mrs. Smith, speaking of himself and of others who are far from their homeland, expressed words of thanksgiving, reminded all that they should not feel alone, but share in the fellowship of the wonderful church family with God as its head.

The business period with all departments of the branch reporting, proved the W.A. to be a busy organization of working and sharing together. Mrs. R. H. Geddes, Diocesan Dorcas Secretary, gave a sketch of the aims and objects of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Anglican Church.

The W.A. is made up of 50,918 women across Canada from coast to coast, from our tiny remote villages in the Yukon and Arctic to the densely populated areas of Ontario and Quebec through to the Maritimes. Every woman of the Anglican Church is a member of the W.A. by right of her baptism, but by paying a membership fee, each is living in a parish branch and participating in the aims of the organization, she acknowledges this membership.

In 1885 when the Woman's Auxiliary was formed, it was an auxiliary to the Missionary Society, but as the times changed and the organization grew and the work of the whole church changed, the auxiliary became the Woman's Auxiliary of the whole church, working closely with the missionary department. The Dominion Board of W.A. accepts the responsibility for the maintenance of women missionaries and the work among women and children overseas at the request of the presiding bishops of the dioceses. The pledge fund which is assessed to each diocese by the Dominion Board, is met by voluntary contributions from each member and this is used for the salaries of thirty-one women workers in the mission fields overseas, and in Canada where needed.

The Thank Offering Fund is the personal "thank you" of women made daily in their homes for blessings received, and dropped penny by penny in a thank offering box. This fund is gathered in once, and the money is used partly for the education and training of missionaries, and partly for a pension fund for retired missionary personnel.

Items and talents are used in sewing clothing for children in the Indian and Eskimo schools, outposts of the Church, and social service needs. The members are encouraged to visit the sick and shut-ins, and through the Hospital Chaplain assist outof-town members who are confined to hospital. There are many needs amongst the members of the Church family, and in the community, and the members of the W.A. are made aware of these needs through study.

The guests were taken upstairs where Beverley Clapp, Marion Burris, Evelyn Harry and Rosemary Bush showed the visitors around in the afternoon. In the evening Kathleen Clapp, Verna Stickle, Mildred Stingerland and Gwen Vandervoort took over these duties.

The lovely shower gifts and some wedding gifts were displayed on two long tables in the living room.

Dolly Curtis made the tea and coffee for this event and Mildred Ketcheson invited the guests to the tea room.

The tea room was decorated with pink and white streamers from a large white bell trimmed with pink and flowers under the chandelier. On the table were two candelabra.

Harvest Home Tea At Mount Pleasant

MOUNT PLEASANT — Rawdon United Church was decorated with an autumn scene Saturday during a special Hood-lit workshop centre, the church hall was a bower of beauty with its large display of maple leaves, a realistic owl, and autumn fruits, vegetables and flowers on the table and window sills for the Harvest Home tea and bazaar held Friday evening, October 4th.

The colorful aprons of all materials and designs were displayed along with smaller items of sewing. The home baking table provided cookies, delectable cakes and a variety of pies. The country store had a large assortment of red ripe pies, golden pumpkins, citrus, jams and relishes, fresh eggs, homemade candy, popcorn and other items.

Several ladies were in charge of the three booths, where everything was eventually sold.

Guests were in attendance from Toronto, Bancroft, Huntingdon, Bethel, Wellman's, Stirling and Hoard's.

Mrs. Garth Anslin provided soft organ music. Mrs. W. G. Fletcher and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver received the guests as they arrived, and Mrs. Percy MacMullen was financial treasurer.

The worship was in charge of Mrs. James Hoard, assisted by Miss Enid Huntington, Mrs. Herbert Smith, Mrs. Donald Heath of Bethel, was guest soloist and Mrs. Harold Elliott was the piano accompanist. Selections were read by Mrs. Douglas Campbell and Mrs. Raymond McConnell, and Mrs. Weaver contributed an organ solo.

Mrs. Donald Knight introduced the special guest, Miss Hilda Ketcheson, a former daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Honey. She graduated from Bancroft High School and in 1958. During the following two years she made a personal tour of Canada, and in 1960 she spent two weeks in Mexico, and then went to Seattle, Washington, California. Here she met a Christian organization called Youth Campaigners for Christ at Colorado Springs Bible College. During this training at legs she heard of the need in Lebanon and she decided to accept an invitation to go with Rev. Scott, his wife and small family to that land where she spent the last four-teen months. She just recently returned to her home in Bancroft.

Miss Honey gave a delightful travelogue with scenic pictures of Lebanon, Jordan, the Jordan valley. The scenes showed beautiful trees and modern buildings and modern universities. The market stall scenes gave a picture of what is grown in that country. Natives were pictured in their flowing costumes and the terrors were most interesting, portraying the way of life in Lebanon.

Mrs. Thomas Sarles voiced thanks to Miss Honey for her gracuously illustrated talk on experiences with the group, and she made the presentation of a gift as a memento of the occasion.

The guests then visited the church hall and made further purchases at the three booths. They were served salad plate lunches by the ladies. Mrs. Clayton Thompson of Hoard's, voiced appreciation to the Hoard's Station group for a fine evening of fellowship.

Milliners Have Field Day With Hats

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters)—The Paris hat rack this autumn shows a variety of inspiration, drawn from history, geography, literature and art.

This comes up in concrete form in headgear ranging from crusaders' helmets, to Lawrence of Arabia "simplex," Sister Berchiels and babushkas, and Robin Hood clochés.

While dress designers stick to classic hues in the winter collections, milliners have a field day with hats.

The era of "pretty - pretty" hats has gone. In Paris, it is smart to be slightly eccentric.

Yves St. Laurent divides attention between helmets and Robin Hood hats. In turns, the helmets vary in style from the middle ages' crusader's coat of mail effect to the helmet - hugging space caps which are strictly 20th century.

St. Laurent's helmets are made of supple furs, suede, velvet, or wool jersey.

Get inspiration

King Louis XI hats stress the theme of the middle ages. They are trimmed with gold or silver lamé shafts for the wear and come in all-jewelled versions for the evening.

Jacques Esterel endorses monastic - type hoods while Svend, of Jacques Griffe, copies Joan of Arc's helmet. A snugfitting calot crown unsips from the top of the head and is worn separately.

Capucci's helmet-cloches are featured in high smothered in materials such as shiny lizard and cobra skins dyed in rainbow colors and sequins.

Africa enters the military range at Heim with helmets in leopard skin and sequin enough to roll into a handbag. Foxy and ochre skin go to the head, and then bite into the purse.

Bernard Devaux, the Lanvin milliner who has also created all the last two Lanvin dress collections, shows sun helmets and caps with a backward profile featuring styling from darkest Africa. In another mood, he goes circus-mantic, with huge hats inspired by the wonderfully elegant turn-of-the-century portraits by Boldini.

WEDDING

RINCE — BROWN

St. Charles Borromeo Roman Catholic Church, Read, was the scene of a pretty summer wedding when Anna Doreen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Brown, R.R. 3, Roblin, became the bride of William Joseph Hinch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hinch of Tamworth. Rev. W. V. Hamilton heard the marriage vows at the double ring ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass before the altar, adorned with pink and white gladioli.

Denis Nolan presided at the organ and accompanied Mrs. David MacAlister as soloist. Mr. Nolan also sang one number.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a full-length bridal gown of satin and lace brocade featuring a round neckline, lily point sleeves and a fitted waist. The bride's gown covered the back of the semi-full skirt. Her shoulder-length tulle illusion with a scalloped edge was held by a headdress of tulle lily points accented with light pearl clusters. She carried a cascade of pink glow tinted miniature carnations centred with a solitary white orchid.

Miss Lorraine Barrett, Belleville, cousin of the bridegroom, as maid-of-honor, wore a silk green sheath dress with organza over silk taffeta and a matching short lace back-buttoned jacket. A pink headdress of ruffled mohair centred with a fabric flower, white shoes and gloves and carried a cascade of white gladioli.

Miss Patsy Ann Hinch, Tamworth, the bridegroom's only sister, was flower-girl frocked in white satin brocade identical to the bride's, with a full skirt, short sleeves, round neckline and a sash tying in the back. Her headdress was made similar to that of the other attendants. She carried a cascade of pink glow tinted miniature carnations.

Leonard Hinch of Tamworth, attended his brother as groomsman. The bride's father, Clifford of Erinsville, cousin of the bridegroom and Dale Brown of Roblin, acted as ushers. The bride, ushered the guests. Master Maurice Powers of Tamworth, cousin of the bridegroom was ringbearer.

Here the reception following in Read parish hall, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a black dress of Nylon organza over green and white printed silk, with matching accessories, white carnation and a corsage of yellow roses. Assisting in receiving, the bridegroom's mother wore a sheath dress of light blue rayon and nylon lace over taffeta with matching jacket, light blue and beige accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

The bride's grandmother, Mrs. Frances Brown of Roblin, attended the wedding wearing a three piece black and white linen suit, black and white accessories and a mauve orchid corsage.

Dancing to Denis Nolan and his orchestra was enjoyed by all in the afternoon.

For the wedding trip around Lake Ontario the bride chose a gold satin brocade sheath with the matching redingote being completely covered with gold crystal organza. White accessories and a white orchid corsage with yellow throat completed her ensemble.

Guests were present from Prescott, Brockville, Kingston, Stella, Centreville, Napanee, Roblin, Toronto, Ayr, West Hill, Belleville, Tamworth, and Erinsville, including Rev. Feeley from Erinsville parish.

The young couple have taken up residence in Tamworth.

Prior to her marriage the bride was entertained at a miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. Robert O'Brien, Belleville, also a miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. Garnet Brown and Mrs. Clair Jordan, both of Roblin and at a party shower given by Mrs. Court Bralley and Miss Sheila Stanton, both of Belleville. Upon leaving the city of Belleville, the staff of the treasury department presented the bride with a kitchen clock and Local 140 presented her with a table lamp.

The bridegroom was guest of honor at a stag party where he received a purse of money.

Mr. and Mrs. William Joseph Hinch are shown cutting the wedding cake after their marriage in St. Charles Borromeo Roman Catholic Church, Read, Ontario. The bride is the former Anna Doreen Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Brown, R. R. 3, Roblin. Mr. Hinch is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hinch of Tamworth.

Desserts for Thanksgiving Dinner

by Mary Moore

The traditional Thanksgiving dinner dessert is pumpkin pie. But characteristically I wanted a change, so clinging to the pumpkin idea so that not too many would be jarred, I made a pumpkin steamed pudding. It is delicious. I tasted it all alone at ten o'clock last night — a little serving topped with cranberry hard sauce. I did a little jig because it was a success.

STEAMED PUMPKIN PUDDING (serves 8):

1½ cups stirred but not sifted flour, ½ teaspoon baking soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup butter or margarine, ¾ cup sugar, 1 egg, ½ cup dark molasses, grated rind 1 orange, ½ cup buttermilk or sour milk, ¾ cup canned pumpkin, ½ cup coconut (I used desiccated unsweetened).

Sift flour with baking soda, baking powder, ginger, cinnamon and salt. In mixing bowl cream the butter or margarine until light. Add sugar, continuing to cream until fluffy. Stir in egg, molasses, orange rind. Add dry ingredients alternately with buttermilk or sour milk. Stir in pumpkin and coconut. Pour into greased 6-cup pudding mould. Cover mould. If it has no lid use foil, pressing it to edges tightly. Place mould on a rack in a pan of boiling water. Have enough water to submerge one-half of mould. Cover. Steam 2 to 3½ hours. (If made in advance and foil wrapped, steam one hour to reheat.) Serve warm with Cranberry Hard Sauce: One-third cup butter or margarine, 1 cup icing sugar, 2 tablespoons canned cranberry sauce. Cream butter or margarine until light. Stir in sugar and cranberry and beat until smooth. Chill until hard.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY: (Guests)

Baked Ham Slice (see Tuesday, October 1st.); Apple Chutney; Buttered Carrot Strips; Creamed Green Beans; Tomato and Endive Salad; Cottage Pudding with Butterscotch Sauce; Tea.

SUNDAY

Roast Standing Ribs of Beef; Horseradish; Duchess Potatoes; Brussels Sprouts; Hearts of Lettuce with Roquefort Dressing; Canteloupe Balls in Lemon Syrup; Simple Chiffon Cake (see Tuesday); Coffee.

CREME BRULEE WITH POACHED GREEN GAGE PLUMS:

Note: This is an elegant dessert — rightly quite rich but it may be made less rich. See list of ingredients.

3 cups 32% cream (or 1½ cups 18% per cent cream and 1½ cups homogenized milk), 6 egg yolks, beaten until thick.

Heat cream (or cream and milk) until it begins to shimmer on top. Do not boil. Over low heat slowly stir in egg yolks which have been beaten until very thick. Stir constantly until it thickens but do not boil. Remove from heat and pour into a shallow baking dish. I used a deep 9" pyrex pie plate. Chill. About one hour before serving this sprinkle top evenly with about 1-3 cup sifted light brown sugar. Stand about 4" from hot broiler until sugar melts — about 1 minute. Chill again. Serve with fancy canned fruits such as chilled whole apricots or figs or poached green gage plums: Wash and prick skins of 16 green gage plums. Make a simple syrup by combining 2 cups water with ¾ cup sugar. Bring to boil. Drop in prepared plums and poach until a little bit tender. Carefully skim out and boil. Turn into cut-glass serving dish and pour cooled syrup over. Serve 2 plums with a little syrup beside a serving of creme brulee on each dessert plate.

SHALLOW PAN

Turkey or chicken will cook more evenly if placed in a shallow roasting pan.

Discuss Need In Church Work For Leadership

The October meeting of the Evening Auxiliary of St. Andrew's Presbyterian W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. J. Allen, 91 Southview Ave. Mrs. C. Hetzer was co-hostess.

Mrs. J. Ritchie was appointed as the Auxiliary's representative on the Christian Education Committee of the church. There is great concern in the church over the crisis in the leadership of youth groups. Leaders and assistants are needed for children of the church, Explorers and CGIT. Children of the Church is a group for children 6-8 who learn of life in the mission fields of the church and spend some time each week on crafts, whenever possible applying the craft to the study. Explorers is for children 9-13, who handle their own meetings, organize their games and also study missionary work and do handicrafts.

CGIT is a group for older girls whose aim is to help others. These girls have a missionary study book, do craft work and through projects earn money to contribute to the W.M.S. All these groups are very worthwhile in the leadership training and the knowledge of church work that they give the children.

CHANGING PATTERN

The study, given by Mrs. Allan and Mrs. Hulme was based on the challenge facing the church as the result of the changing pattern of city life.

In the first place it is difficult for the church to establish any contact with apartment dwellers. The downtown churches appear to be dying as so many former city residents move out from the city and industrial areas take their place. There is an especially great need for the church to reach out to senior citizens and to the young people, new to the city, living alone in these areas. Christians must show their social concern for the people of the city.

Do Bridesmaids Open Gifts?

By DORIS CLARE

DORIS CLARE

Attendants may

DEAR DORIS — Is it or is it not the duty of a matron of honor and bridesmaid to open the wedding gifts during the reception, or is it up to the bride to open her own gifts?

Your answer will be greatly appreciated as this has been discussed many times. — WEDDING GUEST.

DEAR WEDDING GUEST — Supposing you, a family friend, shop around for just the right thing, spend your hard earned money on it, then wrap it up with a shining big bow — who would you have open it?

None but the bride herself will do! hover around and help.

DEAR DORIS — I am a man of 28 with a good social standing, but am still living single, because I am interested in pretty girls, but they do not show me a bit of interest. Needless to say I am not interested in homely girls who sometimes sniffs at me.

I hear that there are marriage bureaus which help bachelors to find suitable wives. Can you tell me if there are such institutions in Canada? — STILL A BACHELOR.

DEAR STILL — Either you are too fussy or the girls are. For one thing, shouldn't a man your age be looking for something more lasting in a woman than prettiness? Such as a common interest, or a loving disposition?

I'm afraid I can't suggest a marriage bureau.

DEAR DORIS — In December 1952 a salesman came to sell me a hearing aid. I ordered one, paid $160 down, and the aid was to be delivered in two months. When it came it didn't fit, so he took it back to fit, and then brought it back when I wasn't home. It still didn't fit.

I wrote to them twice but they didn't pay any attention. After some time I sent the aid back and wanted my money back. (I had paid $328 altogether.) I hadn't had any use of the aid at all.

Now it is eight months; no money, no aid, no word of any kind. What advice can you give me? — BEEN HAD.

DEAR BEEN HAD — Assemble your facts, receipts, mailing slip, and get to the doctor who prescribed the aid. His pressure should get some action, as he is an important source of business.

If you bought it on your own, you could send a registered letter to the company's manager and follow it up with a visit to the police.

MOM'S A MUSICIAN — Lotta Brott, wife of Montreal composer-conductor Alexander Brott, practises the cello with her 12-year-old son Dennis. Mrs. Brott whose son Boris this fall became assistant conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra generally deals with all the details involved in running an orchestra, making arrangements for tours, organizing scores for concerts and still finds time to practise for appearance for weekly radio and television concerts. (CP Photo)

Mother Calls Herself 'Unimportant Member' Of a Musical Family

By JANET KASK

MONTREAL (CP) — Lotta Brott, a charming brunette, calls herself the "unimportant member" of a family of talented musicians.

A cellist herself, she is the wife of Montreal composer-conductor Alexander Brott and the mother of 18-year-old prodigy Boris Brott who this fall became assistant conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Another son, Dennis, 12, is a promising young cellist.

"It's one thing being a musician," says Mrs. Brott. "It's another thing being the wife of a musician. But being the wife of a conductor is the worst thing of all."

She laughed when she made the remark. What she meant is that being the wife of a conductor means being a sort of chief administrator for the Brott family.

She makes arrangements for tours, organizes scores for concerts, writes letters and generally deals with all the details involved in running an orchestra—besides practising two or three hours a day, appearing for weekly radio and television concerts and being a housewife and mother.

Her husband is conductor of the McGill Chamber Orchestra and a professor at the McGill Conservatory. Mrs. Brott, a lively woman with a warm smile, reflected that it must be "terrible for a husband to be married to a musician" because the hours are so irregular. But a family of musicians could understand one another's problems.

SONS KNEW PRICE

Both she and her husband travel in their work. During a concert tour of the Soviet Union by the Montreal Symphony Orchestra, she was impressed by audiences. "Everyone is a music lover there," she said. Some enthusiasts wanted to "shake hands with the entire orchestra."

Both boys in the Brott family wanted musical careers. "They went into it with their eyes wide open," said their proud mother. They were well aware of what it demanded, having lived with musical parents.

Mrs. Brott recalled Boris's early interest in music. At two he pretended to conduct a recording of Brahms's First Symphony with a tiny baton. He played a violin concerto with the Montreal Symphony at five, and later founded the Youth Orchestra of Montreal. He was a finalist in the International Conductors Competition in Europe last year.

"People often ask me how I like being conducted by my own son. But when I'm playing and involved in the music I don't even give it a thought."

Mrs. Brott, now 41, was born in Germany. Her father was a pianist and her mother a violinist. "I was supposed to be a cellist to make a trio." She began her musical career playing trios with her family and later studied in Switzerland.

When she was 17 she came to Canada. At 19 she joined the Montreal Symphony Orchestra and married Alexander Brott when she was 21.

Harvest Glads In October

It is time to start digging gladiolus corms now. The usual method is dig the plants and then cut the tops off close to the corms. Horticulturists with the Ontario Department of Agriculture recommend that the corms should be dusted with 5% DDT dust immediately after digging. This will give an effective control of thrips and prevent a buildup of these insects during drying and curing.

Make sure the corms are thoroughly dried before storing. This is essential to prevent storage diseases. Drying may be accomplished by exposing the corms to sun and air or they may be dried indoors in a warm, well-ventilated atmosphere.

In about a month the old corms and roots can be removed and discarded. Leave the husks on the new corms for protection. Dust again with 5% DDT dust and store in 45 to 50 F temperature for the winter. The atmosphere should be dry and well-ventilated.

Strike

Pacific liner Empress of Canada and the Greek Line's 29,000-ton Arkadia were still lying at anchor off the Island of Orleans below Quebec City. The Empress, at anchor since Tuesday night, has 600 passengers aboard while the Arkadia, which arrived Wednesday, has 313.

There were unconfirmed reports, however, that the Empress would sail downstream today, heading either to a Maritimes port or back to the United Kingdom from where its passengers would be flown to Canada.

In Saskatoon, the Saskatchewan Farmers' Union urged the federal government to take action to end the strike, saying it is no longer a matter of local concern only.

WOOD LOAD EXHIBITS

In Montreal Wednesday, Mayor Jean Drapeau twice appealed to the longshoremen for help in getting some of the exhibits of a French trade fair here off the docks. The exhibits are mostly unloaded and are in storage sheds but the ILA spokesmen have refused to allow trucks on the waterfront and won't load the exhibits themselves.

Mayor Drapeau attended the longshoremen's mass meeting early Wednesday when they rejected Judge Lippe's formula, and received a longshoremen's delegation at city hall in the afternoon.

The French exhibition opens Friday and as far there has been no hint as to whether the exhibits will make it.

The strikers complained to Mayor Drapeau about police treatment of longshoremen since the strike began mentioning what they called "some unfair arrests." Mr. Drapeau promised them all possible co-operation.

Police and longshoremen had a run-in Wednesday after roving groups of ILA members struck at various points across a seven-mile stretch of harbor, casting off the mooring lines of ships that have docked since the strike started.

REJECT PROPOSALS

At the morning meeting, the longshoremen turned down Judge Lippe's proposal for a three-year contract with wage increases of 10 cents an hour in each year.

Union sources indicate the men are not quarreling with the 40-cent increase but fringe benefits and working conditions are still a bone of contention.

The sources say the men want time-and-a-half for Saturday work paid as of this year and not in the third year of a three-year contract.

They are also holding out for a two-year contract.

The men get $2.33 an hour and estimate fringe benefits at 39 cents an hour.

They first asked for a wage increase of 35 cents an hour over two years, plus 10 cents more in fringe benefits, but it is believed the wage demands were cut at a meeting last Sunday which revised the union position.

The shippers have not announced their proposals since last March, when they and the ILA executive reached agreement on a 15-cent increase over two years, plus four cents in fringe benefits. IL A members rejected this.

Both sides rejected a conciliation board recommendation in September for a package increase of 22 cents an hour over two years, of which three cents would have been in fringe benefits.

fices and mind our own business," Mr. Bruce said.

PROTEST EXPERTS

He said the main causes of dissatisfaction are a speedup on production lines and employment of experts imported from the United States.

One picket contended that workers who are unable to keep up with the increased work pace or who complain about it are dismissed.

The spontaneous stoppage followed the suspension of a worker after a scuffle with a foreman.

Production of 1964 models started in August and had reached an output of 530 cars in a two-shift work day and 112 trucks in one daily shift.

EXPANSION STARTS

Work has begun on Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing of Canada Limited's major expansion of its London plant. The expansion, estimated to cost $1,251,000, will increase the size of manufacturing facilities at the plant by 37 per cent. The project is scheduled for com-dangerous and may "grow worse before it gets better."

He served notice on the United States government and American labor that Canada will view with "grave concern" any violence or harassment against Canadian sailors or ships in U.S. ports.

He said a boycott of Canadian ships manned by unions under government trusteeship could seriously disturb friendly relations between the two countries.

Although details of the trusteeship measure won't be disclosed until the bill is given first reading, Mr. MacEachen listed the main powers of the trustees.

They would manage and control five Canadian maritime unions representing some 21,000 sailors, engineers and deck officers.

HAVE WIDE POWERS

The trustees would have all the power normally vested in union officers plus additional authority to fire present union leaders, to set up special negotiating committees and a joint sailor-shipowner advisory board on the trusteeship and to advise union members on changes in their union constitutions.

The trustees would be able to lift their control over the unions on an individual basis—a progressive withdrawal from trusteeship.

Michael Starr, former Conservative labor minister who elected Mr. Justice T. G. Norris to make the public investigation that led to the trusteeship proposal, criticized the government for what he called delays in acting on the Norris proposals.

He said the trusteeship should clear up the "taken control" of the shipping season starts on the lakes next April.

He also urged the government to make "strong demands" on the U.S. government to guarantee safe passage of Canadian ships in American waters and ports.

Social Credit Leader Thompson called for fast parliamentary action on the trusteeship, which he described as the "last step in a long chain of events, in a continuous story of violence, defiance of law and exploitation of seamen on the great lakes."

T. C. Douglas, leader of the labor-backed New Democratic Party, said Parliament has no alternative but public trusteeship to clear out the "hoodlum element" in the SIU.

He opposed a five-year term for the trustees, suggesting Dec. 31, 1965, as a better deadline.

In addition to the SIU, the trusteeship would affect the marine section of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers; the Canadian Maritime Union; the Canadian Merchant Service Guild and the National Association of Marine Engineers. Together the five unions represent some 21,000 sailors, engineers and deck officers on Canadian ships.

Four of the unions—all but the SIU—are exclusively Canadian in structure and leadership. They have agreed to the federal trusteeship to clean up the SIU.

about 80 houses—were no longer visible. They were gone.

The two hamlets—St. Martino and Vissepesse—were located on the side of the reservoir, not along the Piave. They were apparently wiped out when the landslide raised the level of the reservoir. Then the people, houses and everything must have been thrown over the dam.

"The earth on the gently sloping natural bank of the reservoir appears as if a big fire had destroyed every living thing, human or vegetable.

"The once grassy slope of the reservoir now appears like sand burned by a fierce, desert sun.

"Certainly nobody in the two hamlets could have escaped."

Service industries, now exempt from federal sales tax, would be treated as any other commodity - producer. Besides being irresponsible for collecting taxes on sales to customers, they would also pay taxes on the goods they consume. Exported goods would not be subject to tax.

Gilles Gregoire, Mr. Caouette's chief lieutenant, immediately moved that the Commons adjourn "until all rights and privileges of all members of the House are recognized."

The Speaker ruled the motion out of order and again the Creditiste leader appealed. This time Mr. Caouette's followers stood alone. The ruling was sustained, 208 to 13.

Mr. Caouette again tried to speak on the nuclear announcement, but the Speaker cut him off and gave the floor to Trade Minister Sharp.

The question of the Creditiste claim as the fifth party in the Commons was referred Sept. 30 to the Commons privileges committee. The committee in turn voted to toss the main issue to parliamentary law clerk Dr. Maurice Ollivier.

TO FIGHT REPORT

The Creditistes have announced they will fight the committee report in any manner they can when it comes up for a vote in the Commons, likely Friday of next week.

Creditistes held up a money bill for three days of debate earlier and consumed more than 30 minutes with the two roll-call votes at Wednesday's abbreviated 3½-hour sitting. Other delaying tactics are possible under the rules of procedure.

In other developments, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker complained that the government is showing "outrageous indifference" to the economic impact of the Quebec dock strike. Labor Minister MacEachen replied that the federal mediator should be allowed to pursue his efforts for a settlement of the dispute.

On the nuclear issue, Mr. Diefenbaker said the announcement about the two USAF based in Newfoundland was so sketchy that MPs could not determine whether Canadian sovereignty was protected or whether "Canada was placed in a subservient position."

T. C. Douglas, NDP leader, called the statement another link in the chain binding Canada to the U.S. as a military satellite.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said the government should pursue its announced goal of developing a non-nuclear peacekeeping defence force.

cember wheat closed at $2.21, a bushel on the Chicago grain futures market Wednesday.

The emphasis on the immediacy of deliveries added strength to reports that the Russians consider they may not be finished yet at the wheat they want as quickly as possible from Canada because of Canadian labor, port and weather problems. It also added strength to reports that the grain sales in the Communist regions is so great that Russia is selling off about $1,500,000,000 gold to pay for Western grain.

Answering critics who oppose wheat sales to Russia, Kennedy noted that Australia and North Atlantic allies, which includes Canada, have recently agreed to sell the Communist bloc between 10,000,000 and 15,000,000 tons ($67,000,000 and $50,50,- bushels) of wheat and wheat flour.

EXPLAINS STAND

"Our allies have long been engaged in extensive sales of wheat and other farm products to the Communist bloc and in fact it would be foolish to halt the sales of our wheat when other countries can buy wheat from us today and then sell this flour to the Communists."

Looming in the background was the possible repercussions the U.S.-Soviet deal may have in the 1964 presidential campaign.

For example, former vice-president Nixon, Kennedy's opponent in 196, came out against the wheat sale, saying: "Why should we take the pressure off their economy . . ."

Other Republican leaders have given no sign that they won't try to make political hay of it, even though some of the Republican wheat state legislators plugged for the sale.

into the streets and run in panic toward hills around the town. Few reached that safety. Lavedar said. He said most of the inhabitants were drowned, or buried in the ruins of wrecked buildings and mud.

Other reports that the concrete dam had collapsed. But Mal. Mayne of Belluno, Italy, who led a squadron of four U.S. helicopters over the area, said the dam 12 miles north of this Alpine city appeared intact.

The landslide that plunged into the reservoir apparently caused a huge overflow," Mayne said. "From the air the dam itself appeared in one piece."

RIVER POISONED

The dam holds back waters of the Vaiont River, a tributary of the Piave. The Piave flows in the Adriatic Sea northeast of Venice. Police said the flood has swept away a building materials factory with large stores of potassium cyanide, turning the Piave into a stream of poison.

Police warned residents along the river not to drink its waters and not to open any barrels they found afloat or along its banks.

The volume of water released in the disaster was so great that in Belluno the level of the Piave suddenly rose 16 feet, flooding fields and roads.

"We have no idea how many more are dead," Vice Prefect Carlo Prestamburgo said.

He said Longarone, a town of 2,000, had been all but wiped out. Another is at the junction of the Vaiont and the Piava.

The official said three other towns—Cadisago, Rivalta and Pirago, with a total population of 1,500—also were wiped out.

TOWNS FLOODED

Several other towns, including Castellaus with 1,000 inhabitants, also were flooded. Their fate is unknown.

There has been no word from another village on the mountain overlooking the scene.

Italian army rescue teams, Red Cross crews and air force helicopters were rushed to the area. Soldiers were also pressed into a massive relief army.

Salzman rains had loosened a vast earth mass about 650 feet above the reservoir. About 120 days ago the mass started moving down the mountain at a rate of about 3½ feet a day.

Engineers figured the mass would reach the reservoir about midnight Monday. Wednesday they started it slowly.

BIT SUDDENLY

It is a big reservoir — four miles long and 400 yards (440 yards wide). Normally its waters are 300 feet deep. Its level Wednesday night had been lowered about 75 feet. That wasn't enough when the landslide suddenly hit.

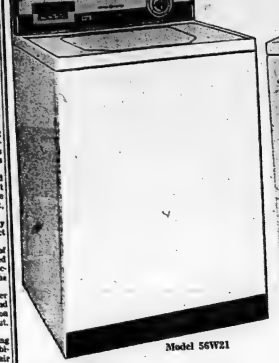
"Practically an entire mountain fell into the reservoir," one official said.

An engineer of the Societa Adriatica di Elettricita, which built the dam said the landslide was of tremendous proportions, probably measuring 200 million cubic yards of rock.

The earth mass sent the water-filled reservoir to 150,000,000 tons—pouring out in a massive, destructive waterfall.

Government officials said they feared the disaster would be worse than Italy's Gleno dam catastrophe on Dec. 1, 1023, when 1,500 persons were killed.

The Gleno dam was on the Serio River in the Alps north of Bergamo and about 70 miles (112 miles) west of the Vaiont dam. Many victims were carried hundreds of miles by the surging waters from the Serio River into the mighty Po River and down to the Adriatic Sea.



The disaster also recalled the tragedy of Frejus, on the French Riviera, where nearly four years ago 443 persons died in thundering torrents of mud and water released by the collapse of the Malpasset dam on the Reyran River.

Interceptor base in Canada.

In a Commons return for Hon. Michael Starr (PC — Swift Current-Maple Creek), Defence Minister Hellyer said tenders for construction of nuclear storage dumps at Canadian interceptor bases will close this month and that construction is scheduled for completion by by Oct. 1, 1964.

Trade Minister Sharp Says There's Been No Change in Price Policy by Board

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade Minister Sharp told the Commons Wednesday that there has been no change in the pricing policy of the Canadian wheat board.

His statement followed criticism in the United States of the board's practice of selling wheat at current prices for later delivery. The Americans accuse Canada of sending to keep world prices down at a time when they should be rising.

Because Canada and the U.S. are the principle wheat - exporting nations, their demands set the world price.

Canadian officials are concerned lest the Americans start a price war. They also are puzzled over the sudden U.S. annoyance over the long-standing wheat pricing policy.

A Washington report said the Canadian wheat-selling practices is seen as a means of sewing up big wheat contracts with both Communist and developing countries.

A U.S. agriculture department spokesman said that the Americans have officially protested the Canadian policy. While it was hoped a trade collision could be avoided, he made it clear that the U.S. is considering a variety of measures that could injure future Canadian sales.

The U.S. agriculture department's views were passed on to the external affairs department by the U.S. embassy here. But Canadian sources hesitated to call it an American protest.

The recent Canadian sale to Japan appears to have brought about the split between the two neighbors. The Americans say Canada negotiated with the Japanese in secret, guaranteeing the price of the wheat would remain unchanged during the current crop year.

The U.S., which spent money promoting the Japanese market for wheat, learned about the guaranteed price later through the Japanese government.

The Americans say that if Canada had allowed prices to drift upwards, Canadian farmers might have earned another $40,000,000 and U.S. farmers an additional $80,000,000.

Observers here say there is some political risk for the liberal government in being accused of holding down world wheat prices when the demand is brisk. But they say the value will be seen over the long haul.

Labor Minister McEachen Gaining Stature as Big Man in Liberal Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — In the heat of politics and industrial conflict, Allan J. MacEachen is gaining stature as a strongman in the Liberal cabinet.

The 43-year-old minister of labor is impressing MPs and cabinet colleagues with his poise under fire and his coolness in handling explosive issues.

The black - haired bachelor minister seems to have something of a poker player's shrewdness in weighing his opponent's hands and then playing his own cards.

He now is embroiled in two of Canada's hottest problems: the St. Lawrence River longshoremen's strike and the controversial move by the government into waterfront trade unions to clean up corruption and lawlessness.

His whole background and training seem to have led him to his present position.

IS MINER'S SON

Son of a Cape Breton coal miner, he is an economist, sociologist, confidant of Prime Minister Pearson, an expert for his party on parliamentary rules and a key member of the Liberals' so-called inner cabinet.

Born in Inverness of Scots settlers, Allan MacEachen grew up in a mining community where the clash of labor and management was a constant part of life. He was the youngest of three brothers in a home where Gaelic was spoken, in a lovely land of mist and Scots thrift.

After graduating from St. Francis Xavier University at Antigonish, N.S., he went to the University of Toronto for his master's degree from the department of political economy.

At 25, he was lecturing in economics at St. Francis Xavier, then head of the university's department of social sciences. During this period, he studied industrial relations and economics at the University of Chicago.

At 30, MacEachen was working on his doctorate at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology—a course he interrupted in 1950 to step into politics as Liberal MP for Inverness-Richmond.

He was re-elected in 1957 but lost his seat by a scant 16 votes when the Conservatives swept the country in 1958.

KEPT IN OTTAWA

Mr. Pearson, then leader of the opposition, kept Mr. MacEachen in Ottawa as his special assistant. During this period, the professor - politician mastered the rules and procedure of Parliament, and hammered out a speech - writing style of hard facts and few frills.

He won back his Nova Scotia seat in 1962 and this year was given the labor portfolio in the first Pearson Liberal cabinet. This assignment included a seat on the special cabinet committee on economic growth and development, the "inner cabinet" of Mr. Pearson.

One of his first decisions was to drop around to the Ottawa headquarters of the Canadian Labor Congress. By going to see labor, instead of waiting for labor to come to him, the new minister quickly created a direct rapport with Canada's top union men.

Ottawa observers give full credit to Mr. MacEachen for persuading the CLC to co-operate with the government in tackling the prickly and unprecedented trusteeship of marine unions. Because of the CLC's outright opposition to government trusteeship, this feat was viewed as a major accomplishment.

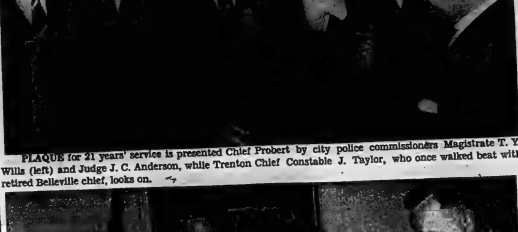
Atomic Bombs Being Placed In French Planes

PARIS (AP)—France's controversial nuclear strike force has come into being and supersonic French planes are being armed with atomic bombs, authoritative sources say.

The informants said a concrete beginning has been made with Mirage-IV planes rushing off assembly lines and receiving atomic bombs.

This was described as phase I of the nuclear program. Later France is aiming to develop hydrogen bombs and missiles to carry them.

An obscure line in a communique issued following a cabinet meeting Wednesday indicated for the first time officially that France had made its historic shift in armament.



The communique spoke of the withdrawal of French military men from the naval air base at Bizerte, Tunisia, and said this was now possible because of the creation of new means which the armed forces are beginning to have at their disposal. . . .

Because of this development, French defences in the Mediterranean area will not be compromised by withdrawal of conventional forces from the Bizerte base, the communique went on.

There was no indication of how many operational planes and bombs the French now have. The bombs are believed to be somewhat more powerful than those dropped by the United States on Japan in the Second World War, which packed the equivalent of 20,000 tons of TNT.

RECEIVE LOAN

ALGIERS (AP)—The Algerian government announced Wednesday night it received a no-interest loan from Red China for the equivalent of $50,000,000. It did not say in what currency the loan won'd be granted. Last month Algeria obtained a pledge of a $100,000,000 loan from the Soviet Union.

FAMILY, FRIENDS, and colleagues cluster round Chief Probert as he tries out chair presented by Belleville Police Association. Above, Deputy Chief J. C. Hayes, Trenton Chief J. Taylor, Chief Probert's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Probert, his wife, and Chief McLauchlan.

Complimentary Dinner Honors Walter Probert, Former Police Chief of Belleville

Marking a 31st birthday, the administration of justice in Belleville burned the anniversary candle at both ends last night.

In one breath, it honored the city's police chief of 21 years.

Simultaneously, it looked ahead to an administration of crowning progress under a new head.

The occasion was retirement of R. Walter Probert, Belleville's Chief Constable for 21 years.

October 1st, he formally retired. Last night, he most definitely handed in his badge as former colleagues, comrades and members of Ontario's various constabularies and civilian dignitaries turned up in Belleville to mark his retirement.

They gathered at the Hotel Quinte as the Belleville Police Commission and the city's Police Association linked together to sponsor what amounted to a farewell dinner for Chief Probert in uniform. As far as an individual personality is concerned, he is expected to be an active personality for many a year yet.

Mayor Haig put it succinctly as he quoted a bit of poetry to the situation.

165 GUESTS PRESENT

"Life is long if it is full," reiterated the mayor. "And I am sure this applies to our distinguished guest."

The combined sponsorship of the association and the commission resulted in a full-scale soiree that drew 165 guests. That was the precise number which maitre d' John Heegan served with a roast beef dinner. And among that eighteen-and-five gathering were a notable number of Ontario's police chiefs.

However, the two most outstanding events of the evening for the Chief were the most serious.

Chief Constable J. C. McLauchlan, Chief Probert's successor, pinned on him the long-service medal awarded by the police chiefs of Ontario. Magistrate T. Y. Wills presented him with a gilded plaque for his services.

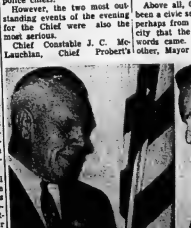
Above all, Chief Probert has been a civic servant. And it was fitting from the mayor of his city that the most significant words came. Longer than any other, Mayor Haig has known the chief in this capacity.

Speaking with an years knowledge as a police commissioner (by right of office) of the Chief's service, the mayor recalled: "We have always found him to be a loyal and effective officer, and one who would always apply justice with mercy and discipline with discretion."

GIVEN EASY CHAIR

Under the formal title of the Belleville Police Association, the men he has headed during that time presented the Chief with an easy chair, and Mrs. Probert with a bouquet of flowers.

Mrs. Probert however, declined to speak.



("Mrs. Probert said she usually has the last word," said Judge J. C. Anderson, chairman of the police commission and also chairman of the dinner. "But tonight she would let her husband have it. She's more often, my dear," he added amid laughter).

However, in the true spirit of the event, Chief Probert himself did have the last word.

As for the citizenry he has shepherded in 21 years of law administration, Chief Probert commented his city has "some that we don't like to think about. But by-and-large we have a fine type of citizen in this community."

Then, out of uniform in a public appearance for the first time in two decades, he added: "It's au revoir, but not goodbye."

The event was rounded off with an evening of dancing.

MEDAL for long service to police work in province is presented retired chief by his successor Chief Constable J. B. McLauchlan, on behalf of Ontario police chiefs.

Entire Economy Stirred By Huge Wheat Crop and Sales to Soviet Union

OTTAWA (CP) — How much will Canada profit economically by helping—at a price—to meet the Communist world's demands for daily bread?

The effects of the huge sales to the Soviet Union and its satellites are certain to ripple through the entire domestic economy—but in a manner, say the experts, that cannot be measured.

Last year the Canadian sale of about 1,800,000 tons to Red China worth some $134,000,000—part of the previous three-year agreement—along with smaller shipments to Poland and Albania made up about 25 per cent of all Canada's wheat exports.

MAKE DEALS

Now, since last May, have come deals for these sales:

Russia — Deal for about 300,000 tons of wheat worth some $22,000,000; then the whopping purchase of 5,300,000 tons of wheat and 575,000 tons of flour. Over-all value: Close to $500,000,000.

Communist China — Renewal of the previous agreement, calling for delivery over three years of between 3,000,000 and 5,700,000 tons of wheat worth from $216,000,000 to $350,000,000.

Yugoslavia — About 20,000 tons of wheat worth some $14,600,000 this year.

Poland—150,000 tons of wheat valued at $7,300,000 this year.

Bulgaria — 250,000 tons worth of wheat this year and 100,000 tons in each of the two subsequent years; total value some $33,000,000.

CHECKS ALSO BUT

Atop this came reports from Winnipeg Wednesday that Czechoslovakia has made a private deal for about 40,000 tons of wheat worth $3,000,000 on terms of a slightly smaller purchase earlier this month.

If Canada can deliver all this wheat, the sales will be a big boost toward a sizeable commodity trade surplus—and hence an improvement in the over-all Canadian deficit from overtrade in all goods and services. Exchange reserves also will be built up. It is trite but true that added cash in the farmer's pocket means he will increase his spending. Thus business will get better not only for western merchants but—for eastern manufacturers and, in turn, their suppliers.

Flour mills will be operating at capacity for the first time in years to meet the Russian order for 575,000 tons of flour, a purchase that will double Canadian flour exports this year.

Normally, the value of the wheat crop makes up about one per cent of the gross national product—the entire production of all goods and services.

This year, the GNP increase is forecast at six per cent from 1962. The added value of this year's record wheat crop—forecast at some $150,000,000 more cast at some $1962—would add about 0.3 per cent to the GNP.

Visit May Temper Future Reaction on Both Sides

... By JIM PEACOCK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The United States and France apparently are as far apart as ever in their basic thinking on the best means of attaining a united Europe and a strong Atlantic alliance.

But the visit of French Foreign Minister Couve de Murville to Washington for two days of private talks this week may have given each side sufficient insight into the other's feelings to at least temper reactions to future utterances by each nation's leaders.

In recent times, the tendency has been for each side to interpret the words almost every move or statement by the other.

Couve de Murville met with President Kennedy and State Secretary Rusk while in Washington.

TALKS FRIENDLY

Their talks, dealing mainly with differences over the future of Europe and the Western alliance, were described as frank and friendly, if without surprise.

The only tangible result reported was agreement to have President Kennedy visit France and Couve de Murville visit Washington next year.

The intangible results are more difficult to assess, but the signs indicate both sides will be heading warily ahead, and have a better understanding, of the other's feelings.

Couve de Murville, for instance, was exposed at social functions to sharp questioning by members of Congress and the Washington press corps and he was said to be somewhat surprised by their tough tone.

He learned that there is somewhat greater resentment in the U.S. toward the French independence line of de Gaulle than he had expected.

The French minister was reported to have come away from the talks convinced that France must prove to the U.S. that her independence and nationalistic line will not injure the Western world.

The U.S. participants got a first-hand report on the French intentions to pursue both militarily and politically an independence from Washington and apparently came away persuaded that de Gaulle does not want a clear relationship with the U.S. on any terms.

The talks, however, were said to have left no doubt in Washington that France—while having a radically different concept of the Atlantic alliance than that held by the U.S.—is firmly with the West against Communism and has no interest in neutrality between East and West.

With promise of solidarity in case of danger, both sides now may place more effort toward containing their dispute and cooling tempers.

Butler Considered Favorite To Succeed Macmillan

BLACKPOOL, England (Reuters) — Prime Minister R. A. Butler was enthusiastically cheered today when he stepped into the shoes of his ailing chief, Prime Minister Macmillan, at an annual Conservative party conference torn by leadership problems.

But the ovation given Butler, the leading contender for Macmillan's job if the prime minister retired after undergoing prostate surgery today, was not as great as that given Wednesday to his principal rival, Science Minister Lord Hailsham.

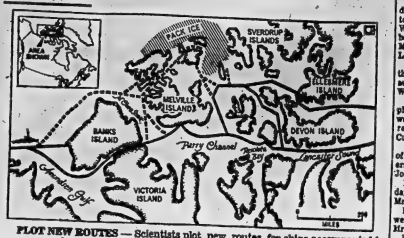
The conference seethed with speculation over the future of the party leadership, much of it fired by Macmillan's sudden decision to go into a London hospital with a bladder ailment Tuesday.

Butler, who took over the government from Macmillan, was due to address an end-of-conference rally in Macmillan's place.

BROUGHT INTO OPEN

The vital leadership issue was brought into the open for the first time at the opening of the second day of conference sessions today, when delegate John Lochrane demanded an immediate decision on who would lead the party in a general election which must be called before October, 1964.

He urged Conservative party mentarians to decide on a new leader and declared the conference, representing all Conservative supporters, should have a voice in the decision.



The loudest cheers were reserved for the joint party chairman and senior cabinet minister Macleod for the leadership, after a fighting speech in which he predicted a new electoral victory.

Macleod told the 2,000 delegates they had to "strike now and keep fighting until election day" to repeat Conservative victories in the elections of 1959, 1954 and 1958.

PLEDGES SUPPORT

Selwyn Lloyd, former chancellor of the exchequer fired Macmillan during sweeping cheers and strongest last year, reiterated his sympathetically to the prime minister's illness and pledged his own support to the party

PLOT NEW ROUTES — Scientists plot new routes for ships accompanied by icebreakers to the Arctic's oil sources. Hydrographic surveys by the federal department of mines and technical surveys show that access to the northern islands may not be as formidable as previously thought.

Access Routes to Arctic Oil Fields Now Are Being Probed by Scientists

By JOHN R. BIRD

OTTAWA (CP)—The most remote of the Parry Islands in the northwestern Arctic—potential sources of oil—might be reached by ships with the aid of icebreakers during most summer seasons.

Dr. E. F. Roots, co-ordinator of the Polar Continental Shelf Project, says hydrographic surveys of a preliminary nature show that access to the islands by water may not be as formidable as previously thought.

The survey represents several years of work for the project being conducted by the federal department of mines and technical surveys.

A number of sea routes may make it possible in most years to move oil from Borden, Mackenzie, Prince Patrick and Brock islands by sea to southern areas.

These islands are at the northern end of the Parry Islands, 1,000 miles from the North Pole. The most southerly island in the group is Melville Island, where the first Arctic wildcat oil well was drilled in 1961 and dry.

Dr. Roots emphasized that the studies to date are preliminary but that surveys over the next few years will give a reasonably complete picture of water access routes.

CONDITIONS CHANGE

However, it appears now that ice-protected tankers accompanied by icebreakers should be able to reach the southern coast by water may not be as formidable as previously thought.

This means this area probably is navigable from July to September in most years.

Access to this area by sea from the east is restricted because ice in Prince Gustaf Adolf Sea and Hazen Strait is up to 10 feet thick with pressure ridges even thicker. Depending on weather, the area could be choked with ice for periods of years.

ICE IS THIN

One likely approach route to the remote islands would be from the southwest, from the Mackenzie River delta through the Amundsen Gulf, Prince of Wales Strait on the east side of Banks Island. Ships would sail via McClure Strait and Fitzwilliam Strait between Melville and Prince Edward islands and then through Hellsstrom Strait southeast of the sheltering screen of the Polynia islands.

Fitzwilliam Strait could be reached in most years through either Crozier Channel or Kellett Strait, west or east, respectively, of Eglinton Island, immediately west of Melville Island. In this area, ice is thin.

CHURCH SERVICE

Church service was held at White's Church on Sunday morning with Mr. Cooper of Bloomfield, Sidney, guest minister speaking on "The Church in the World." The junior choir contributed an anthem accompanied by Miss Cynthia Jones.

In the Sunday School service, which followed, some children who did not attend the Rally day service were promoted and presented with certificates. Those promoted were Debra Harvel, Linda Thompson, Terry Goodridge, Mark Loader, and Stephen Harvel.

The ice in all these channels, Dr. Roots said, was thin enough in 1962 to have been navigable by ice-protected ships not accompanied by icebreakers in late August and early September.

Dr. Roots said the most direct approach from the Mackenzie Delta is through the Beaufort Sea and along the west coast of Banks Island. However, nothing is known at present about late-summer ice conditions west of Banks Island where there is a shallow coastline. Aerial observations show there does not appear to be heavy pressure ice in this area.

Danish Seining Method Will Be Used by N. S. Fishing Boat

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Nova Scotia fishing boat has left for the fishing grounds off the west coast of Vancouver Island to try to prove the experts are wrong and its owners right.

The Sylvia Ann sailed from Vancouver and will seek to determine whether Danish seining can be as successful in British Columbia waters as on the Grand Banks of the Atlantic.

The method, used mainly in areas with large sand banks, involves setting a seine net on the ocean bottom at the end of about a mile of rope. The rope is drawn in on a specially designed winch and the net eventually comes to the surface having conveyed a much larger area than with the conventional trawling method.

However, before the sturdy little vessel could begin its West Coast venture it had to make a 7,500 - mile, 1½-month trip from Nova Scotia through the Panama Canal and up the Pacific coast.

Skipper on the voyage was Wilfred Ha, Clifford Keeping, one of the owners, and Andrew Redman, are from Vancouver, Phillip Lourco and Rafe Goseffson are from Nova Scotia.

The Sylvia Ann made the journey at an average of nine knots, sometimes exceeding 10 when the boat's three sails were hoisted.

EXPERTS DOUBTFUL

Skipper Payne, formerly second mate of the B.C. coastal steamer Northland Prince, said the only fishing they got was in the Panama Canal when a television crew took films of the fishing boat — an unusual sight in the area.

Experts on the West Coast say the Danish seining method cannot work here because of the small size of the banks and the numerous tide rips. But Capt. Payne says there are plenty of banks they can operate from.

"Hecate Strait, 450 miles northwest of Vancouver, is one big bank and there is another big bank on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

"I am told that anywhere the other fishermen drag we can use this method."

Seining can be used in depths ranging from three to 200 fathoms—18 to 1,200 feet—and Capt. Payne says the Danish seine can cover in two hours an area it takes other boats six hours to do.

"Crew member Gosseffson invented the winch that brings the mile-long rope back aboard and coils it ready for use again. He even gave up a good job managing it. We're confident the system would work here."

The holds of the Sylvia Ann can carry 80,000 pounds of fish and the crew say that, if the fish are around, the holds can be filled in about three days.

If the first boat proves successful, a second will be brought from Nova Scotia, the promoters say.

Vito Genovese, Big Time Gambler, Lived Quietly in Suburban Home in N. J.

By BERNARD GAVZER

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N.J. (AP) — For years, the quiet, conservative man went off to New York each day and returned each evening, the same as any other commuter.

Of course, in a small town—less than 5,000 here—everyone knew he wasn't an ordinary commuter. And if they passed him on the street, they'd nod, just as they'd do to anyone. They whispered about him, in the small town way of spending time in gossip.

But a lot of them were also puzzled because he didn't seem like the Hollywood or newspaper version of what he was reputed to be: One of the most powerful criminals in the United States.

Vito Genovese, now in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., lived in this northshore New Jersey summer resort town for nearly 40 years. His later address was 68 Highland Ave. It was a two-shaped ranch house, clapboard outside, on a corner lot. It might fetch $17,000 today.

What was it like to have him as a neighbor? What did the town think of having such a notorious resident? What sort of life did he live?

LOTTERY PAID OFF

"He brought home $30,000 a week from the Italian lottery," said his ex-wife in a court suit for separation in 1952.

"If he had $30,000,000, like they say, he sure didn't show it or enjoy it," says Jerry Mascioli, a longtime friend and neighbor.

"He was king of the rackets," said Thomas E. Dewey, when he was the crime-busting district attorney of New York in the 1930s.

"He was a good father, who raised his children to be honest, well-behaved, religious," says a veteran of more than 30 years on Atlantic Highlands' seven-man police force.

The focus is on Genovese again because of a talkative and terrified hoodlum, Joseph Valachi, who has been blabbing details about a national crime syndicate and told his story before the McClellan Senate Investigations Subcommittee.

Valachi claimed there is a secret criminal organization called Cosa Nostra and named Genovese as the bigwest of the bosses.

BORN IN NAPLES

Vito Genovese was born Nov. 21, 1897, in Naples and came to the United States at the age of 16. By the time he was 20, he became part of recorded American history; His name was on the police blotter.

The New York City Police Department file contains a card, B. No. 50963, which bears the arrest record of Vito Genovese. On it there are three entries for homicide, dated 1923, 1934, and 1945.

Whatever mayhem or murder may have occurred elsewhere, apparently none of it occurred at Genovese's doorstep. If it did, it went unnoticed.

"He never had any parties we ever heard of, nor was there any noise or trouble from whoever he lived, whether it was the big place along the ocean or that last house on Highland Avenue," says Police Chief Sterling Sweeney.

The breakup of his family brought him to tears.

"What she says on my heart for?" he asked his mother-in-law.

Genovese's children were educated in parochial schools. His daughter, Nancy, has four children. She was trained as a teacher. His son, Philip, is an accountant and is on the council of one of the New Jersey shore towns.

NO BIG TIPS

He wasn't known as a big tipper at the barber shop, nor was he ever seen dropping a big tip in a bar or restaurant.

"He drove around in a Ford sedan," says the police captain. "That's the only thing I ever saw him drive."

And, as if to remove himself further from the public version of a bigtime mobster, Genovese became an avid golfer—and a good one. He won several cups in competition.

Genovese was at one time or another in the import - export business, and enterprises dealing with neon signs, horses and tracks, paper and wastepaper, real estate, restaurants and bars, steel and trucking. Union labor and waterfront activities.

GOOD ORGANIZER

There was one thing that observers over the years agreed upon:

Genovese was a capable and versatile, organizer. He was shrewd and enormously energetic.

Genovese was arrested for the last time July 8, 1958. He was charged with trafficking in narcotics. He was ultimately convicted and sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Jerry Mascia, who was with Genovese on his last day of freedom, says:

"The last thing he said to me was, 'I wouldn't mind going to jail for something. But not narcotics. For my grandchildren to think I was in narcotics, that breaks my heart.'"

Would Drop Chemistry in Upper Schools

TORONTO (CP)—A Toronto chemistry teacher says it "is time tradition went over the hill" and chemistry is abandoned as a secondary school subject.

S. R. Huntington of North Toronto Collegiate Institute told the Toronto division of the Chemical Institute of Canada Tuesday night "teaching chemistry for a full year would only hinder the teaching of other sciences."

No fundamental explanations of natural phenomena are given students in secondary schools, Mr. Huntington said. Chemistry could only be shown explanations, but if the students were forced to take chemistry as a subject for a full year the purpose of the course would be defeated.

"We must eliminate artificial boundaries between the sciences so that the student will carry with him through life the basic principles of science, not memorized facts. Chemistry should not be taught for chemistry's sake, but for science's sake."

RUSSIAN TRACTORS

The Soviet Republic had 1,230,000 tractors in 1962, according to a government release.

"YUP, I'M LIVING ON BORROWED TIME" — The words of Richard Patterson, 9, pictured with his sister Betty Ann, 6, two children of a Sterling, N.D. family, indicate a truth that's hard to take. Richard and Betty Ann are both doomed to die of the same disease — muco-viscidosis, or cystic fibrosis — that has already taken the lives of three other Patterson children. The congenital disease is incurable, despite all efforts of medical science. (AP Wirephoto)

Teen-Agers Now Preparing To Start, Run Own Businesses

By REFORD MacDOUGALL

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 400 teen-agers in the Montreal area will run their own businesses starting this fall.

They will elect boards of directors, sell stock, make products and, hopefully, end their financial year in a position to pay dividends to shareholders.

More than 25 leading Montreal firms will help the youngsters—but with advice only.

Ken Tremblay, 41, a Rotary Club organizer, got 18 teen-age companies going last year in the Lakeshore community of Pointe Claire. This year he started up 15 in the Montreal suburb of St. Laurent.

The project, called Junior Achievement, was started with the hope of having teen-age capitalism flourishing in five communities in five years. "So far we're on schedule," Mr. Tremblay remarked.

Junior Achievement clubs also exist in Vancouver, Windsor, Ont., Calgary, Brantford, Ont., London, Ont., and Winnipeg.

The miniature companies are made up of 15 to 20 girls and boys between the ages of 15 and 19.

The teen-agers first decide on a product to manufacture—anything from ashtrays or Christmas cards to washboards. Then they choose a company name and start selling stock to friends, relatives and others.

MOST MADE MONEY

Once they have money, they buy raw materials and tools and begin production. Teen - age salesmen go door-to-door to sell their spare time selling products.

Executives get paid salaries, workmen wages and salesmen commissions.

Once a week each company gets advice from executives in Montreal firms operating related businesses.

At the end of the school year, the companies go out of business. They pay shareholders dividends if they have made a profit, a percentage of the assets if they haven't.

Last year 15 of 18 Lakeshore companies paid dividends to their shareholders, organizer Tremblay said.

Did Lakeshore teen-agers enjoy their company experience?

"It was very interesting," said 16-year-old Paul Warwick, "and I learned which part of business most appeals to me. I'm sure the others found it interesting too and everyone worked hard."

Gail Kirkpatrick, 16, was the president of her company, Lakeshore Ceramics. She said she "really enjoyed" the experience and that her company paid shareholders 58 cents for every 50 cents invested.

PC Member Calls for End Of "Hypocrisy"

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP Jack Horner called Tuesday for an end to "this hypocrisy" of a legal ban on lotteries and sweepstakes that was generally ignored by public and law enforcement officers alike.

He said in the Commons that a legalized national hospital sweepstakes would improve—not harm—the moral fibre of the country.

J. J. Greene (L — Renfrew South) replied that it is "a dangerous philosophy" for Canadians to think they can get something for nothing.

The debate developed as the Commons, for the second time in five days, was asked to support a private member's bill to permit government - sponsored lotteries and sweepstakes.

Last Thursday Louis-Joseph Pigeon (PC — Joliette - PAsomption - Montcalm) urged that provincial sweepstakes be allowed. The bill sponsored by Mr. Horner, MP for Acadia in Alberta, proposed a national sweepstakes. Like Mr. Pigeon's bill, it was talked out during the day's "private members' hour" and is unlikely to be debated again.

Three similar bills by other members are awaiting debate.

Mr. Horner said some critics claim gambling weakens moral fibre.

"The moral fibre of the nation, to me, is receiving more harm by this continuous disregard of the law by attorneys-general and law endorcement officers."

Mr. Greene said that if Mr. Horner's arguments about the moral effects were accepted, "the people of toughest moral fibre are the residents of Las Vegas."

"The philosophy that there is an easy way, that there is something for nothing, that we have higher social benefits without paying for them, is a dangerous philosophy."

The Old Man Goes, But . .

Out of the Rubble and Ruin of War Adenauer Fashioned a Booming Nation

By JOHN WEYLAND

BONN (AP) — Admirers and critics both may well recall the desolation that seemed to stretch endlessly into the future when Konrad Adenauer, a comparative unknown, first was elected chancellor of West Germany in 1949.

The nation then was new and troubled, representing a source of doubt and concern in international affairs. Britain, the United States and France had created it out of their occupation zones established at the end of the Second World War.

The three wartime allies had determined to rebuild the former enemy into a bulwark against the advances of communism in Europe.

West Germany itself was ravaged by war, disrupted, poverty stricken. Its 50,000,000 people discouraged and uncertain. The situation seemed ripe for new radical political movements in it and where they had thrived in the past.

NATION PROSPERED

During the long Adenauer tenure in office, all this changed. The public gave way to handsome new buildings. Factories were rebuilt, largely with U.S. Marshall Plan aid. Assembly lines began to hum and West Germany emerged as one of Europe's most prosperous and productive nations where unemployment was unknown.

Adenauer's admirers are convinced the era ending with his departure, Oct. 15 establishes the 87-year-old chancellor as a great historic figure. They see him as the architect of West Germany's rise to wealth and influence. They credit him with having a solid place in the Western alliance for West Germany and for establishing a democracy in a country with a notoriously authoritarian past.

At Adenauer's side during the transformation has been a hefty cigar-smoking economist who shares much of the credit for West Germany's astonishing financial recovery.

He is Economics Minister Ludwig Erhard, the man chosen to succeed Adenauer and carry on the present middle of the road coalition government until new elections in 1965.

FOUR OBJECTIVES

Erhard, a champion of free enterprise economic policies, contributed heavily to the Adenauer success on the home front.

Adenauer oversaw the recovery program but seldom bothered with the details. He concentrated on foreign policy, considering it of overriding importance. He served as his own foreign minister for the first six years and continued to determine policy afterward through his hand-picked foreign ministers.

Adenauer had a clear concept of how Europe should be reordered and of the place in this new scheme of things for Germany. His four main objectives and how he fared with them:

1. To remove the distrust of West Germany and the limitations on its sovereignty that resulted from the Nazi past. Here he met with success. In 1955 the Western Allies gave this country its full independence. By then the concept of collective German guilt had been officially abandoned. West Germany gradually was being accepted as a respectable member of the family of nations. France, formerly the most bitter enemy, gave back the Saar. In January, 1963, President De Gaulle signed a bilateral treaty of co-operation. This was the capstone of Adenauer's conciliation, of burying the past.

2. Commit West Germany against the Soviet bloc and fit it irrevocably into the Western alliance.

This policy also succeeded. The country was made a full member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in 1955. For the first time since the Second World War it was allowed to maintain armed forces. Today those number more than 400,000.

3. Promote a United States of Europe, substituting historic national division.

"The present patchwork of European states has a past but no future," Adenauer said early in his career as chancellor. But the patchwork continues. West Germany has joined the Common Market and its related organizations, but these are a far cry from a federated Europe. In 1954 France blocked the European defence community, one of the major attempts to start toward supranationality. Since ther efforts have similarly floundered on French resistance.

4. Get back the eastern part of Germany which the Soviet Union took over in the war and later made into a separate state.

Unreconciled to the loss, Adenauer has sought the reunification, Heinrich von Brentano.

establishment of Germany as it existed in 1937. That year was picked to avoid claims on territories later acquired by Hitler. Adenauer has managed to prevent non-Communist nations from accepting the division of Germany as permanent and from extending diplomatic recognition to East Germany. His policy is based on the hope that the Soviet Union will eventually agree in the interests of a general East-West settlement. If anything, such Soviet agreement seems more unlikely today than ever.

NON SUPPORT

While Adenauer's foreign policies have met with only mixed success, he has triumphed in that all major West German political parties have accepted them.

Kurt Schumacher, for years the head of the opposition Social Democratic Party, used to sneer at Adenauer as "the chancellor of the allies"—meaning the tool of the conservative powers. In West Germany's early history there was support for neutralism opposition to NATO, agitation for a more flexible policy toward the Soviet Union.

By 1959 the Social Democratic Party had come completely around, adopting the essentials of Adenauer's foreign policies. Today these have the full support of the Bundestag (parliament). West Germany is as fully committed to the Western side in the world struggle as any nation could be.

Despite his triumphs, Adenauer began losing popularity in 1958. The immediate cause was his refusal to resign as chancellor, as he had agreed to do, and take the largely honorary position of president. There was a widespread feeling he was getting too old and too used to power.

LOST MAJORITY

In the next general election two years later, Adenauer's party lost its absolute majority in the Bundestag. He had to patch together a coalition and troubles began piling up. The 1962 Spiegel crisis, a treason action against a magazine which specialized in criticism of the Adenauer government, made the government look bumbling and devious. The crisis finally forced Adenauer to agree to resign.

Adenauer's detractors say this comedown is long overdue. They claimed he stifled the development of democratic processes with his one-man type of government. They argued that he killed real chances for reunification by refusing to soften his line toward East Germany and endangering the peace of the world. Now that Adenauer is about to step down, they are beginning to forget the criticism.

The West Germans seem disposed to look back upon the Adenauer era as one that was good for them personally and good for their country. They prospered and the country regained a powerful international position. The stubborn old man apparently is assured an honored place in the history books.

Bears in Nfld, National Park Are Increasing

TERRA NOVA, Nfld. (CP)—Perhaps the black bears have heard about Newfoundland's decision to declare them a game animal.

Or maybe it's just the word of good eating in the Terra Nova National Park dump in getting around.

In any case, the animals are steadily increasing in number in the park 95 miles northwest of St. John's.

Officials are rather pleased when the bears are big attractions for camera-toting tourists. On the other hand, there's some concern because the animals are becoming dependant upon man for food.

The dump, located a few hundred yards from the Trans-Canada Highway, is a favorite gathering place for the bruins.

Most tourists remain in their cars after driving to within 100 feet or so of the animals. And park visitors are advised that when they're not preparing meals they should make sure their food is left in the car.

The black bear is native to Newfoundland, was formerly considered nothing more than a nuisance. But last year they were declared a game animal and licenses for the season which began Sept. 17 are $10.

But of course the bears in the park are protected — and possibly that's why more are flocking there.

Sect Forbids Members Living On Farm From Possessing Either Money or Property

WASHINGTON, Ont. (CP)—Karl Marx and Christianity find a common ground on a 1,300-acre farm near this western Ontario village.

A sect known as the Brethren of Early Christianity practises communal living to a degree that forbids any of the 95 persons living on the farm from possessing either money or property.

Brother Alexander Rago, one of three elected trustees who administer the community, quotes Marx in defining its aims: "From each according to his ability; to each according to his need."

But he emphasizes that the farm is operated in conformity with the word of God and in the style of early Christianity.

"All things, all things in common, so doth the Bible read; all things, all things in common, the spirit gently pleads," the brethren sing, convinced they are living by the Book of Acts.

The sect, derived from the Hutterites, was founded in 1931 on a farm near Kitchener, 10 miles northeast of here, by Brother Julius Kubasek. There were only three adults and three children in the first community.

During the Depression the community transferred its holdings to Bremen, Sask., and later to Yarrow, B.C., where membership grew to 21. In 1940 a farm was bought near here.

HAS OWN SCHOOL

A 100-year-old farmhouse is the nucleus of the community. Here are the kitchen, the community dining room where all eat together, and the adjoining chapel. Motel-like living quarters stretch out on each side of the main building.

The community, with its central treasury providing for the needs of all its members, is almost self - supporting. Women pack and freeze produce for the table. Homemade bread and farm-produced meat are served.

There is a school, a modern two-room building, providing elementary education to the Grade 8 level. Those who continue on may take department of education correspondence courses.

The brethren use all the latest equipment—there is even an automatic bread-slicer in the kitchen—and teams of men operate threshing machines on an hourly basis for neighboring farmers. Other men work in the machine shop or handle the geese, and women may be assigned to the noodle factory or take their turn in the kitchen.

The doors are open for any who want to leave and there is a welcome—along with a year-long preparatory period — for those who want to join the brethren.

The community provides a considerable degree of personal security but there are few luxuries and it makes demands on its members.

"Communal living means we must learn to bear one another's burdens," says Brother Orval Baer. "People who have lived a life of self-indulgence would find some things here a real cross."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

"To be—or not to be. That is the question."

A non-sports writing bloke by the name of Bill Shakespeare posed that question for one of his theatrical whodunits, "Hamlet," a few hundred years ago.

I don't know whether Cliff "Sonny" Belch, president of the City Commercial Hockey League is a Shakespeare fan, but oddly enough he is faced with the same poser.

But "Sonny" is different from the Shakespearean character. He asked himself, Sonny that is, the question and almost immediately came up with the answer.

In short it is this. If it is not to be, at next Tuesday night's meeting of the league slated for the Recreation Centre at 8.30—then it "won't be."

And that, says President Belch, is the gist and core of the whole business.

If there are not enough interested people and indications of sufficient support at the Tuesday confab, he will call the whole thing off—and let the ashes fall where they may.

And if the meeting does not attract any more people and potential sponsors or word from these, than the first call, then the funeral arrangements can be made—no flowers please—unless someone else wants to take up the organization cudgels and get the proper people in line.

At the inaugural meeting of the league held some time ago, there were hardly enough there to round out two tables of bridge. It might have been a little early season, but that is no reason why some sort of organization could not have been arranged.

As a matter of record, Gerald Joyce and Bill Spinelli, two backboxes of amateur hockey fame, were the only potential sponsors who showed any sort of interest. Even they were not definite in their statements or messages.

After all, they can't be blamed. No one wants to enter or sponsor a club in a two-team league. If some of their definite decisions hinge on the acquiring of two or three more clubs to round out a playable circuit.

The trouble is a lot of sports-minded people here are like the guy who was so used to having things done for him he married a widow with four children.

"Let George do it" may be a sports cliche but it applies to many phases of athletics wherever games are played. The willing horses get all the work while most a few of the media type keep to neighboring pastures, content to see the job done.

Last season four clubs comprised the Commercial League and wound up with the sponsors getting a fair rendition of success. I'm told they loosed $250 into the clubs' kitties and due to extra extracurricular activities and sometimes fair crowds received nearly a quarter of their investments in return.

If the Commercial League is embalmed and interred at next Tuesday's meeting it means the end of hockey for a lot of guys who love to play the game. Spectators-wise it will have junior "B" while the minors will hold forth in their hundreds.

President Belch, I believe, means what he says. He does not want to see the demise of the league and hopes that potential sponsors and others interested in the circuit will turn out for Tuesday's meeting.

"If not," he told me via telephone, "it means the end of the league as far as I am concerned."

He did a fine job in the presidential chair last season. He worked hard with his executive to round up sponsors and get the league organized. But he feels that a little early-season co-operation from all concerned is the first step to any league success.

So it seems the fate of the Commercial Hockey League or at least Belch's tenure as president hinges on the outcome of next week's get-together.

Hawks Take Wing; Defeat Rangers 3-1

Doug Harvey Scores Two For St. Paul

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Paul Rangers aren't looking forward to losing Doug Harvey.

Harvey, sent to St. Paul to get in condition after missing New York Rangers' training camp, is a big man for the Central Professional Hockey League Rangers.

The 39-year-old defenceman scored two goals in the new league's opener Tuesday night to give St. Paul a 6-3 win over St. Louis Hawks.

Wednesday night, Harvey made one of his patented key passes and sent Paul Andrea on a breakaway for the winning goal as St. Paul edged St. Louis 4-3.

In another opener, Omaha Knights nipped Indianapolis Capitols 2-1 at Indianapolis.

Harvey, 10 times a National League all-star in 15 seasons, is slated to join New York as soon as he is fit. This may be sooner than the Rangers expect.

Phil Esposito, Don Brown and Rene Bourbonnais were the other St. Paul marksmen. Alain Caron, Dave McComb and Bill Greco scored for St. Louis.

Gary Peters scored both Omaha goals on screened shots which Indianapolis goaltender Bob Champoux did not see. Ray Ross poked in a rebound for the lone Indianapolis goal late in the third period.

In the regime of Rudy Pilous, the knock against the Chicago Black Hawks was that the club was too young.

They missed that big push-off from the starting line, wasting weeks before rounding into a cohesive unit. Two years ago they won only three of their first seven starts. They were aching for a win the first few times out both years.

Coach Rudy Pilous is gone now and his successor Billy Reay changed the script Wednesday night, making his debut with a 3-1 win over New York Rangers in the opening game of the season for both clubs.

The schedule resumes with one game tonight, pitting the Hawks against the Red Wings in Detroit. Toronto Maple Leafs launch their defence of the Stanley Cup at home Saturday night as hosts to Boston Bruins while the Rangers go against the Canadiens in Montreal.

Chicago's two - point effort Wednesday night, before a hometown crowd of 14,651, carried the club to the top of the standings over Montreal and Boston who produced a 4-4 sawoff in the schedule opener Tuesday night in the north.

PLANTE FEPPERED

Jacques Plante, playing his first scheduled game for New York since a seven-player swap with Montreal last June, was peppered with pucks and beaten twice in the first period and once in the final period.

Play was held up 19 minutes in the third period after he suffered a cut that took seven stitches to close.

Plante said later he was struck in the face by the elbow of Chicago right-winger Bobby McKenzie, an expatriate from the minors who counted the second goal for the Hawks.

Billy Hay and Ron Murphy the other Chicago scorers and Earl Ingarfield clicked for the Rangers, who fired 32 shots at Glenn Hall.

The red-headed Hay opened the scoring at 7:30 of the first period with assists from Bobby Hull and Ken Wharram. Ingarfield got that one back with an unassisted effort at 12:51, stealing the puck from Chicago strongman Howie Young to beat Hall from in close.

At 19:08 Hay set up McKenzie and the Hawks went ahead 2-1. There was no scoring in the second 20 minutes. Murphy's goal produced a 3-1 lead at 9:34 of the final period. Chico Maki and Eric Nesterenko drew assists.

WINGS GET GODFREY

The Red Wings picked up Warren Godfrey Wednesday in a swap of defencemen with Boston. They sent Montreal-born Gerry Odrowski, suspended earlier by Detroit along with goalie Hank Bassen for leaving camp over a salary dispute.

Godfrey, however, won't be in the Red Wing lineup tonight against the Hawks. He was on Detroit's Pittsburgh farm club in the American Hockey League.

Irish Beat Balmy Beach At Rugger

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (Reuters) — Balmy Beach, the Toronto rugby club, was beaten by the North of Ireland 13-8 when it opened the Northern Ireland section of its tour here Wednesday.

But the Canadians put up a first-rate display, especially in the second half.

The experienced North of Ireland club, which plays in the Ulster Senior League, led 8-0 at half. Excellent passing by the backs gave the Irishmen superiority over the Canadians.

But in the second half Balmy Beach, taking advantage of a strong wind, pressed on numerous occasions and gained ground with neat kicking.

Fullback Ricky Parsons, with a penalty goal, and wing forward Bernie Baldwin, with a try, scored for the Canadians.

Honored by Ryder Cup Teams

Jones Still King Of The Links

ATLANTA (AP) — Professional golf stars of the United States and Britain clash Friday in the biennial Ryder Cup series in an atmosphere dominated by the greatest amateur of them all—Bob Jones.

This is Bob Jones' home, and he still is king—not only to his worshipping neighbors but to the present-day giants of the game.

Arnold Palmer is terrific, Julius Boros is an amazing physical specimen at 43 and Peter Allies of England is one of the all-time stylists. But all of them look to Jones as the emperor.

"Bob Jones is marvelous—an ideal of golfers everywhere," said Allies. "I am sure he is revered as much in Britain as he is in the United States."

Jones, now 61, confined to a wheel chair by a crippling illness but still keenly interested in the sport which he helped popularize throughout the world has attended very dinner honoring the Ryder Cup teams.

FINDS PLEASURE

He seems to find pleasure in meeting the various players and sharing small talk on the vicissitudes of this exasperating and frustrating sport.

The players, British and American, queue up at the little social gatherings for the honor of speaking to the immortal grand slammer.

When captain Palmer sends his U.S. team against the invaders Friday in the first of 32 matches covering three days, Jones is almost certain to be in the gallery.

As honorary chairman, he will follow play in an electric cart or listen-to developments from the club house law—"he can," as he puts it, in referring to the cheers and groans of the gallery.

STARTED HERE

It was on this same East Lake Country Club course that Bob Jones took his first swings as a boy at his father's elbow.

It was here that he refined his game between travels while playing in 31 major championships in Britain and the United States between 1916 and 1930, winning an unequalled 13 national crowns.

Jones' influence is everywhere. His pictures line the walls of the sprawling brick club house. His trophies are everywhere. One case has the exact replicas of the trophies won in the grand slam of 1930. (The British Open, amateur and the U.S. Open and amateur).

The Ryder Cup competition, won by the United States 11 of 14 times has never lost on American shores, opens with eight foursome matches. These will be followed by eight best-ball matches Saturday and 16 individual contests Sunday.

BELINSKY SIGNS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bo Belinsky and Los Angeles Angels pulled something of a post-season surprise Wednesday by announcing that the eccentric left-handed pitcher has signed a contract for the 1964 season. It had been widely predicted that the Angels would trade Belinsky this winter. Instead, he became the first man they resigned and apparently the first player in the major leagues to come to terms for next season.

PM to Drop First Puck In Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson will participate in ceremonies Saturday night as Toronto Maple Leafs open their National Hockey League season. Maple Leaf Gardens announced Wednesday night.

The prime minister will present a cup to Leaf centre Dave Keon and will drop the puck for the opening faceoff in the game between Leafs and Boston Bruins.

Keon will be presented with the J. P. Bickell Memorial Cup as the most valuable Leaf and will get a gold miniature of the cup.

RANGERS LOSE

MADRID (CP-AP) — Real Madrid, five-time winner of the European Soccer Cup of Champions, slammed Glasgow Rangers of Scotland 6-0 Wednesday night to gain the second round of the competition. The crack Spanish team finished with an aggregate of 7-0 after home-and-away games. It beat Rangers 3-0 in Glasgow two weeks ago.

'Battle Of The Bulldozers' Sunday

Brown Versus Huff

HOCKEY TIME AGAIN! — "Take it easy, Jean — This isn't your fight," Bruins captain, Leo Bolvin, tells Canadiens' defenceman Jean Talbot (left) during aftermath of first period brawl in season's opening hockey game between the Boston Bruins and Montreal Canadiens at the Boston Gardens. Combatants Forbes Kennedy (between official and Bolvin) and Montreal defenceman Terry Harper (19) already have been parted. Game ended in 4 to 4 tie. (AP Wirephoto)

By BOB GREEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Violent Sam Huff, middle linebacker of New York Giants, sat on a bench in the club dressing room and talked about Jimmy Brown.

"My wife phoned me in Washington Saturday night and asked me if I'd seen him in the Brown-Steeler game on TV," Sam said. "She seemed afraid for me."

There's a sound basis for Mrs. Huff's concern. Her man will be one of the chief agents in the Giants' attempts to contain the 230-pound fullback in New York's key National Football League game against Cleveland Browns Sunday.

The Eastern Conference lead will be at stake. The Browns, bolting along unbeaten under new coach Blanton Collier, currently hold the lead with a 4-0 record. The Giants, defending conference champs, are 3-1 going into their home opener.

The Giants will be healthy for the first time in three weeks with all hands ready to go. Fullback Alex Webster, who has missed the last three games with a back ailment, will start on offence along with Phil King, who inured his left instep last week.

Coach Allie Sherman said he wanted that duo, the Giants' two big backs, in starting roles to give Y. A. Tittle better pass protection. Tittle, who was on the sidelines for New York's only loss, leads the league in passing with 50 completions in 82 tries for 753 yards and nine touchdowns in three games.

Most of the concern, however, is not with Tittle's protection but with stopping Brown, a five-time league rushing leader who is off to his greatest start. He has gained 664 yards and scored seven touchdowns, both league highs.

"I don't think there's a linebacker in the league who can stop Brown playing him man to man," Huff said. "Don't give me that responsibility.

"You don't play him head to head. There are times when he gets just involved. There are plays when I do key on Brown, but if we're in a zone defence, my responsibility is the middle.

"If Brown gets outside he's going to hurt you with his speed, but I believe he is more dangerous coming through the line. . . ."

The Giants-Browns game is the highlight of the Sunday schedule which also has Chicago Bears at Los Angeles, Detroit Lions at Dallas, Green Bay Packers visiting Minnesota Vikings, Philadelphia at Washington, Pittsburgh visiting St. Louis Cardinals and San Francisco 49ers at Baltimore.

Plans-2-Man Relay Carnival

A two-man relay carnival is slated for the Maple Secondary School track on Saturday, October 12, 1963, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

Twenty-four teams have been entered by seven schools in the four different races to be held. Local teams include: O.S.D., Albert College and Molra, while visiting teams will come from Oshawa O'Neill, Osler McLaughlin, Norwood, Perth and Tweed.

In this type of competition each runner covers half the total number of laps, running one lap at a time, then handing the baton off to his partner who runs a lap before handing the baton back to the first runner.

The juvenile and junior teams will cover a distance of four miles; the intermediates will run six miles and the senior two-man teams will run a total of eight miles.

Small trophies will be presented to the winning teams in each age group.

Larks Seek To Stop Doll Sale

TORONTO (CP) — The Montreal Alouette Football Club Incorporated filed a writ here Wednesday, seeking a court injunction to stop the sale of an Alouette football player doll by two Toronto firms and two Toronto men.

The action is against Alfed Toys and Enterprises Limited, Mondrich Sales Limited, Ernest Liberman and John Blair.

The Montreal club says it wants the court order to restrain the defendants from selling or distributing a doll-like toy known as Flip and bearing the name Alouette, and other indications of the Alouette football uniform.

The club declares the doll infringes on the club's trademark, and that sale of the doll constitutes passing off the defendants' wares for those of the football club. The Alouette club also seeks damages.

OPENER POSTPONED

MONTREAL (CP)—The opening game of the 1963-64 Ontario Junior A Hockey Association schedule between Oshawa and Montreal, scheduled here Sunday, has been postponed to Oct. 18, it was announced Wednesday. A group of folk singers will occupy the Forum on that night.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—Cesca, Stafford Farms' fleet three-year-old filly, ran right into the contender's spot for next Wednesday's $10,000 added Challenger Stakes handicap in taking Woodbine's featured seventh race Wednesday.

Cesca rolled off the six furlongs in 1.10 1-5, just one second behind the track record, with Ron Turcotte in the saddle for his second win of the afternoon.

Apple, a Western Canada invader, and Arthur H jumped into the lead early with Cesca a slow third. Just after passing the quarter pole Cesca moved to the top and all the others saw from that point on was her dust.

Arthur H, after falling back to fourth place, came on to be second and Indian Crossing moved up steadily to be third.

'May Not Do Much Good'

Mets, Colts To Get Help

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Houston Colts and New York Mets got a chance today to pick up some new players—but chances are even this won't help them much.

Both teams again finished ninth and 10th in the National League standings and the eight established clubs agreed to help them out by letting them buy some more players.

The Mets and Colts were set up in 1961 through a player draft and today's deal will be similar. Each of the older clubs has listed four players whom the newcomers may buy for $30,000 each.

But which players?

Their names have not been announced, but few are likely to qualify as stars.

One of the men who does know the names—general manager George Weiss of the Mets —does not seem greatly impressed.

Weiss, who will get first choice of players in a conference telephone hookup, said Wednesday night the draft "might be what you'd expect, it's not going to put us in the first division."

MIGHT BUY TWO

Weiss said he might buy a couple of players—he wouldn't name any possibilities—but added, "that's an offhand estimate. I still have some calls to make. I want to get hold of some people who know the physical condition of some of these players."

The way this year's plan will operate, a club can close its list after one of its players has been chosen. But it does not have to, and as many as 32 players may be drafted at the price.

Five members of the Cincinnati Reds have been reported as candidates for the draft list. They are pitchers Don Zanni and Jim Coates, infielder Charley Neal, outfielder Ken Walters and infielder - catcher Gene Green.

TURLEY IS COACH

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Red Sox of the American League signed Bob Turley as 1964 pitching coach Wednesday. Turley, hard-throwing right-hander best known for his winning years with New York Yankees, ended his active career this past season with the Red Sox, after being released by Los Angeles Angels.

ESKS CUT TWO

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos placed Don Stephenson, six-year veteran centre and linebacker and defensive end Luther Jeralds on waivers Tuesday. Coach Eagle Keys said the move would make room on the western football club for newcomer C. B. Simone, a late cut from Denver Broncs of the American League.

SWAP DEFENCEMEN

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Red Wings and Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League swapped defencemen Wednesday. Detroit sent rookie Gerry Odrowski to Boston in exchange for veteran Warren Godfrey. Godfrey was to report to the Red Wings Pittsburgh farm club in the American Hockey League for Wednesday night's game in Buffalo.

WANT GUARANTEES

LONDON (AP) — British boxing chiefs said Wednesday they were opposed to Sonny Liston fighting in Britain again unless he gives adequate guarantees of fulfilling his engagements. But they postponed a final decision. The British boxing board of control considered Liston's sudden departure from Britain last month.

OFFER CLAY A FIGHT

SEATTLE (AP) — A group of Seattle businessmen headed by restaurateur Dave Cohen said Wednesday it has offered Cassius Clay $25,000 to meet Eddie Cotton next summer or earlier. The bout would be planned tentatively for Seattle's new Sports Coliseum, due to open in June.

JOHNSON INJURED

PITTSBURGH (AP) — John Henry Johnson, the Pittsburgh Steelers' rambling fullback, will be sidelined for Sunday's National Football League game at St. Louis because of an ankle injury, the club said Wednesday. Johnson sprained his ankle two weeks ago.

The Trots

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Dusty Chief, owned and driven by Eli Dell of Becher, Ont., not only captured the featured $1,000 mile dash Wednesday night at Western Fair Raceway, but turned in the fastest time of the young season here, a rapid 2:06 3-5.

Dell, who collected half the jackpot, kept his seven-year-old mare reined in until the head of the stretch, then surged down the middle for a length victory over Dolly Dale B, owned and driven by Floyd Belmore of Salford Ont.

Biggest mutual payoff of the night occurred in the fifth race when Crystal Hal, owned and driven by Stan Hughes of Ingersoll, Ont., paced home to return $29.70 to win. Crystal Hal's time was 2:08 3-5.

Heaviest combination payoff was produced in the ninth race when Oral Hi, driven by Jiggs McFadden of Dresden, Ont., came in first and Royal Oaks finished second for a $63.50 bundle.

American League Openers

Hornets Blast Bisons 4-1

Lou Angotti, a 25-year-old right winger, was hampered by injuries most of his rookie year with Rochester Americans last season and managed only 31 points on 15 goals and 16 assists.

He got about one-sixth of that total Wednesday night — three goals and two assists—in Rochester's 9-1 rout of Baltimore Clippers in both teams' American Hockey League opening game.

Pittsburgh Hornets blasted Buffalo Bisons 4-1 and Cleveland Barons beat Hershey Bears 4-3 in other openers.

Angotti, who played at Michigan Tech after his junior stint with Toronto St. Michael's College Majors, sat out most of last year with a broken leg and a fractured elbow, getting into only 39 games in his rookie year.

He got off to a blazing start in the opener, opening the scoring with less than a minute to go in the first period and adding two more in the middle period. Kent Douglas, recalled after the game by Toronto Maple Leafs of the National League, Les Duff, Gus Brissard, Dick Gamble, Jim Pappin and Gerry Ehman all scored for the winners. Jean Ratelle got Baltimore's only goal.

SCORES THREE

Veteran Joe Szura scored two goals and had an assist in Cleveland's win over Hershey. The Bears' first opening night loss in eight years. Dick Mattiuzzi and Fred Glover got the other Baron goals. Roger Decordy and Michel Harvey scored for the losers. Harvey on a third-period penalty shot.

Lowell MacDonald also had a three - point performance, two goals and an assist, in Pittsburgh's victory at Buffalo. Eddie Joyal broke a 1-1 tie in the middle period before MacDonald rammed in his two clinchers. Pit Martin scored the other Hornet goal and Billy Dea for the losers.

No games are scheduled tonight.

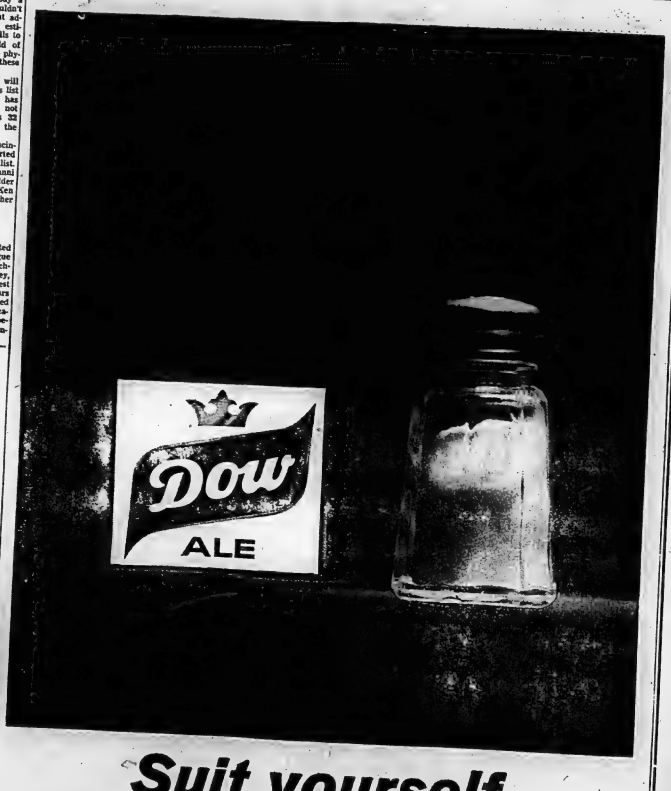
HALIFAX IS PGA SITE

HALIFAX (CP) — The Ashburn Golf Club in Halifax has been selected as the site of the 1964 Canadian Professional Golfers' Association championships.

Jose Torres Meets Don Fullmer

TEANECK, N.J. (AP)—Once-beaten middleweight Jose Torres, consistently faster and sharper with his punches, started his comeback Wednesday night with a 10-round decision over Don Fullmer of West Jordan, Utah.

Jabbing and hooking to the head and body for the first seven rounds, the 27-year-old Torres piled up an early lead and was able to withstand a late rally by Fullmer, 26.



Referee Joey Harrison, the sole official under New Jersey rules, scored it 5-2-3.

The favored Torres, a Puerto Rican now living in New York, had a three pound advantage in weight 161 to 158.

Movie Column

Said Home Town Stinks And Wil Rogers Agreed

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Thirty years ago a movie starlet was interviewed at the end of a strenuous day in the publicity mill of New York City.

What did she think of Claremore, Okla., her home town?

"It stinks," she replied.

The two words helped make Rochelle Hudson one of the most talked-about actresses of the day.

"You'd think I had uttered blasphemy," she recalls. "The studio was on the phone for me to come home before I said anything else. I received a mountain of mail, half of it condemning me and half patting me on the back for saying what I thought about my home town."

Will Rogers, who was also from Claremore, phoned me and said: 'You're absolutely right—the place does stink! You see, there was sulphur in the water. And if you know what sulphur smells like, you know what I mean."

SEEKS WORK

Rochelle is back in Hollywood after a few years and going back to work. "I'm not hungry, but I'm available," she said.

Her beauty is more mature but still as attractive as when she appeared in Ara Gesu Our Children, Imitation of Life (the first one), Judge Priest and The Mighty Barnum.

Today she was doing a Day In Court for ABC.

Rochelle said one hazard in selling herself as an actress is the replay of her old movies on television.

"Last week they played Curly Top with Shirley Temple and I just died," she said. "Producers see those old pictures and say, 'she must be in a wheelchair by now.' They don't stop to realize that I started in the business when I was 13."

EXPECT 300

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 300 delegates are expected to attend a national convension of the National Federation of Liberal Women of Canada here starting Oct. 28. Highlight of the three-day convention will be an address by Prime Minister Pearson.

AT THE PARE — Frankie Avalon (right), Torin Thatcher and Mariette Hartley experience dangers and thrills on a safari through Equatorial East Africa in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Drums of Africa", opening tonight at the Park Theatre. The exciting drama of slave traders at the turn-of-the-century was filmed in color. It was directed by James B. Clark. On the same program "Flipper", the Dolphin, in Color, starring Chuck Connors, Luke Halpin with "Flipper". Both films are first Belleville showings. Complete shows tonight and Friday 7.00-8.50. Saturday continuous from 1.00 p.m.

Wellington

WELLINGTON—Mrs. Hilton McCartney of Picton spent a few days last week with her sister and brother, Mrs. W. H. Teskey and Mr. William Wiggins.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Haven were guests last week of their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Jones and family at Markham.

MOTOR TO VANCOUVER

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thompson of Cherry Valley have returned home from a very enjoyable motor trip to Vancouver Island. While there they visited Mr. Thompson's brother, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Thompson, also Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Thompson and family. They were gone four months and covered nearly six thousand miles on their trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Smith of Rochester spent last week with his mother, Mrs. Bessie Smith, and his sister Mrs. Arthur Hudson.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Bovay, Nancy, Dennis and Jamie, of Picton were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Bovay.

Vietnamese First Lady Has Lot to Learn Re TV

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — South Viet Nam's photogenic Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu has already been heard about the perils of overexposure on television, but she has a lot to learn about making friends and influencing networks.

When the Vietnamese "first lady" announced plans to visit the United States, the three major U.S. networks plunged into their usual fierce competition for exclusive interviews. She—or her representatives — apparently granted practically all requests, network and local.

But as things stand now, NBC's Meet the Press show next Sunday will be her only exposure on network TV.

Chet Huntley noted during his Tuesday night newscast that Mme. Nhu had at that point called off three scheduled television interviews "because she is too busy and doesn't want to risk over exposure. . . ."

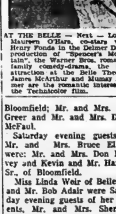
Wednesday she cancelled an interview scheduled for Friday on Mike Wallace's NBC Today Show. Then she broke a date for a two-hour Open End session, set for next week's syndication by host David Susskind.

ABC announced it had been promised the first American interview, then beat the rush by taping one in Paris. It was broadcast last Sunday afternoon.

CBS, which had Mme. Nhu set for next Sunday's Face the Nation, decided she was going to be too seen and heard all over the place and cancelled the date. She was replaced by her father, who doesn't approve of her controversial image.

The excuse for breaking the Today Show date, given to NBC by a spokesman, was that she is "limiting her public appearances to two a day."

The hole in the show was filled with an interesting replacement: NBC correspondent John Sharkey, who arrived here today for a special checkup after receiving injuries when attacked by Vietnamese plainclothesmen while covering the suicide of a Buddhist monk.



Sharkey also will be a member of the Meet the Press panel of interviewers—if Mme. Nhu doesn't cancel that date, too.

Picton News

Homemakers Name Leaders

PICTON — A successful Training School for 4-H Homemaking Club Leaders was held at Bloomfield Town Hall Thursday and Friday, October 3rd and 4th. Leaders from 14 clubs met to study the prepared manuals and watch demonstrations which they in turn will present to their club members. The project is "Dressing up Vegetables" and after the end of 6 or 8 meetings an Achievement Day is planned for February 8th, 1964.

At the first little imsides this project deals with vegetables — a very valuable and necessary group of protective foods but badly neglected and mallpreserved. So in addition to studying the place of vegetables in the menu, the proper ways of preparing and interesting ways of serving them is stressed.

All told there will be 14 4-H clubs in Prince Edward. A new club has been formed at Sophiarie with Mrs. Ted Laundry and Mrs. Blaine Foster as leaders. It is very encouraging to see new clubs being formed in new areas and to have women willing to carry on as leaders. There is a very real satisfaction in working with 4-H Homemaking Club members.

Unfortunately Greenbush and Bowerman's Clubs were unable to send leaders so perhaps interested members could be absorbed by nearby clubs.

Albury — Mr. Joe Doxtator. Mrs. C. E. Ladouciez, Carrying Place; Ameliasburg — Mrs. W. Pulver, Mrs. G. T. Clark, Carrying Place; Athol — Miss Mary Redford, R.R. 3 Picton. Mrs. M. Osterhout, Consecon; Consecon — Mrs. V. Tracy and Mrs. John Wait of Consecon; Demorestville — Mrs. Herbert Gorstine, Demorestville, Mrs. M. Cole, Picton; Gilead — Mrs. Gerald Jennings and Mrs. C. Cassidy of R.R. 2 Bloomfield; Hillier — Mrs. Alfred Best, R.R. 3 Consecon, Mrs. Pat Alexander, R.R. 2 Hillier; Milford — Mrs. Keith Walker and Mrs. John McCaw of R.R. 1 Milford; Mountain View — Mrs. Neil McMaster and Miss Alice McMaster of R.R. 7 Belleville; Secharia — Mrs. Ted Laundry, R.R. 8 Picton; Mrs. Blaine Foster, R.R. 1 Bloomfield; Union Vale — Mrs. Leland Pearsall, R.R. 3, Picton, Mrs. H. As a small token of appreciation the Department of Agriculture was pleased to entertain the club leaders for lunch at Maple Inn on Thursday, Oct. 3rd.

Finish Firehall Remodel Job

PICTON — Work has been completed of interior remodelling of the second storey of the fire hall to provide offices for Picton's new full-time fire chief. It also includes a training room for firemen.

At Monday's meeting of town council, it was decided to call for tenders for a new roof for this building.

The town will purchase paint and the firemen have volunteered to paint the interior of the new quarters.

Fire committee report recommendation was adopted, that a meeting be arranged between a committee from the Township of Hallowell and Picton Fire Committee to consider an agreement for the provision of fire protection by the town for such areas in Hallowell where hydrants are available. (Some sections outside town limits are serviced by hydrants but under existing rules, the fire truck cannot go beyond town limits).

Fire Chief N. Bell was authorized to attend an Emergency Measures Organization two-day convention in Trenton and to purchase a winter parka.

Used equipment is to be purchased for the fire department's new offices.

Golf Executive Takes Office

PICTON — Lewie C. Garrison Jr. was named new president of the Picton Golf and County Club at a meeting of the club's directors Friday night. The appointment of auctioneer succeeds Joe Strattin the post. Lewie had previously served as secretary-treasurer of the club as well as chairing the club's games committee. The vice-president for the '64 reason is Fred Rose.

The following directors were designated to chair club committees: George Cooper, house committee; Fred Rose, games committee; Bill Drew, membership committee; X. P. Mayhew, and Pierre Jones, finance and property committee; Joe Strattin, membership committee.

Bill Simon was reappointed club secretary.

The ladies' section of the club also held its meeting to elect officers on Friday. Mrs. Marion Shields is the new games captain and she will be assisted by Pat Taylor and Evelyn Drew. Mrs. Edna Pearce and Mrs. Margaret Garrison will serve on the club's house committee.

Seek Storage Shed

PICTON — The necessity of acquiring a building for storage of town equipment was again stressed at Town Council, and a report will be presented at the next meeting by the Streets and Property Committee. To be investigated is the possibility of using some property previously acquired at tax sales.

The town has been requested by the Department of National Defence to permit town equipment to be used in cleaning sewers at Picton Heights.

Blood Clinic Held

PICTON — The Red Cross Blood Donors Clinic held in Picton Armoury on Monday saw 233 volunteers attend and all but eight were accepted. They provided 227 bottles of blood.

The response was very pleasing to the Red Cross and to those who had given a great deal of time in organizing the clinic. Officials were highly commended on the efficiency with which the clinic operated.

People - - Taxable Property Increase as Picton Grows

PICTON — Population of the town of Picton increased from 4,707 in 1962 to 5,023 in 1963, up 338, according to town assessor Leonard Tripp.

But there were two fewer dogs this year — 380, his report to town council revealed.

Public school residential assessment is up $83,225 to $3,229,125 for the current year, but public school commercial assessment is down $5,225 to $1,767,625. However, the overall public school assessment is increased this year by $78,300 to $4,996,750.

Separate school residential assessment is $296,725, a decrease of $18,350. Separate school commercial is up $9,475 to $130,025, with an overall decrease of $8,875.00.

Total taxable property is $5,590,550; exempt property, $2,136,375, a total of $7,794,925. This is an increase of $91,700.

Seek Common Land Purchase

PICTON — "Whereas there is a need of adequate pasture to meet the needs of the present and more so for the future use of the livestock producer:

"Therefore be it resolved that the Prince Edward County Farmers' Union endorse the efforts of the Prince Edward Land Use Committee and urge it to recommend the purchase of that part of the Abramsky property lying above Highway 33 consisting of approximately 2000 acres for a community pasture under the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act."

The above resolution was passed by the members of the Prince Edward County Farmers' Union at its annual convention held in Milford on October 4th. With the number of pasture farms declining and livestock numbers increasing on many farms; the members felt steps should be given to the future.

The Farm Union representative of the committee, Alex Mann, answered many questions of the farmers concerning the proposed Community Pasture. If not purchased now it was felt it may be some years before being considered again. Mr. Mann stated.

Heater for Park

PICTON — The new heating system to be installed in the house at Benson Memorial Park replacing one which has failed due to a broken heating coil, and cannot be replaced. Town Council accepted the tender of Vanlluwen Bros. at $1,350 for the installation of an oil-fired-hot-air heating plant, and $35 for removal of the present heating plant. The other tender, by S. Hollingsworth and Son, was for $1495.

Mediation Talks May Lead To End Of Strike

Longshoremen to Hold Meeting on Saturday

MONTREAL (CP) — Negotiators for 3,000 striking longshoremen spoke confidently of a settlement of their week-long walkout early today when a marathon mediation session with the Shipping Federation of Canada broke up shortly after 2 a.m.

The union executive immediately called a mass meeting of members for 8 a.m. Saturday to consider "some small changes" in the settlement proposals made by the federal mediator, Judge Rene Lippe.

"If the members accept them, that would end the strike," said Paul Asselin, president of the largest Montreal local of the International Longshoremen's Association.

Negotiators for the federation however, made no comment following the session, which started Thursday afternoon.

Leo Taylor, president of Montreal Local 1837 which represents checkers involved in the strike, called a meeting of his group for today.

Mr. Asselin was asked whether the men would go back to work Saturday afternoon if they accepted the proposals.

HOPES FOR SETTLEMENT

"I hope not to see Mr. Lippe again," he replied. "Not because I don't like him. But rather because we hope to have the strike settled by then."

Details of the changes were not disclosed.

Teddy Gleason of New York, international ILA president, said after the session broke up:

"I think some progress has been made. We'll know how much when we get it to the men. It's up to them now."

Fringe benefits were understood earlier to be one of the big issues separating the two sides and Mr. Gleason was asked if a breach was child on.

"You couldn't pry that out of me son," he said. "Why should I tell you the newspaper people before we tell the men?"

SHIPMENTS DELAYED

The strike, which hit the St. Lawrence River at what usually is its busiest time of year, is holding up the shipment of 60,000,000 bushels of wheat to Russia.

In Ottawa Thursday, Prime Minister Pearson said no doubt the federal government would step in if necessary and stop the strike but he also said "can't go on indefinitely."

But he told reporters after a cabinet meeting that the government would act only if Judge Lippe fails to win a settlement.

He gave no indication of any time limit on the mediator's efforts and did not say whether the government would first try personal mediation through Labor Minister MacEachen before asking Parliament to impose compul-

Ford Plant Back In Production

OAKVILLE (CP) — The huge Ford of Canada plant here swung into operation Thursday after 36-hours silence as wildcat strikers returned to the assembly line after winning a first-round battle with management.

But the 4,700 members of Local 707, United Auto Workers (CLC), promised at a mass afternoon rally in Hamilton their return is temporary.

Ford has 10 days, they stipulated, to settle assembly-line grievances or workers will strike again—once more paralyzing the plant's entire production of 1964 models.

The first union-company meetings are scheduled for today and "will continue day and night until a settlement is reached," said Edward of Bruce, local president.

2,000 RETURN

More than 2,000 night workers reported for work Thursday evening and another 2,500 day-shift employees, who halted production when they refused to cross picket lines Wednesday morning, returned to their jobs this morning.

It took union leaders three hours to persuade the angry strikers to return to the factory and leave the matter in the hands of the bargaining committee.

Mr. Bruce said: "Unless we get some satisfaction and find that the company is bargaining in good faith, the members said they would take the same action in 10 days."

He said negotiations will concentrate on smoothing out workers' complaints about plant discipline, accelerated production on the assembly line and line reporting of supervisors and superintendents from the United States.

Trade Minister Sharp said confidential information given to the House of Commons about Canadian grain sales has been leaked.

Labor Minister MacEachen said Judge Rene Lippe is not yet satisfied that a settlement of the longshoremen's strike is impossible.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said the government's failure to act on trusteeship legislation earlier contributed to the strike.

The government's trusteeship legislation was given first reading.

Storm Signals Flying

OTTAWA (CP) — Storm signals are flying on the Great Lakes in the wake of a serious squall in relations between Canada and the United States over government trusteeship over five waterfront unions.

While Parliament studies legislation for the unprecedented government take-over of the marine unions, U.S. Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz and AFL-CIO President George Meany created a storm with acid comments from Washington.

Their intervention Thursday stunned Ottawa and stirred speculation that a serious rift is developing in government-labor relations between the two countries.

In the Commons, there were cries of protest against the Washington outburst and a speedy approval of a government resolution, allowing first reading of the trusteeship legislation.

The measure, a 10-page document spelling out the specific powers and duties of the three government trustees, includes strong sanctions against any person who is convicted of obstructing or hindering the trustees' job—fines of $10,000 and two-year jail sentences.

ASKS SIU SUPPORT

Despite an official report condemning the Seafarers' International Union of Canada as a corrupt and lawless tyranny, Mr. Meany called on the AFL-CIO affiliates to support the SIU in its fight against government trusteeship and the rejection of free trade unionism in the Canadian maritime industry."

Labor Minister MacEachen said he was "absolutely shocked" at Mr. Meany's backing of the SIU as a free trade union.

Former Conservative labor minister, Michael Starr, rose in the Commons to depict Mr. Meany's intervention as a call for "outright warfare along the whole maritime front."

Claude Jodoin, Canadian Labor Congress president, called Mr. Meany's statement "misinformed" on the marine situation and, in effect, told the U.S. labor union leader to keep out of Canadian problems.

If Mr. Meany gains support for an all-out fight against the government trusteeship, it could lead to a total shutdown of Canadian ships in U.S. ports, a possibility already raised by Mr. MacEachen.

BLAMES CLC

The verbal duel between Ottawa and Washington erupted when the U.S. labor secretary and Mr. Meany's conference to blame the collapse of private talks on a voluntary trusteeship plan on indications that Canadians control any union-sponsored trusteeship.

The CLC wanted two Canadians on a three-man board of trustees set up by organized labor to run the maritime problem.

"What's wrong with that?" Mr. Jodoin asked. "It is a matter that comes under Canadian law."

Mr. MacEachen endorsed the

NRC to Use Falcons to Drive Birds Away From Airports

OTTAWA (CP) — An experimented falconer from Victoria has been hired by the National Research Council to train peregrine falcons to drive birds away from Canadian airports.

The council said Thursday that Frank L. Beebe, director for Canada of the North American Falconry Association, will supplement research work started in March by its associate committee on aircraft engine bird strikes.

Use of falcons, a small bird of prey, to prevent aircraft accidents and damage to aircraft engines caused by collisions with birds is one of several methods to control bird populations at airports.

Aircraft accidents caused by birds, mainly gulls, have been on the increase in recent years as a result of the growth of airports, the increase in air traffic and the introduction of jet aircraft engines.

During the last three years, 400 collisions between birds and aircraft have occurred at Canadian airports.

British Conservatives Divided Over Leadership

BLACKPOOL, England (CP) — A daring piece of political showmanship by Viscount Hailsham has thrown the Conservative conference, ordinarily a sedate affair, into a wide open struggle for power.

So chaotic has the situation become that the Earl of Home, foreign secretary, opened a speech today by offering a prize to any newspaper man who could find any indication that he plans to bid for succession to Prime Minister Macmillan.

Hailsham's self-made boom grew to a pitch approaching that of the hysteria at American political conventions and certainly surpassed anything in Conservative party history.

He had only to show his face before party representatives at the Blackpool Winter Gardens to send them into ecstatic applause.

But Butler, 60, still appeared the top contender for the leadership despite Hailsham's campaign.

Hailsham took the conference into the palm of his hand during the opening Wednesday when, with the stage instincts of a Barrymore, he entered the hall. He waited until other ministers had been dutifully introduced to dutiful applause, then ran spectacles on tip of nose—he sauntered alone and unintroduced across the stage, his party figure the epitome of lovable British respectability.

But his sense of histrionics may be less appreciated in top Tory circles as reports already circulating here is that some leading Conservatives are irritated at Hailsham's abrupt bid for power.

In London, The Evening Standard says the responsibility exists that Hailsham may have to resign from the cabinet because of hostility toward him in cabinet circles.

Hailsham's biggest performance came Thursday night when —after Macmillan announced he would resign because of illness —he announced he would disclaim his peerage.

He had performed an uncharacteristically turgid speech before 2,500 — another 1,000 failed to get into the hall — and had humbly accepted a vote of thanks.

Then he rose again and, eyes glinting with tears, begged leave to "veil in my own words," of his desire to renounce his title and revert to plain Quintin Hogg. By this time the yells "we want Hailsham, we want Quintin" were lonely mingled with For He's a Jolly Good Fellow.

Throughout his earlier speech downgrave and town - agers alike nodded happily and murmured "hear, hear" as Hailsham recalled Britain's imperialist past and foretold a glorious future. An American observer received furious glances when he muttered "garbage" after Hailsham said Britons should not be ashamed of any of their past wars.

Butler, meanwhile, was enjoying a soft and modest if more glamorous acclaim at a Tory dance adorned by some of Britain's noted sitting beauties and most blue-blooded aristocrats.

A spotlight followed Butler as he danced with Lady Home and he was cheered out of the ball in the manner of a cricket star.

In the hard light of morning, the over-all picture remained unchanged — Butler is the last but delegates thoroughly confused and ready to expect anything.

Butler was said to be favored by most of his cabinet colleagues and by the powerful interests in London and elsewhere. Some, however, were suspicious of his cleverness — high intelligence being traditionally feared in British politics — and by the fact he had been passed over before, leaving him burdened with the tag of loser. Among party faithful Butler is disliked as a compromiser.

The other chief contender, Reginald Maudling, 46, was said to be favored by his parliamentary colleagues but lacked top comparative inexperience. Hailsham, obviously the darling of the conference, derives most strength from the constituencies but party workers throughout the country.

The choice is complicated in that, strangely, it seems, there is no detailed and clear precedent for how to decide the successor. Normal procedure has varied in the past.

One thing is certain — the question will be left to central, secret ballot of Conservative parliamentarians, as is done by the

Canada Makes Cut-Rate Sale of Butter to Britain

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has made a cut-rate $11,000,000 sale of butter to Britain, first large export order since 1959.

But the transaction can be described as a one-shot deal with little bearing on the big butter surplus of some 250,000,000 pounds which Agriculture Minister Hays has said must be sold, probably at a loss.

Informants said Thursday night that Canada's half a 5,000-ton tender called by British for delivery by Nov. 15 to Dec. 15 indicates that Canada until supplies are available from its conventional Australian and New Zealand suppliers.

The United States is understood to have got the other half of the order—about 5,500,000 pounds—in extremely competitive bidding. Sources say Canada's also means only a slight drop in the chronic surplus. The order is for butter aged one or two years and therefore lower price.

The loss to the federal treasury on the sale probably will be more than $2,000,000.

The dairy farmer under federal support - price assistance gets a return of 58 cents a pound for top butter grades, basis Montreal and Toronto.

There is a drive behind— amounting to 12 cents a pound on about $40,000,000 annually— which reduces the export price so that butter remains more profitable domestically with substitutes such as margarine.

Contrasted with the federal government's level of concern, the going international price is about 36 cents a pound delivered Montreal or Toronto.

Canada's per-pound price in the British sale is understood to be about 28 cents.

The British deadline of Nov. 15, imposed because of pressing needs, may result in some delay because of the longshoremen's strike on St. Lawrence ports. But some shipments are believed originating from Toronto, missing the strike.

Police Lay Murder Charge In Kaladar Logger Slaying

KALADAR — (Staff) — A 51-year-old part-time bushworker this morning was charged with capital murder in the shooting of Hugh McMahon, a middle-aged logger, in the dead man's roadside shack near here Wednesday night.

Charles Morton Loyst was formally charged by provincial police after he had been detained for questioning since early Thursday.

Loyst was brought to Napanee this morning and remanded one week in Lennox and Addington county jail. The charge was laid after OPP investigators conferred with County Crown Attorney Kenneth Hamm.

WAS BOARDER

Police said Loyst had been boarding at the McMahons' home for the past two weeks. Mrs. McMahon is now staying with relatives in the Erinville district.

The charge ended a 24-hour investigation into the death of 59-year-old McMahon, found dead beside his shack on Highway 41, five miles south of here. Police believe he died minutes before midnight Wednesday after a bullet from a high-powered rifle struck him in the neck.

Police, combing the area yesterday, found a .303-calibre rifle near the highway about a half-mile south of here.

Senior OPP officers from Belleville district headquarters launched investigations into McMahon's death in the early hours of Thursday morning.

District Inspector A. McDougall and detective sergeant Lloyd Lyle, of Belleville, took part from local officers. Later in the morning Inspector R. H. Devereaux, of the force's Criminal Investigation Branch, arrived from Toronto to assist inquiries.

The probe centred on the shack where McMahon was found dead.

From the outside, it is a small, shambling wooden structure, on the west side of the highway, in a small clearing hewn from surrounding bushland. The ground in front of the shack was littered with waste lumber, strewn among OTTAWA (CP) — Sixty Canadians representing various segments of the population were named Thursday to the advisory body that will help prepare the 1967 centennial of Confederation.

The Centennial Conference will meet for the first time in the Parliament buildings next July and October, Thursday. The group will reconvene every six months thereafter until the celebrations start in four years time.

The conference comprises two representatives of each provincial government and 40 members appointed by Privy Council President Lamontagne, minister responsible for centennial preparations.

The federal appointees include Claude Jodoin, president of the Canadian Labor Congress; Roland Michener, former Commons speaker and Conservative MP; Jean Marcon and Mercor Moore, television and stage personalities.

The members include six mayors and representatives of universities, business, the judiciary, news media, and farm and veterans' organizations.

WILL STATE POLICY

Representatives of the federal and provincial governments will make statements of policy Tuesday, concentrating on arrangements for grants to assist centennial projects of a lasting nature or interest.

On Wednesday, the delegates will explore suggestions as to how Canadians can best observe the 100th birthday of Confederation.

The federal government is already committed to spend uj

A. P. Correspondent in N. Africa Ordered Expelled From Algeria

ALGIERS (AP)—Andrew Borowiec, chief Associated Press correspondent in North Africa, was ordered expelled from Algeria today. The UPI bureau chief also was reported ousted.

Police took Borowiec to Algiers airport under orders to put him on the first available plane leaving the country. The order from President Ahmed Ben Bella's interior ministry gave no specific reason. A printed form referred to "foreigners being expelled under immediate necessity."

The United Press International bureau in Paris reported that Alain Raymond, UPI bureau chief in Algiers eight years, was told by Algerian authorities he is a "danger to security and public order."

Borowiec, 35, was arrested Thursday night and advised that the expulsion order was being prepared. After a long interview with police officials he was released to return to his hotel, where he later was picked up for the trip to the airport.

Dig Dead From Mud as Toll Mounts

CP from AP-Reuters

BELLUNO, Italy—More than 10,000 men worked feverishly to collect bodies of dead in the Valont dam disaster and then bury them in a gigantic mass grave to prevent outbreaks of disease.

Up to 3,000 persons were believed dead when a mountain landslide crashed into the dam's reservoir Wednesday night, sending a vast flood roaring over the dam and down the Piave River valley.

But most of the bodies are missing under the miles of mud and stone that turned the lovely alpine valley 60 miles north of Venice into a wasteland.

Government officials said between 1,985 and 2,000 persons are known to have been killed but a local news agency said the death toll will reach at least 3,000.

Officials at the Belluno prefecture estimated that 900 bodies have been recovered.

Most of the victims were still buried under the tons of mud and rock that tumbled into the Alpine valley 60 miles north of Venice into a wasteland. Many of the bodies may never be recovered.

Deputy Mayor Terenzio Arduin of Longarone, whose town of 4,600 was wiped out, said at least 1,000 of the town's residents were under the debris.

About 100 electric company employees, their families and other hundred residents of other villages also are missing.

Premier Giovanni Leone came to the stricken area as police moved out more than 200 persons whose villages were destroyed by the threat of new landslides.

Interior Undersecretary Giovanni Girardin said hopes for recovery of the bodies was the most urgent problem. He warned that if they were not soon buried properly, the area faced a major epidemic hazard.

Italian troops, police, Red Cross teams and U.S. military personnel worked side by side. Many worked through the night under portable searchlights.

Supplies and heavy earthmoving equipment moved into the stricken zone from all sections of Italy.

The landslide, crashing into the reservoir, sent millions of tons of water plunging at 700 feet up the surrounding mountain sides. Then the ragging water boiled over the 873-foot - high reinforced concrete dam, the world's third highest, and roared down the valley, wiping out whole villages.

Bell Telephone Submarine Cables To Be Laid Across Bay on Nov. 13

November 13th is the tentative date set by Bell Telephone for "Operation Baywater" which will see two new submarine telephone cables laid across the Bay of Quinte between Belleville and Rossmore.

One of the cables will be a 33 pair toll cable to run between Belleville and Picton, and the other is a 600 pair cable to provide better local service in the Rossmore area.

The lead end of the two cables will be floated with oil drums, hauled across the open stretch of water, and allowed to settle on the bottom of the bay.

Preparations for installing the two cables have been going on for several weeks with a contracting firm doing excavation along James Street and the Bay Bridge Road and laying concrete tile through which the cable will be run.

Installation of the tile is well progressed and is expected to be completed in another week or so.

The two big underwater cables will be shipped in coil reels from Montreal by highway tractor-trailer to the east side. (the one containing 900 pairs of wires) will weigh in the neighborhood of 25 to 40 tons.

With the completion of the excavation work along the Bay Bridge Road, the road right of way will be widened by moving back the fence on the east side.

Eventually the road shoulders on both sides will be widened and plans also call for moving back the hydro poles on the east side of the road.

North Ireland Favored to Take Honors

CALEDON, Ont. (CP)—Competitors in the second round of the world plowing championship winds up here today.

By tonight, when the results will be announced at a press conference, one of 33 competitors representing 12 countries will walk off with the golden plow trophy and the world title.

Nearly 30,000 spectators turned out for Thursday's first round under bright sunny skies to watch competitors plow stubble field. Today's test will be in stubble.

Favored after the first round is one of the plowing Barr brothers of Coleraine, who placed fourth in the 1959 match.

The 33 entrants, armed with yardsticks, taps measures and an assortment of tools, carefully plowed their furrows Thursday with frequent stops for measurement and minor adjustments to their plows.

For the leader of Canada's team, Toby Trimble of Portage La Prairie, Man., the first round was disastrous. He made a narrow short of finishing the required number in the 3½ hours alloted by the judges.

EYE INJURED

Australia's team also suffered a setback when Josef Gschaider received an eye injury while sharpening his plow. A sliver of metal entered his left eye and after treatment by a doctor the eye was covered.

On the Northern front, Jack with Jack is brother Tom, 54, a bachelor farmer of Enfield. Both are coached by Hugh Wilson, their 37-year-old young brother who farms next door to Jack.

Hugh won the world title three times in succession, 1954-55-56.

Canada's Trimble still is in contention for the plowing title, despite the points he lost Thursday for his error in judgment. But he will have to come up with his best effort in today's final round.

Trimble wrapped up the Canadian championship last year. The other member of Canada's team is Gordon Wells, 33-year-old dairy farmer from Stouffville, Ont.

U. N. Approves Measure To Call Off S. A. Trials

By CARMAN CUMMING

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Afro-Asian and Asian countries, rejecting Western protests, pressed for a quick, new condemnation of South Africa today.

The United Nations General Assembly backed them.

A 53-country resolution urged South Africa to call off the trial of a group of Negro nationalists charged in Pretoria with plotting armed revolt, and to free the prisoners.

The resolution was speeded through the assembly special political committee Thursday only hours after it was circulated and put to the committee.

A number of Western countries, including Canada, protested that there had been no time to give the measure fair consideration.

But Asian members insisted that it was a matter of life and death that permitted no delay. They said the trial was being persecuted for opposing the government's apartheid (race separation) policy.

The committee finally approved the measure by a count of 57 to 1 with seven abstentions and 14 countries absent.

Both the committee and the full assembly have to lift members' bare, so today's vote was expected to follow the same lines.

RAPS TACTICS

Canada, along with most Western members, backed the spirit of the resolution but criticized the tactics employed to press it. There were reports the move had been timed to coincide with the policy speech in the assembly earlier Thursday by Gerhard P. Jooste, South Africa's external Affairs minister and delegation leader.

South Africa stayed away from the assembly meeting. Portugal cast the only negative vote.

Canada's delegate on the committee, Jean A. Chapdelaine, said Canada was not in the habit of mincing words in condemning South Africa's race policies.

He said Canada's objections had nothing to do with the bu-

Construction Roundup

H. J. McFarland Construction Co. Ltd. picked up a nice contract last week, according to Mac White, Belleville manager. Contract was for paving and some bridges on the 401 from Marysville through to Napanee, worth nearly a million and a half dollars. No definite date yet, for beginning the work.

Also on the 401, Harvey's boys are paving the Marysville interchange, under a separate contract. Clarence Scott is handling the job.

On Highway 14, paving will start near Foxboro next week. Henry Laird is in charge of the job, he's expected to get the base course (first layer) on the whole stretch before the freeze up. He hopes to get some of the top course on, too, but he may not have time. Can't lay asphalt in weather colder than 40 degrees, because it won't pack properly if it cools too much on the way to the job. Department of Highways laid down the 40 degree limit in specifications.

On another road job, Norm Lightfoot reports that the Wortordale Sideroad, from Cannifton road to the site of the new Smith Transport terminal is being given granular fill now. Job of hauling the fill has been subcontracted to Berton Fitzgerald and Fitzgibbons has rented a portable weigh scale from Jack Both, so it looks like everybody's getting into the act.

Bob Lightfoot, meanwhile, has had a crew drilling its way up Wallbridge Road, from Hastriett to Frank Streets, since Monday. Two thousand feet of six-inch water main going in there, and it looks like blasting all the way.

Jim Lightfoot watched over excavation for the new Bell Telephone building, corner of Pinnacle and Victoria, for Dodge Construction of Cardinal, Ont., when the job. He is waiting now, to see if Dodge want anything more done. In his spare time, Jim worries about the Lightfoot crews doing a sewer and water job in Frankford, a sewage disposal plant for Batawa, a water purification plant for Campbellford ,a county bridge north of Stirling, and a job for the CNR near Gananoque.

The Tatham Co. Ltd. started three projects over the past week, according to James Cotteril, vice-president of the firm. Two new roads for Smith Transport, one in Belleville and one in Brockville, are under the one contract. The terminals are identical, except the Belleville terminal is two bays larger. Third job is re-habilitation and expansion of the "weather pollution control centre" (that means sewage disposal plant), in Picton. These two jobs will finish Smith are employing an average of 30 men each, the job in Picton will average about 20. All will last until spring.

The new Gingerman's motel on North Front St. by the 401 will be finished by Christmas, according to George Snow, supervisor for Begg and Daigle of Toronto. Finished, the motel will be 74 units, coffee bar and a dining room, with maybe a liquor license for the dining room. Between two of those 74 units are under cover now. George says and they're working on the two on the pool area. There are about 40 men on the job.

Meanwhile down by the bay, Jim Thomson of Bell Telephone reports the last of the overhead phone lines beside the Bay Bridge Road have been taken down and buried in the ditch beside the new conduit. The old lines don't rate a spot inside the conduit line, but that's being saved for the next lines, to come at a later date. The Inspiration people, meanwhile, have moved south of the bay, where they have another 2,000 feet of conduit to lay.

Last job on the north side, a loading manhole for the end of the conduit near the shore. Bell has installed about seven. Lots of water trouble while it was going though, took four days pumping to drain the hole. It's one of five manholes north of the bay, another three are going in on the south side.

Kari Lepina, the Dumas and Smith engineer who kept watch on the North Front St. bridge job, has moved to Ottawa for about three months. He hasn't looked at the plans yet, but figures he'll be back down there by the 5th. His family will remain in Belleville.

John Krautzopf, meanwhile is on Highway Two between Marysville and Trenton, working with another bridge. John was supervisor on the North Front bridge for Lesby Construction, of Dublin, Ont., and is doing the highway two bridge for the same firm.

Meanwhile, on North Front St., Darby of Highland Creek is soldering the bridge expansion banksments, with sod from the Bridge farm, just south of Stirling.

Husky-Voiced Edith Piaf Dies in Paris

CP from AP-Reuters

PARIS — Husky-voiced Edith Piaf, 47, the acrobat's daughter who rose to fame singing such songs as "La Vie En Rose" though she never took a singing lesson, died today in her Paris home from an internal hemorrhage.

She had returned by ambulance from her Riviera home near Grasse Thursday. Her doctor said she was resting well today, but nothing could be done to save her.

The petite singer long had battled ill health.

Miss Piaf, who rose from a street singer to star status, was married last year to one of her singing discoveries, Theo Sarapo. He was 20 years her junior.

Miss Piaf has been in and out of hospitals for several years, suffering from abdominal ailments. She had five major operations.

HAD LUNG TROUBLE

Earlier this year, the singer was treated in a Paris hospital for lung trouble and bronchial congestion and also had blood transfusions for anemia.

The wall-like singer with the powerful haunting voice known to millions around the world for her number and trademark La Vie En Rose.

Affectionately known as the "sparrow" to Parisians, her strangely-stirring voice cast a spell on her listeners when she sang songs as Milord, La Vie En Rose and Je ne Regrette Rein.

Millions of her records were sold throughout the world and the acrobat's daughter, reputed to have been born on a Paris sidewalk, was said to be one of the richest women in France.

Albert Alford, of Corbyville, shows off a box of the potatoes grown in his garden this year. Biggest spud of this box was eight inches long and four inches across, and several more were nearly as big.

Letter to the Editor

Describes 'Y' Operations And Place in Community

Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer.

In view of the need to have everyone acquainted with the services provided by all the various agencies operated in the United Appeal, I would like to offer something of how the Y.M.C.A. operates and its place in this community.

Like any other agency, Y.M.C.A. purpose is to build better citizens through the development of mind, spirit and body. The Y.M.C.A. is responsible only to its own community and the stronger the support, the better is its activity and achievement. Its recreational activities function without taxation and Belleville has met its obligations since 1911, strictly through the voluntary support of time given by local citizens and financial through voluntary contribution. Thus, the Y.M.C.A. remains one of the few real democratic participating functions left to us.

There are more than 100 Belleville citizens participating in its control through committees organizing such activities as physical education programming, Christian emphasis, finance, building construction, leadership training, day camp, public relations, life saving, etc. This supports around 90,000 aggregate attendances each year at the Belleville Family Y.M.C.A. These groups are coordinated by your board of directors, consisting of 28 Belleville citizens.

The National Council of Y.M.C.A. in Toronto is available to us only for advice and has no direction over any local Y.M.C.A. They are valuable to each local association when it asks them for screening and training of salaried staff and to get the benefit of what other Y.M.C.A.'s have done about local problems. Through this co-ordination, your children are afforded access of the finest leadership as well as administration ability. To illustrate, Belleville operates the Y.M.C.A. at a cost of only 35¢ per year per child. It is a credit to the Belleville Family Y.M.C.A. salaried staff that this is the lowest operating cost of any Y.M.C.A. in Canada.

HOLD AT LEVEL

Your directors feel a responsibility to hold membership fees at a level where no one can be left out. This ranges from $6. to $15. per year per child, which on an average of two activities per week, is less than one half of weekly admission to a show, but with greater attendant benefits. Citizens who support our United Appeal play a part in making this Y.M.C.A. just as much as those who are volunteering their time.

We need no child left out. This year an installment payment plan has been introduced, in trend with the times. If these smaller payments are still difficult for anyone, there is a list of Belleville citizens who have offered to pay for membership if the need is made known in confidence to the General Secretary.

The new building is now well underway to be completed in the spring of 1964. The gymnasium has had to be postponed. From studying similar situations elsewhere in Canada, we find it not uncommon to run additional local community projects in other parts of the city with only the business centralized in the "Y" building. Thus, trained Y.M.C.A. programs provided under our General Secretary, Mr. Diamandidis, B. Sc., M.E., Mr. Graham Geldart, B.P.E. and Miss Carroll Anne McCullough, can be made available to local activity in our north and west ends, if a sufficient number of people from those areas can volunteer some time to the present committees for the development of such club and gym activities in these other areas. Transportation can be organized if the needs are made known.

Such youth activity cannot be self supporting unless in an exclusive club with high fees. This is not the Y.M.C.A. purpose. It must be made available to everyone and in Belleville it has been proved to provide facilities to as many girls as to boys. Grater assistance is needed to fill the needs of our growing youth population. With the volunteer work spread over many persons, the Y.M.C.A. is in the interest of our young people and continue to rank with any in Canada. You can play an important part when the volunteer form the United Appeal calls upon you.

Capabilities of Air Craft Compared by Group Captain

TRENTON — Guest speaker at last night's meeting of the Trenton Lions' Club, Group Captain E. M. (Ernie) Butcher, Commanding Officer at RCAF Station Trenton, compared the capabilities of "Old Vintage" air craft, under his command air craft, such as the Dakota, with the present day Yukons or C-106, Hercules.

While the Dakota is still in use, and may, according to G/C Butcher, "go on forever," the aircraft appears like a cub beside a grown lion, when compared to the larger, newer aircraft.

The old Dak, "Old Reliable," has an "all up weight," (can get off the ground when freight, passengers and fuel are considered) of 28,000 lbs. The Yukon has an all up weight of 265,000 lbs. and the Hercules, 135,000 lbs.

Comparing speeds, the Dak has a maximum speed of 175 mph; the Hercules, 386 mph; and the Yukon cruises along at 370 mph.

Other old vintage planes, the North Stars, (referred to as Lead Sleds by men who rode them regularly) and the C-119 Boxcars are still used extensively in the command.

Another old plane, the Comet, now out of service, was nevertheless the first pure jet aircraft in the world to come into service in the world. It had an all up weight of 117,000 lbs.; could carry 44 persons and had a speed of 450 mph.

Among the newer air craft, the Argosy and Bristol, were distinguished by a short take-off and landing capability and the Far North because of this.

DRAMATIC ADVANCE

The future?

Group Captain Butcher says that the RCAF will continue to grow, "perhaps, from its present aircraft for many years. (We'll have to.")

The past five years has seen a dramatic advance in Air Transport Command," he said, "and the next five years will be even more dramatic."

Group Captain Butcher questioned the practicability of supersonic transport flight, especially from commercial standpoint. The fuel load would be prohibitive, even though aircraft would fly at speeds of 1,500 to 2,000 mph, nor could cross the continent in little more than an hour. "Is this practical?"

Residents of populated areas might object to sonic booms and less populated areas fly only over oceans or deserts.

Longer and sturdier runways would be needed and super sonic jets would present a problem to air traffic control.

The subject, said Group Captain Butcher, was "too hot to handle."

Group Captain Butcher was introduced to the club by F. J. Asia and thanked by G. L. McClintock.

ASHES BURIED

WEST MEON, England (AP) The ashes of Guy Burgess, turncoat British diplomat, have been buried in English country churchyard. Only West Meon's rector, Rev. John Hurst, and three of Burgess' relatives were at the ceremony. The ashes were interred in the grave of Burgess' father, a Royal Navy commander. Burgess defected from the foreign office with Donald MacLean in 1951 and died in Moscow six weeks ago.

COLLECTION OF LEAVES

Please note that the Public Works Department will not be collecting fallen leaves until the majority of them are down. Later this month another notice, giving our collection schedule, will appear.

You are respectfully requested not to place leaves on the street until the date specified for your street. In this way the problem of piles of leaves becoming scattered after being placed out for collection should be greatly reduced.

Mayor Sure Something Can Be Worked Out

TRENTON — Mayor James MacDonald said from Ottawa late yesterday afternoon that as a result of a meeting with the Minister of Transport, the Hon. George McIlraith, he was now sure that "something could be worked out," regarding a federal government grant of 25 per cent of construction costs for a second bridge for Trenton. The mayor added that the federal and provincial governments were doing everything they could to assist the town within the terms of legislation.

The mayor was accompanied to Ottawa by Clerk-Comptroller G. W. Lazzry and Councillor Gerald Weaver.

A further meeting on the bridge between town officials, provincial and federal department representatives has been called.

Many Detours Add to Woes Of Motorists

TRENTON—To add to Trenton motorist woes, in addition to the detour around a section of Dundas St. East, Dundas St. and Dufferin was closed off yesterday to through traffic while Bell Telephone workmen installed underground cable. Gas in the area was turned off for a time while the work was done, but the gas main was moved so that it would be under the cable.

It is hoped that the work can be completed in time for Thanksgiving weekend traffic.

In the meantime, the laying of a storm sewer in Stanley Heights has closed off traffic to Patrick Court, and it is expected too that "finis" will be put to operations in this area by Saturday.

FINISHING TOUCHES

Finishing touches on curbing on Bay Street this week will bring to an end of the 1963 curbing program.

A storm sewer has been installed on Bay this year and persistent spring flooding conditions on the street should be overcome.

The street has been widened to 36 feet and motorists who use the new road will have access to the Community Gardens' area, will find driving easier and safer.

START TO MOVE POLES

Ontario Hydro yesterday started moving poles on Division St., between King St. and Dundas St. in preparation for the moveover in a week or so of the CNR tracks, running parallel to the street. The tracks will be moved over 27 feet at the widest point and this is all part of the program to widen Division St. itself to 40 feet in this area. Parts of the street are now only 20 feet wide.

Lyle E. Leavitt Killed Instantly In Collision

TRENTON — Lyle Eugene Leavitt, 57, of R.R. No. 1, Wooler, was pronounced dead on arrival at Trenton Memorial Hospital yesterday afternoon, following a two-car head on collision on County Road 39, one mile north east of Wooler. Mr. Leavitt was a passenger in a car driven by 69-year old Albert Wiley of R.R. No. 1, Frankford. The driver of the other car involved was 17-year old Ronald Joseph Hanoski of R.R. No. 1, Wooler.

The accident occured between 3 and 3.15 p.m. close to the Wooler Fair Grounds. Provincial police at Brighton were notified of the crash by a service station employee. Two ambulances from the Rushnell Ambulance Company at Trenton were sent to the scene. Mr. Wiley was sent to the Trenton hospital in a car.

At the hospital today, Mr. Wiley, who suffered high chest and neck injuries, appears to be out of danger, according to a head floor nurse.

Mr. Hanoski, who suffered a head injury and is reported to have a broken right hand, is reported to have partially regained consciousness but the extent of his injuries to be in a serious condition, although the hospital spokesman said that his condition is not all vital signs, appeared to be good.

Mr. Leavitt, a Wooler area farmer for the past 36 years, was born in Bloomfield. He was an affiliate member of Wooler United Church and is survived by his wife, the former Grace Austin; a daughter, Mrs. Homer of Wooler, Austin of Peterborough and Dr. Ronald Leavitt, a chiropractor, of Trenton. Also surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Norman Ormel of Bloomfield and three brothers, Mrs. Ray Young and Mrs. Ross Parliament of Wooler and Mrs. Percy Partis of Courtland, N.Y.

Mr. Leavitt's son Homer, is married to Mr. Wiley's daughter, and the two men were on their way to visit her when the accident occured.

Mr. Leavitt is resting at the Trenton Memorial Home in Frankford where a service will be held at 2 p.m. on Saturday.

Defence Minister To Take Salute At Trooping

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Hellyer will take the salute at the trooping the colour of the 1st battalion, Canadian guards, at Camp Picton, Ont., Oct. 19, army headquarters said today.

The trooping will mark the 10th anniversary of the regiment of Canadian guards. Members of the 2nd battalion, their pipes and drums and the regimental band from Camp Petawawa, Ont., also will take part.

Lions Breathe Easier After Explanation

TRENTON — Trenton Lions were startled last night to hear their president, T. E. Bedford announce that if the members intended to embark upon a broom selling campaign next spring, the brooms, which would be supplied by the CNIB would cost $1.50 apiece plus $2 provincial tax.

A hurried check with the figures, revealed that the $ sign was a per cent sign and the Lions breathed easier.

The meeting, attended by more than 50 Lions and their guests, was held in the Balmoral Room of the Glenburnie Restaurant.

Lions voted to attend an inter-club meeting in Havelock on Nov. 5 and will seriously think about changing date the annual Christmas dinner for underprivileged children to a Saturday morning theatre party at which each youngster would receive a gift.

BUY DISPOSAL CANS

Trenton Lions voted last night to supply the town with 20 disposal cans, which will be mounted on concrete hydro poles and into which, it is hoped, residents will toss waste paper.

The idea, sponsored by Civic improvement chairman, Donald Paterson, will start the cans and the Lions at the same time as a club decal will be displayed on each can.

Twenty heavy barrels, stored in the town sheds, will be placed in parks after they have been painted by the Lions. The barrels were bought for street disposal cans but proved to be too heavy for garbage men to lift, so were put to good use. Men from the public works department will keep them cleaned out in the parks.

The three were identified as Roger Tetrault, 23; Mario Sachand, 19, and Pierre Schneider, 18.

Police said Chief Inspector Gerard Allaire of the Quebec Provincial Police notified Boston the men had fled while on bail on charges of bombing and terrorism in Montreal. Boston authorities said Houle informed police there had fled Canada after bombings.

The trio offered no resistance and were lodged in the appreciation pending instructions from Montreal authorities.

Tribute to the Chief

Wednesday night colleagues and comrades gathered in Belleville to pay tribute to R. W. Probert, for 21 years Chief Constable of this city.

In actual fact, the chief retired nine days ago. However, that was a brief official ceremony, the formality of which did not do full justice to the man who was custodian of the peace in Belleville for two decades. In that time Chief Probert became more than the administrator of an important civic post. As a top-ranking police officer his function dealt as basically in personalities as with legalities. In fact, through the years, this first facet publicly superimposed itself over the other. A big man, he has a personality to match his physique. Thus, it was inevitable that this quality should immediately impress itself upon the hundreds of citizens who came to know him during those years.

As an administrator he headed his local department in a period of unprecedented change, a time when society itself generally assumed more complex attitudes. New demands were made on law enforcers to meet, and treat, more sophisticated problems. During his time in office, the city police department also underwent its greatest expansions, and the pattern it will follow for years to come, was laid down.

In that period he was also working against odds — notably in the quarters this city saw fit to house his department. Belleville police headquarters, as a public building, remains to this day a and commentary on the civic pride of this city.

Chief Probert, nonetheless, has been able to carry through with his job, and is handing over to his successor, a police force of proven courtesy, capability and efficiency. Need one seek further for proof of his ability and dedication as a public servant?

Even in retirement and out of uniform, he will always be known to the people of Belleville simply as "Chief." Long may he still remain an active and public figure among the citizens he served so well.

Complete Education

All sorts of things are being added to school curriculums now, and more and more people are rising in arms to defend the three R's of yesteryear. Within the past week, for example, the editor of the Trentonian has called for an end to public school driver instruction.

The Trentonian's editorial is reasonable. Recognizing the need for driver instruction, it asks only that such instruction be left out of the public school program.

Other editorials in different papers at different times have called for an end to swimming instruction in schools, home economics courses for girls, career counselling, and other non-academic functions.

There are good arguments for taking all but strictly academic subjects from secondary schools. The move would save money, save the teachers' time, and would do a great deal toward relieving the overcrowding of such schools.

But there is another side to the coin, the theories of education developed by Gandhi and Tagore, on which the education of 400 million Indians is being based. Gandhi and Tagore both taught through different means, that education should deal with everything the student should know, taught as an integrated body of knowledge. Gandhi taught his students handicraft skills with which the students could earn a living during the rest of their education, and Tagore insisted that a well run school should show a profit, from the students' projects.

Although some small universities in the U.S. have accepted parts of the Indian system, there is little chance of it ever being popular in Canada. The thought of a university student weaving baskets, or learning to mop a floor, does not sit well with the average Canadian's idea of self employment.

"Millions of people who have telephones don't have hat-sizes," says a statistician.

It's a great pity that so many people are talking when they ought to be taking a bath.—Sudbury Star.

Habit is thus the enormous flywheel of society, its most precious conservative agent. It alone is what keeps us all within the bounds of ordinance.—William James.

American social fences have to be continually repaired; in England they are like wild hedges; they grow if left alone.—Denis William Brogan.

Company of the Lost

By Richard Hughes in the London Sunday Times

My return to Moscow has been a strange and moving co-incidence — to be back at the time of the death and funeral of the gay, tragic renegade, Guy Burgess.

For when I was last in Moscow, more than seven years ago I was one of the two western correspondents first allowed to talk to him. He and his brooding companion, Donald Maclean, had recently professed atheist theistically in room 101 of the Hotel National overlooking the Kremlin and Red square on a snowy Saturday evening in 1956, when we talked for a brief 10 minutes.

They had been in hiding for five years after fleeing together from England on the eve of their ly arrest for alleged treason and espionage.

Inside the small, old fashioned Hotel room with its chariot and bronze clock and lovely ticking marble clock, a tall, debonair man arose, held out his hand and said firmly: "I am Donald MacLean." A younger sort of gay cavalier wearing an old Etonian tie said: "I am Guy Burgess."

Then after a further seven years of exile and unhappiness along the wayward path we chose, the end of the trail has come for Burgess.

Burgess appears to have fritted away his remaining years of existence in Moscow, engaged in dead end publishing pursuits, occasional drinking bouts, and at dull cocktail parties, aging perceptibly in recent years and undergoing bad, bloated times.

He lived a retired, even a hidden life in a typical Moscow apartment which he crammed with books and English newspapers. He had few Russian friends. Soviet acquaintances knew him for some obscure reason, as Jim Andreyvitch Elliott.

What of the survivors of this wandering, wasting company of Burgess, MacLean, after 12 years of exile, has ended its post as adviser with the ministry of foreign affairs and returned to a suburban apartment where his American wife and two teenage sons are with him.

He was a man of outstanding talent, infinitely superior to Burgess, and was destined for eminence at the foreign office. The Australian Wilfred Burchett is one of the best and bravest war correspondents I ever knew in drifting around Russia, Poland and East Europe as a reporter after a term in North Viet-nam.

I met Alan Winnington, his beautiful Eurasian wife and two handsome and intelligent sons when they lived in Hungary. He is now the Daily Worker's representative in east Berlin — a dignified, lonely figure who spends talk with pathetic casualness in Peking of "going back home sometime."

I am, I hope, no moralist. It seems to me, still affected by Burgess' obscene funeral service at Moscow's crematorium, attended by scarcely a dozen people, with a few of the more English friends, that all these exiles, drearily pursuing their long, lost and lonely trails are paying in substantial measure for their early treachery, foolishly or deliberately committed.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

October 11th, 1933.

The Belleville Kiwanis Club met at luncheon Tuesday noon in the Quinte Hotel where they were regaled by an illuminating talk on life in the British Honduras jungle by Mr. Gilbert B. Scott, assistant manager of the Consolidated Optical Company of Belleville. He said that life in the jungle was peculiar and some times pleasant but never like it is portrayed in the movies with handsome men lying around in beautiful surroundings with good looking girls. The pests, mosquitoes and other insects kill any chance of romance. Life is quite primitive and disease is rampant with no hospitals to give medical effort made on the part of any care to the natives.

Mr. Scott spoke of the deterioration of foods in the high humidity and said the potato crop there is a failure as to raising compared to that in the South. The majority of the potatoes used in Belleville is brought in from New Orleans and were so sorry that they would sprout. Bananas and tropical fruits were plentiful. Bananas sold for ten cents for two dozen; lemons and oranges sold for twenty cents per bag and pineapple, the large ones which could not be shipped, were given away. He reviewed the original settlement of British Honduras by the pirate Wallace, who through a ruse was successful in destroying the whole Spanish fleet sent out from Spain to rid the colony of pirates. Mahogany was the big mahogany the Spaniards cut and transported to England for sale.

Two armed holdup men surprised Mr. R. M. Watson, teller in the Canadian Bank of Commerce here, Wednesday morning after the doors of the bank were opened at 9.30 o'clock on the morning of the 11th. They bound him securely and went to work on the vault. They went through the pockets of Mr. Watson and obtained $40. When Mr. Watson's son-in-law, Mr. Kyle, entered he was taken by surprise and ordered at the point of a gun to "stick 'em up." He did not obey the orders and managed to close with the two armed men, and was getting the better of him when the other bandit came to the assistance of his pal and struck Mr. Kyle over the head with his gun. However, Mr. Kyle was able to overpower the second bandit and at this point the bandits decided it was time to make a break and escape. Mr. Kyle fired the gun he had taken from the bandit, but it misspeeded. The bandits escaped in a car which later was found near Bosehall, Hilton and proved to be a car which had been stolen the night before in Toronto. The police put out a dragnet but as it was believed the men to be bottled-up in the peninsular county. They were not, however as the men were captured seven hours later near Hilton by a posse of Wellington and district men who were aiding the police in the man hunt. The men were tried at Picton on October 18th and sentenced to seven years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary at Kingston.

Kings Cover Curious Art

British Information Center

It is love that prompts people to have themselves tattooed, according to Alex Gordon, president of the World Society of Tattooists, who was interviewed by BBC reporter Jack de Manio recently in the BBC General Overseas Service program "Here and Now". Enlarging on this statement, while he tattooed the picture of an eagle on de Manio's arm, Gordon explained that it might be love for a mother, sweetheart, sister or just one's own love of decoration.

Whatever the reason, customers for the tattooist's needle have included such "top people" as Britain's King Edward VII and King George V, King Frederick IX of Denmark and Lord Montgomery. Alex Gordon himself is a walking advertisement for this curious art, carrying on his back eagles he had tattooed in Japan when he was seven years old and on other parts of his body scenes he saw in Australia and other countries. Recalling the strangest request he has ever had in his thirty years at the work, Mr. Gordon said that a few months years ago a man asked to be tattooed with his last Will and Testament; uncannily, he spoke as if he was already dead, and within a fortnight he was. But the Will stood the test of the legal courts.

The average job cost very little, Gordon said, but the most ambitious work of art he had ever done on the human body was a picture entitled 'Fight for the Eagle', set in the time of the Napoleonic wars, depicted two lancers, several guns, a lot of infantry and background. It took him nine weeks to complete the picture, which covered the whole back of a man's face of his neck to the end of his spine, and cost £130. Today Mr. Gordon deals with a considerable demand from women for cosmetic tattooing, which ensures pink line and cheeks without the aid of lipstick and rouge. It can be removed (after all, most women like a change of color scheme from time to time) but not how is a professional secret.

To Your Good Health

Vitamin 'A' Helps Clear Adolescent Skin Troubles

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My teenage son has been taking 50,000 units of Vitamin A daily. The dosage has cleared up the complexion nicely. I'm told that to continue might make the hair fall out, stunt growth, etc. Please enlighten. — Mrs. J. A. S.

Here's another example that medical science is not a right-or-wrong or yes-or-no art. Many good drugs contain an element of risk, too. Their use can be accurately decided only by a physician who is aware of the circumstances — the need for the medication, the peculiarities of the patient, and the visible signs at the moment.

Thus I certainly cannot say should or shouldn't discontinue the Vitamin A, but I can give you some understanding of the considerations which often apply.

Vitamin A does, in many cases, help clear adolescent skin troubles. It is effective with your son and that's fine.

But toxicity can develop from large dosages, too. Yellowish discoloration of the skin, loss of hair (this is temporary) and bone changes are among the symptoms.

Hence I suspect that if your son has received no extra Vitamin A, you would already be noticing some of the symptoms.

The dose you specify, however, is average for such a condition. You don't say whether the warning of possible side effects comes from your doctor or from someone else. If it is the former, he may have decided (with the original skin condition cleared) to interrupt the continuous use of the Vitamin A periodically, perhaps for a week or 10 days, to avoid its excessive accumulation in the system. This is one way to maintain the benefits and to avoid risk of side-effects.

Or, alternatively, a smaller dose, perhaps half as large, should be continued.

Dr. Molner: My doctor says I have a hiatus hernia but it isn't operative. Just why can't surgery correct it. — Mrs. G. M.

I don't know why he said that, but I presume he has a good reason. Hiatus hernia is the defect which allows part of the stomach to squeeze up through the aperture in the diaphragm through which the gullet passes. In most cases it can be corrected surgically, but in the greater number of them it can be controlled without an operation.

Are you one of those patients who hasn't been given a clear demand an operation, or one who will give conservative (and inexpensive) treatment a chance before resorting to surgery.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 58 and have a lump on the right vocal cord. I am still working, but doctor's care bot he has not said what causes such a lump. What is the cure? — Mr. R. B.

The lump could be a "singer's node" or a "Speaker's node." It is considered common by people who use their voices a great deal. It could also be a polyp, a growth from the mucous membrane. The cure is surgical removal.

At the airport the other day, I was informed that my plane was late because the landing-radar was "inoperative." This meant it was out of commission, not working, broken down.

I picked up a newspaper while waiting, and found that a milk companies were not, as they thought, being boycotted — they were being subjected to a "selective patronage program."

There was some mail from the office in my briefcase, and I took out a communication from the "Council for Independent School Aid." In my day, these were called "private schools; now, apparently to avoid the stigma of snobbism, they are officially referred to as "independent" ones.

And so it goes. We live in an atmosphere of euphemisms, in the soft phrase to cover the hard fact. We only do we refuse to call a spade a spade, except when we are emotionally to avoid its excessive association in the system. This is one way to maintain the benefits and to avoid risk of side-effects.

One of the most fantastic reversals of the English language in the last few years has been the word "exceptional," which is now applied to troubled or retarded children, in my time, an "exceptional" child was one who needed more promise, not less.

It seems that as we become more violent in our behavior, we feel the need to become more euphemistic in our speech. Coup D'etat Lamentable

Ottawa Journal

From every point of view the over-throw of President Juan Bosch of the Dominican Republic is lamentable.

There was a time when one could be cynical about Latin-American revolutions, even find them a little amusing.

There is nothing amusing in this coup d'etat because there was a difference between Dr. Bosch and his predecessors. The great difference was that he was elected in a free and a fair election. He represented a tender budding of democracy, a frail plant in Central America. He replaced tyrannies, including the dark dictatorship of Trujillo.

But now Dr. Bosch has fallen, a prisoner on his way into exile. He is the victim of one of the old Latin American way, of the "strong man" interests on which communism can feed so effectively.

The irony is that those who over-threw him spread the usual old charges that his government was pro-Communist.

He suffered also because it is all too easy in Latin America to call a Communist anyone who believes in a land and a fair division of property. (Not for a time) but that how is a professional secret.

Today in History

Oct. 11, 1963 . . .

A brilliant new chapter in the annals of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police was added 50 years ago today—in 1913—when the police schooner St. Roch arrived in Halifax after the first west to east traverse of the Northwest Passage. One of the men on the crew died of a heart attack as the schooner wintered in the ice less than 60 miles from the magnetic pole. The St. Roch had sailed from Vancouver in the summer of 1940.

1809—The Boer War broke out in South Africa.

1815—Champlain suffered a defeat at the hands of the Senecas.

Kings Cover Curious Art

British Information Center

It is love that prompts people to have themselves tattooed, according to Alex Gordon, president of the World Society of Tattooists, who was interviewed by BBC reporter Jack de Manio recently in the BBC General Overseas Service program "Here and Now". Enlarging on this statement, while he tattooed the picture of an eagle on de Manio's arm, Gordon explained that it might be love for a mother, sweetheart, sister or just one's own love of decoration.

Whatever the reason, customers for the tattooist's needle have included such "top people" as Britain's King Edward VII and King George V, King Frederick IX of Denmark and Lord Montgomery. Alex Gordon himself is a walking advertisement for this curious art, carrying on his back eagles he had tattooed in Japan when he was seven years old and on other parts of his body scenes he saw in Australia and other countries. Recalling the strangest request he has ever had in his thirty years at the work, Mr. Gordon said that a few months years ago a man asked to be tattooed with his last Will and Testament; uncannily, he spoke as if he was already dead, and within a fortnight he was. But the Will stood the test of the legal courts.

The average job cost very little, Gordon said, but the most ambitious work of art he had ever done on the human body was a picture entitled 'Fight for the Eagle', set in the time of the Napoleonic wars, depicted two lancers, several guns, a lot of infantry and background. It took him nine weeks to complete the picture, which covered the whole back of a man's face of his neck to the end of his spine, and cost £130. Today Mr. Gordon deals with a considerable demand from women for cosmetic tattooing, which ensures pink line and cheeks without the aid of lipstick and rouge. It can be removed (after all, most women like a change of color scheme from time to time) but how is a professional secret.

Threat of Shipping Crisis Looms as Meany Calls For Support of Seafarers

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — The threat of a shipping crisis loomed over the Great Lakes today as George Meany rallied the organized labor to rally to the support of the Seafarers' International Union whose Canadian affiliate may soon be brought under Canadian government control.

Warning that he won't be a party to elimination of Harold C. Reiss from the Canadian SIU leadership under present circumstances, the president of the 13,000,000-member American Federation of Labor-Congress of Industrial Organizations said the SIU "deserves the support of all AFL-CIO affiliates in its fight against the destruction of free trade unionism by the Canadian maritime industry."

At Ottawa, Labor Minister MacEachen said he was "absolutely shocked" that Meany would attack the Canadian SIU as a free trade union. The Norris royal commission had condemned Reiss's leadership as dictatorial and corrupt, but Meany charged that the Norris report was intended as "a vitriolic and vengeful" attack against Reiss.

"The AFL-CIO refuses to be a party to any gross injustice to any individual no matter how unpopular the man may be nor how loud the outcry against him," Meany said in a statement, timed with the announcement Thursday by Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz that Canada's U.S. negotiations over the SIU issue had collapsed, mostly because of Reiss's presence.

STUDIED AGREEMENT

Wirtz said a Canada-U.S. committee of officials, headed by Mac-chat, Claude Jodoin, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, Meany and Reiss had been considering a draft agreement for a voluntary trusteeship over the Canadian SIU. This would be composed of one trustee from the CLC and one from the AFL-CIO with a third—a neutral—selected by the two Canadian officials.

But the CLC had demanded that the third trustee be a Canadian, Wirtz said, and the AFL-CIO objected to this procedure, saying the third man should be selected by the committee of four with no regard to his nationality.

Wirtz said this disagreement is unfortunate, but he opposed Jodoin's view that the AFL - CIO was at fault. Meany had co-operated fairly and fully, he said, suggesting that Jodoin was unduly responsible for the collapse.

If agreement had been reached on the terms of the draft, with the third trustee selected by the committee of four, the achievement would have been in line with the desires of both Prime Minister Pearson and President Johnson who last May sought an end to the Great Lakes labor battle, Wirtz maintained.

STILL HAS HOPE

Wirtz said a press conference he still hasn't given up hope for a private settlement to stall off a Canadian government trusteeship. He declined to predict what such a government control would produce, saying he didn't want to aggravate the situation. But the issues of his remarks was clear—there have been reports quoting U.S. officials saying that such a government operation could lead to an open crisis between the two countries.

Wirtz said, however, that since Jodoin had made a statement virtually accusing the AFL-CIO of failing to co-operate, Wirtz felt he had to set the record straight. In doing so, he disclosed that a draft agreement had been considered by the committee of four, providing for a private trusteeship that would have "complete and final responsibility for managing the affairs of the SIU of Canada including the power to remove or appoint officers or employees or cause."

To observers, however, a close reading of the causes for which Reiss, for example, could be ousted from the SIU leadership indicated there might well develop a stalemate within the proposed trusteeship.

No officer could be removed unless he was found guilty of a crime or statutory offense serious enough to make him unfit to hold office. Or he would have to be found guilty of breaching the AFL-CIO code of ethics or deliberately obstructing the trustee in carrying out their duties.

Wirtz suggested the only real split arises from Jodoin's command that the third trustee be a Canadian, but Meany's statement indicated deeper issues are involved, including the question of what is to have jurisdiction over AFL-CIO affiliates in Canada.

He condemned the proposed Canadian government trusteeship, saying he is opposed to government control over unions in any country. As for the Canadian SIU, he noted that the CLC had ejected this union several years ago and therefore "is in no position to speak for the members of the SIU."

While he indicated at one point that he would not object to the third trustee being a Canadian as long as he is fair and impartial, he indicated at another that he is opposed to a second Canadian national.

By placing two Canadians on the three-man trusteeship, the CLC trustee "would thereby be in a position to refer any issue at any time to a Canadian agency, leaving the AFL-CIO without an effective voice but obligated under the constitution to bear the full burden of securing the enforcement of any decision or action."

Wirtz said the CLC had agreed to the formula under which a SIU officer would have to stand for election. But Meany said the CLC had not agreed and this also was a result of the collapse of negotiations.

The position of the CLC was that the trustees should have the power to remove SIU officials from office or for no cause whatsoever, without reference to any standards or criteria of conduct," Meany said.

Meany praised the SIU as being fully co-operative in seeking a voluntary trusteeship short of settlement. This praise virtually confirmed reports that with the national AFL - CIO convention coming up next month, Meany is throwing his full support behind the SIU of North America, headed by Paul Hall, in order to obtain Hall's support in seeking another presidential term.

Pension Talks Between Govts. To Begin Soon

TORONTO (CP)—Discussions on integration of Canada's portable pension scheme with the proposed Canada Pension Plan should begin soon, Premier Robarts indicated Thursday.

He said he had received a letter from Prime Minister Pearson suggesting arrangements for convening the technical committee agreed on at the federal-provincial conference in Ottawa Sept. 9.

The premier made it clear that Ontario will insist that the committee's terms of reference include consideration of the points he outlined during the recent provincial election campaign.

He said repeatedly that he favored the national contributory plan in principle. But he wanted to know how Ontario's 5,000 existing private pension plans and the interests of the 1,000,000 persons covered in them would be affected by the Ottawa scheme.

"The farmer," he continued, "is faced with the necessity of increasing his land holdings, his stock and machinery in order to maintain his income or be obliged to sell his farm and seek some other occupation.

"Every farmer will soon be aware that he needs a voice bigger than his own—a voice big enough for all his brothers.

"The Farmers Union organization is one which came in to being and continues to exist and grow on a voluntary membership basis. We must strive to preserve the family farm and press for parity prices.

"It is time, therefore, for farmers to organize greater than ever before in order to realize a healthy rural economy, to continue to produce to satisfy present markets and to create jobs."

Mr. Haggett concluded his remarks by quoting Mr. Alfred Gleoure, president of the National Farmers' Union: "If we want farm organization we are going to have to pay for it; if we don't pay for it the cost is going to be even greater."

Following a hearty vote of thanks by the chairman, there was a discussion period, after which the meeting adjourned.

Ten Commandments of Parenthood Drawn Up

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: — A group of us parents were talking the other night and we got to talking about our problems. We decided that instead of just complaining we ought to do something constructive. We have drawn up ten commandments which we have titled "The Ten Commandments of Parenthood."

We have tried to be fair and we are proud of our work. Please tell us what you think of it. Here goes:

1. Parents should not spank, cuss-drop on conversations, or search the personal belongings of their teenagers.

2. Parents should give their teenagers an allowance in proportion to the amount of work they do around the house.

3. Parents should not use violence as a means of discipline. Forbidding allowance, telephone calls or nights out or being given extra chores are much better disciplinary tools.

4. Parents should not place teenagers on allotted time on the telephone. Fifteen minutes a night should be plenty.

5. Parents should not run their lives, people or social practices. More often than not, if parents would explain why they disapprove they would find their teenagers in agreement with them.

6. Parents should tolerate teenage clothing fads. They were worse pretty naked get-ups in their day.

7. Parents should not run whole-hog for jobs or something terrible. They should be open, honest and frank.

8. Parents should see to it that their children grow up in an atmosphere where peace is important.

9. Parents should not go on bended knee for their teenagers.

10. Parents should not forget that they were once teenagers and not so very different from us. — PLATTSBURG, N.Y. TEENS.

DEAR PLATTSBURG — You have done an excellent job. I heartily approve of all the commandments except Number 5. In it's place I would suggest substituting this one:

Parents should contribute their God-given right to draw firm and definite boundaries for teenagers. They should not respond to pressure of such arguments as, "Everyone else is doing it. I'm the only one who can't."

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My problem is an unusual one. It's the way my boy friend dances. It's not that he is a poor dancer, it's that he is just too good a dancer for me.

We've been going steady for a year and I've tried to learn the intricate steps so I can follow him, but it's no use. I've told him I feel uncomfortable when he does fancy steps but he pays no attention and does them anyway. It's embarrassing because I feel that everyone it watching us and pitying him.

Don't get the idea that I can't dance at all. I am considered a good partner for standard dances, but I am no good as an exhibitionist. What can you suggest? STUMBLING SAL

DEAR SAL — I know the type. He doesn't need a partner because he's always doing a solo.

Tell him if he insists on trying for the cup every time, you'll walk off the floor and let him shine by himself. Then do it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO TIRED OF CORRUPTION — It takes two to play the game. Why do you criticize him for accepting when you are equally guilty for offering? You can clean up the "scandalous situation" by starting with yourself.

Are you tempted to smoke because the crowd does? If so, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Teenage Smoking" enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

PREDICTS 63 DEATHS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Highway Safety Council predicts that 63 Canadians will die in traffic accidents over the Thanksgiving holiday weekend. The council forsees especially dangerous traffic conditions because of a forecast of generally good weather across the country and because as many areas it will be the last chance for people to close up summer cottages.

SENDS THANKS

OTTAWA (CP) — Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has sent a message of thanks to Prime Minister Pearson for the warm reception he received during his recent state visit to Canada. His message said he is convinced his "short but fruitful stay" and discussions with the prime minister "will ever strengthen the bonds of friendship that already exist between our two countries."

House Will Meet On Oct. 29

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Roberts' announced Thursday the Ontario legislature will meet for a one-day session Tuesday, Oct. 29, and he immediately met with premiers from both opposition leaders.

The premier said it will take only two hours to conduct official business, adjourn until election to enable Ontario municipalities to take early advantage of the federal government's municipal development and loan fund.

Speaking after a 90-minute cabinet meeting, Mr. Roberts said the government will submit its fall legislative program at the regular session of the House, which he will call early in January.

Farquhar Oliver, newly elected Liberal House leader, said it was impossible to fathom his how the government could deal with the municipal loan fund legislation in a couple of hours.

"This government's legislation belated about month to a very important piece of legislation."

PROMISED ACTION

During the election campaign, Premier Robarts maintained his government was anxious to implement the job-creating program as speedily as possible.

He said there would be speech from the throne at the month-end special session, but other matters of a legislative nature associated with the legislature's opening will be reserved for the January sitting.

Mr. Roberts said he has called a caucus of members for Oct. 28, the day before the legislature meets. Elected in the Sept. 25 election were 77 Conservatives, 24 Liberals and 7 NDP members.

The premier also said that the committee studying a proposed medical care program for this province is not expected to be able to make recommendations to the government before the January session.

It would be physically impossible, he said, for the 12-man committee to complet its hearings and forward its proposals before that time.

ALL GROWN UP

Sherry Jackson, the original moppet star of the Danny Thomas show, will appear in "Mr. Novak" as an alcoholic housewife.

WARM IN WEST — British Columbia and the prairie provinces will have above normal temperatures during October according to the long-range outlook of the United States weather bureau. The prediction, based on long-range observations and subject to error, calls for below normal temperatures in Quebec and the Maritimes.

Moderate precipitation will prevail over most of Canada. Table gives precipitation in inches of rain.

CLC position and rebuked Mr. Wirtz for disclosing private discussions without first telling the parties involved.

Said Mr. Jodoin:

"It's a little presumptuous for Mr. Wirtz to make comments on action taken by the Canadian government and the Canadian Labor Congress."

In the Commons, the trusteeship legislation was laid before MPs just as they adjourned for the night. Unprecedented in Canadian history, the bill is specifically related to a commission of inquiry headed by pkr. Justice T. G. Norris, who proposed the trusteeship to end waterfront labor lawlessness and restore union democracy to sailors.

NAMED BANKS

The Vancouver judge placed the blame for violence, strife and terror on the ILWU's controversial Canadian president, Hal C. Banks, a 36-year-old American who has landed immigrant status in Canada. The judge called Mr. Banks a ruthless, power-hungry tyrant who exerted money from his members and ruled them with an iron hand.

The government trustees will be empowered to dismiss any union official in the union they take over. They will have the full power of present union officials, plus some extra authority to reform them, root out abuses and if overzealously turn them back to their membership.

Some of the powers of the trustees will be retroactive to July 8—the day the Norris report was delivered to the government. Under these powers, the trustees could upset any deals by the unions to shift their assets, holdings or buildings to some other agency.

References to the week-long longshoremen's strike at St. Lawrence River ports in Quebec cropped up frequently during debate on the trusteeship measure.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker charged that government "inertia" in not imposing the trusteeship during the summer contributed to the strike by the International Longshoremen's Association.

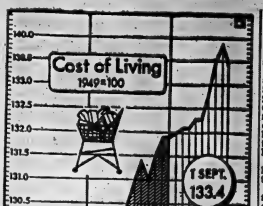
EVIDENCE LACKING

Mr. MacEachen said there was no evidence to support that claim.

Mr. Diefenbaker said there had been a long association between Mr. Banks and Teddy Gleason, American president of the International Longshoremen's Association. They had cooperated in "illegal actions, intimidation and international blackmail."

The debate was punctuated by later-party recriminations.

These began when Mr. Diefenbaker accused Slats Gardiner Pickersgill of having had "solicitude" for SIU President Banks.



The opposition leader said that six days after Mr. Pickersgill became immigration minister in 1964, the cabinet passed an order giving Mr. Banks status as a landed immigrant and placing him "above all possibility of deportation."

ACCUSATION FALSE

Mr. Pickersgill said the accusation of solicitude was "a downright falsehood." He said he had never seen or spoken to Mr. Banks in his life.

Anyone can be deported if there are grounds for such action, Mr. Pickersgill said, but in years the former Conservative government "never took the trouble to find any grounds for deportation."

Arnold Peters (NDP — Timiskaming), a former union organizer, said trusteeship and compulsory arbitration would become a "crutch" on which people would rely in future labor problems if Parliament made them an accepted method of settling differences.

SLIGHT DECLINE—Canada's cost-of-living index declined slightly to 133.4 Sept. 1 from the record high of 133.9 a month earlier. Lower food costs were the biggest factor in the decline.

Graph traces index from January, 1961, based on 1949 prices equalling 100. (CP Newsmap)

Macmillan's Condition Is Satisfactory

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Macmillan's doctors reported his condition was satisfactory today, 36 hours after his operation for removal of the prostate gland.

A lunchtime bulletin issued by the King Edward VII Hospital stated:

sory arbitration.

Judge Lippe's original proposals were for a 15-cent hourly increase in each year of a three-year contract, plus changes in overtime and vacation pay rules. He estimated they would cost the companies 20 cents an hour through the life of the contract.

OFFER ON CONTRACT

One thing the union did not like was the length of the contract.

They want to sign for not more than two years, which in effect would cover only next season, plus this year's shipping has only about a month to run.

The ILA contract with the federation expired last Jan. 1.

The longshoremen, who have been making $2.80 an hour, originally asked for an hourly increase of 35 cents over two years, plus 15 cents more in fringe benefits.

ILA negotiators and shippers agreed last March on a 15-cent increase over two years plus four cents in fringe benefits, but the union membership rejected this.

Last month, both sides rejected a conciliation board recommendation of a package increase of 32 cents over two years, of which three cents would have been in fringe benefits.

Judge Lippe's original proposal was rejected by the longshoremen Wednesday.

CARRIES EXPERTS

While talks continued Thursday, the German freighter Leopard sailed up the St. Lawrence Seaway from Montreal carrying the bulk of exhibits for the French trade exhibition opening in Montreal today.

The ship had been unable to discharge her cargo because of the strike and was reported bound for Toronto.

In Halifax, J. M. Campbell, president of the Halifax Longshoremen's Association, said members of his local will continue working as usual.

"Any decision that might be made by Halifax longshoremen regarding the Montreal strike would be discussed with the association's monthly meeting that day night," he said.

to $1 per capita or about $18,000,000 in the next four years to finance permanent centennial activities such as public buildings, monuments and parks.

Mr. Lamontagne told a press confer ce that the government hopes its financial aid will not be channeled entirely into construction projects. Federal aid would also apply to specially-commissioned works of art, historical and research projects.

Among persons named to the Centennial Conference are Mayor Horace Boivin of Granby, Que.; Mayor Syd Buckwold of Saskatoon, defeated liberal candidate in the April federal election; Gordon Cameron, commissioner of the Yukon Territory; A.W. Mercier, vice - president and general manager of Quebec Le Soleil and L'Evenement-Journal and president of The Canadian Press; Don Jamieson, president of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters and vice-president of CFCM-TV St. John's, Nfld; David Kirk, secretary of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, and D. M. Thompson, secretary of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Conference members serve without pay except for expense allowances.

have been caught in the disaster.

In Washington, President Kennedy ordered the defence department to provide "any assistance required and desired" by the Italian government.

The Italian magistracy in Rome and the government of Premier Giovanni Leone opened separate investigations to determine if any negligence had been involved.

Interior Undersecretary Giraudo told reporters that recent heavy rains had caused "some preoccupation" about conditions of the side of Mt. Toc, the 6,226-foot peak on the south flank of the reservoir from which the mass of earth and stones crashed into the water.

SIGNS OF LANDSLIDE

Survivors said there had been signs of a landslide for the last 10 days. They talked of having seen earth advancing slowly down Mt. Toc and of rocks crumbling into the reservoir.

But the government agency in charge of the reservoir hotly denied that its engineers could have averted the disaster.

A communique said:

"The enormous mass of landslide earth—which cannot yet be estimated in volume but is certainly of the order of tens of millions of cubic metres—testifies that the disaster enters among natural events of a catastrophic nature that are absolutely unpredictable."

DISCUSS BOMBERS

CANBERRA (Reuters)—Australian Defence Minister Athol Townley will visit Washington within the next few days to discuss the replacement of the Australian Air Force's Canberra bombers, the defence department announced Friday. He will also discuss "matters of mutual interest" with U.S. Defence Secretary Robert MacNamara.

Greek Liner Halifax-Bound, 'Empress' Stays

QUEBEC (CP) — The Greek liner Arkadia, prevented by striking longshoremen from leading her 213 passengers here, sailed for Halifax today. Normal sailing time of 40 hours would put her in Halifax at about 2 p.m. Sunday.

Meanwhile, the 27,500-ton Empress of Canada remained at anchor with 409 passengers off the nearby island of Orleans, where she tied up again after an abortive attempt to head upstream to Montreal Thursday night.

Several hours later Paul Bousquet, port director, announced that an injunction on behalf of the National Harbors Board would be sought to ben pickets from entering waterfront properties in the port. A similar injunction was obtained in Montreal Thursday, applying to that port.

A Canadian Pacific spokesman said even if the injunction is obtained it was still possible the Empress of Canada would proceed to Montreal. He said that by sailing to her original destination the heavy movement of passengers by train from Quebec would be avoided.

The Empress, flagship of the Canadian Pacific Steamships, fleet, took on fuel early today. CP officials said today is the day of decision for the giant liner, which could not remain tied up because of its commitments.

She has been anchored off the island since Tuesday.

The liner's attempt to reach Montreal Thursday night was foiled when longshoremen prevented a pilot from boarding, to guide the vessel upstream.

dian airports, involving both civilian and military planes. There have been no fatal accidents in Canada although there have been several in the United States.

NRC estimates that the 400 collisions caused damage of more than $1,000,000. In one incident a jet engine was so badly damaged it had to be scrapped.

Mr. Beebe will train six pure-bred falcons to fly over airports during periods when flocks of birds begin to gather and pose a hazard to aircraft.

Dr. D. A. Munro of the wildlife service said the falcons are being trained to attack gulls. He said the hope is that after a few gulls have been killed other birds of the species will be kept away from an airport through fear.

Mr. Beebe's job, he said, is to learn whether the presence of a falcon at an airport site will be sufficient to drive other birds away. If it isn't, the project will be abandoned because no useful purpose will be served by a falcon killing a few gulls, he said.

In 1957, Sir Winston Churchill and the Marquess of Salisbury were key figures in the selection of Harold Macmillan over Butler to succeed Sir Anthony Eden. Some sources say Lord Poole, party co-chairman, and Lord Home, may fulfil a similar role now.

BAYSIDE HOME AND SCHOOL

The Bayside Home and School Association held its first meeting of this school year in the Bayside school. A new executive was formed to carry on for this year. Mr. George Miller is president; Harold Elsay, vice-president; Betty Burley, secretary and Beulah May, treasurer; publicity, John Douglas.

In past years this association has sponsored the Bayside Boy Scout Troop. A groups committee was formed from the Home and School members to administer them. Chairman is Garnet (Buck) Jones, with members Chuck Hartwich, Larry Burton, Geraldine and George West and Gabe Myra. Mr. Jack Hazam outlined the responsibilities of the groups committee and the necessity of active support for the Scouts especially from the boys' parents. Chairman Buck will take care of Belmont, Quinte View will be covered by Evelyn Plowman and Bayside will have Estelle Barton.

Following some discussion it was decided that membership in the Ontario Federation of Home and Schools was no longer desirable as it is evident that the Bayside Home and School Club, as it is to be called will have increased benefits by continuing independent.

Mr. Bird, school principal, it to enquire into the possibility of obtaining a set of "The Books Of Knowledge" for the teachers and students.

Mrs. Campbell, one of Bayside's teachers has been hospitalized and will be in the Kingston General for another two weeks.

Future meetings will be held on the third Thursday of each month. Advance notice will be given for each meeting along with the highlights of the program for the evening. The next meeting will be on October 17th at 8 p.m. and it is hoped that Mrs. Wallace, well known for her exciting photographs of wildlife will be free to show some of her collection of slides.

High Awards Given to Local Guides

Peterborough was the focal point of Guiding in the Quinte Area, on Wednesday evening, as approximately 200 Girl Guides, commissioners and leaders gathered to see Mrs. R. D. Gunn, Provincial Commissioner, present area guides with their All-Round Cord certificates.

Of the 23 girls to qualify for this second highest award in Guiding two were from Belleville, Patricia Howe of the 1st Avondale Company and Kathleen Mandley, 1st Belleville Company from Queen Elizabeth School.

International Guiding was the theme of the talk given by the speakers; Belleville's Cathy Cook and Holly McMurray, both of whom had received their All-Round Cord certificates at the annual dinner held in Trenton, last month and taken the Ontario adventure trip to Great Britain.

Holly whimsically recalled humorous incidents while Cathy told of helping at a camp for disabled; in conclusion both stressed the value of the tour and encouraged the girls, who were being honored Wednesday evening, to work so that they too may travel Internationally.

Wearing a blue - grey uniform, Miss Marie Laura Avina, Guider in charge of "Our Cabana" at Cuernevaca, Mexico told the gathering that the Cabanal is a centre for World Guiding. Miss Avina arrived in Canada on Sunday for a short visit in Ontario. Guider Joan Watkins thanked the speaker, who had been introduced by Mrs. Gunn.

Division Commissioner, Mrs. Moxim of Peterborough was hostess for the evening, while Mrs. A. MacLean Haig, Quinte Area Commissioner assisted Mrs. R. D. Gunn with the certificate presentations.

Club Activities

ENERGETIC CLUB

Recently the Energetic Club of Holloway Street United Church were privileged to have as their guest speaker, Rev. Sidney E. Larman, a former minister of the church and presently minister to Trinity United Church, Napanee. Many former members of the club were on hand to welcome Rev. and Mrs. Larman.

After a devotional period led by Ruth Bailey and Merne Branscombe, a solo was sung by Phyllis Lucas.

Frank Wilson introduced the speaker, Mr. Larman, who based his talk on the 26 letters of the alphabet, comparing it to alpha and omeda, the beginning and the end. Much food for thought was given in this fine address and Mr. Larman received a standing ovation from those present. A former member, Wynne Parks, thanked the speaker on behalf of the club, past and present.

A short business period followed and many old friends were introduced once more to the club.

Over lunch much reminiscing was done and old friendships renewed.

Approximately 60 people joined hands for the Friendship Circle, ending a splendid evening.

LETTER:

I don't remember my mother making a meat pie — a double crust meat pie that was baked in a regular pie plate — but I once had a Scottish housekeeper who did. She also made it with raw ground beef. And she called it Mince Pie. I do remember my mother making a dish she called Scotch College (and you've published as Cole lops). The true Scot (with heather buds still in her wells) calls this dish simply "Mince". So I submit that the two-crust pie-in-a-plate is of Scottish origin — not English, nor exclusively farmer-rooted either. However, I don't mind the French getting the credit, if you insist on agreeing with Madame Gongeon — they're good cooks, too! . . . I wonder what the Scots call a pie made with mincemeat, Canadian style? . . . I feel I should explain my name. I'm third generation Canadian with Scotch and Irish grandparents, but married a Montreal Frenchman. Quelque fois at our house is a way of life! . . . Leslie M. deC. . . . A confirmed admirer, THERESE.

ANSWER:

Leslie, I'm so glad to have someone join and addle the confusion over mince pies. Do any strong-minded readers want to join this nuisiness and tell us what Scottish folk would call a Canadian minecmeat pie (with apples and raisins and spices and suet and maybe a little meat)?

Old-Style Laundering Best Thing for Sweaters

By PATRICIA BUSAK

TORONTO (CP) — Old-fashioned gentle hand laundering is the best way to keep sweaters looking soft and new.

This was learned when manufacturers, home economists and other experts gave instructional for the care of one of the most basic garments in every woman's wardrobe.

Among synthetic fibre sweaters, those of Orlon acrylic fibre — when labelled as Sayelle or Tycora — can be as safely laundered in an automatic washer and dryer as by hand, its manufacturers say.

But if drying these sweaters in a machine, remove them before they are completely dry and let them finish drying in a flat surface. One expert recommended putting towels in the dryer with the sweater.

"Bulky sweaters of Orlon Sayelle have been treated for automatic-blocking — they will come out of the wash water several sized larger than they were originally but will revert to their original shape while drying.

The manufacturers of Orlon Sayelle say that if you machine wash the fabric, machine dry it. If you hand wash it, dry it on a flat surface.

Ban-Lon sweaters, also of synthetic fibre, should be washed by hand in lukewarm water and mild soap with no rubbing or twisting. They should be rinsed until the water is clear, the excess moisture should be removed in a towel and the sweaters spread flat to dry.

SHOULD NOT IRON

Ironing and steaming is not recommended for synthetic fibre sweaters because excessive heat can harden or glaze the fabric or, in the case of nylon or Ban-Lon, melt it.

The ever-popular wool sweater should be washed by soaking in soap and lukewarm water for about five minutes.

Contrary to popular belief, it is not soap and water but rather excessive agitation which causes shrinkage in washing, the wool experts say. Hot water and alkaline soap also increase the likelihood of shrinkage.

Machine washable and dry-able wools have been developed by the wool industry but few of these are available in stores. The label will usually describe the sweater in a machine unless it is the garment's label says "machine washable".

Mohair sweaters of natural goats hair are popular this season and several retailers recommend they be dry-cleaned. Because they are so loosely knit, the weight of water could pull them out of shape.

If you must wash a mohair sweater, treat it as gently as wool—and dry on a flat surface.

Other sweater-care tips:

1. Turn all sweaters inside out before washing.

2. Button cardigans before washing.

3. Never twist, wring, crush or rub the sweater fabric against itself.

4. Do not dry a sweater near a radiator, in the sunlight or on a clothesline.

5. All sweaters should be folded and stored flat, preferably in separate airtight plastic bags. Never hang them up.

Great Need of Post Graduate Accommodation Stressed at Queen's Alumni Dinner Meet

The Belleville and District Branch of the Queen's Alumni met recently with over 100 strong for their semi-annual get-together. Their hostesses were the ladies of the Tabernacle United Church, who nobly rose to the occasion when 116 seats were filled instead of the estimated 90.

The Rev. M. G. McFarlane said grace and Mrs. H. Bateman, who incidentally had just received notice of having been elected to the directors of the university, gave her report.

While the tables were being cleared, Sis Robb led the community singing and to get into practice for his impending move to Montreal the last song was "Allouette."

Dr. Bruce Crook introduced the speaker of the evening, the new Dean of Medicine at Queen's University, Dr. E. Harper Botterell, who succeeded the head of the Toronto General Hospital. In his introductory remarks Dr. Crook said that Dr. Botterell took his place as Mean of Medicine, fortune smiled on Queen's. He said he intended that besides being a great surgeon, the dean was also a great teacher as many of his graduates were taking their places as rising neurosurgeons.

IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS

Dr. Botterell mentioned in his address that two important things were happening in the medical field and stated "We are not training enough people to fill the positions of physicians down to technicians." In his own hospital in Toronto, beds have been vacated because of lack of nurses. There are towns without a doctor. Doctors and nurses are not supported from all over the world. "Belleville in this respect is a most fortunate city" he said. For the past 25 years a scientific revolution has been going on. There are more scientific workers today than there ever did since the time of Pythagoras. Today the scope of every type of medical knowledge is increasing. Medical students must be trained to continue in the field of learning, or ten years after graduation they will be obsolete.

LACK ACCOMMODATION

To satisfy this great demand for the continuous training of nurses and doctors. University hospitals must be the centres for the basic sciences, unfortunately the universities are overwhelmed by "post war babies" and little time spare for post graduate work. The universities have good facilities, but lack good equipment and eager students; but lack accommodation. What is needed is recognition of the needs by the public — only if the public recognizes the need will more people in health services can anything be done. The government cannot go in advance of public opinion.

Dr. Botterell in turn introduced the lectures, the new head of surgery, formerly senior house surgeon at the Victoria Memorial Hospital who described him as a doctors' doctor, which is the highest praise one can give. Dr. Corrigan who did not expect to speak remarked that in educating doctors the emphasis should not go in for planned obsolescence but expected the graduates to keep up with modern thought. There is a noticeable change from the rugged individualism of yesterday to the team spirit of today.

The dean also introduced Dr. Garfield Kelly who is past director of continuing education. Dr. Kelly said "We are all caught up in the scientific explosion, for example no of rosst beef.

ST. JOSEPH'S C.W.L.

The October meeting of the St. Joseph's C.W.L. was opened by the president, Mrs. Murphy.

The 40 Hours Devotion will be held in St. Joseph's parish October 13 to 15. The reading and discussion on Pope John's encyclical Pacem in Terris is continuing by the spiritual convener, Mrs. Dunniak.

Convener of Citizens and Civic Action, Mrs. Hamilton, enlightened the ladies on the activities and the work carried on by the civic action stating it is made up of the three C.W.L. presidents, three citizenship conveners and a spiritual director. Its purpose is to authorize all matters mutual in civic or religious interests that concern the three parish councils of Belleville and therefore call for prompt local action.

Previously money was raised by unpaid parish collections and special assessments by C.W.L. members. Welfare work, counselling, family and financial assistance to New Canadians, a bursary to be given to a student attending St. Michael Nicholson College to further their education, are but some of the activities of the Civic Action.

Mrs. Murphy spoke on the success of the regional meeting held in Marmora.

Convener of the bazaar to be held November 6, Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Groves asked the ladies to continue their efforts to help make the bazaar a huge success. The candy and fish pond will be held at St. Joseph's school the day before the bazaar.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: My husband and I were guests last weekend at the home of friends who live at the shore. Saturday evening they took us to a sea-food restaurant. Our host insisted on picking up the check. I think, since they entertained us so nicely in addition to the dinner, that my husband should have paid the bill, as a means of repaying them for their hospitality. Would you advise me about what is considered correct in this situation between hosts and house guests? — Mrs. C. K., Trenton, N. J.

Answer: Entertainment is the responsibility of the hosts, and, if it includes dining out at a restaurant, the host correctly takes care of the check. House guests properly reciprocate at a later date when dining out is the decision of their invitation.

Question: When coffee is served in demitasse cups after dinner, must it be taken black? I like coffee after a meal, but I prefer it with cream and sugar and just can't stand the taste of it plain. If there is no cream in the house, I politely refuse, but the hostess if some is available, or is this considered impolite when it might cause her extra trouble? — Mrs. D. V., Princeton, N. J.

Answer: Guests should be offered cream and sugar, even if coffee is served in demitasse cups, and most hostesses do make these available on the coffee tray. However, if the cream is not passed and it's impossible to down the brew without it, a whispered request may be made to the hostess when she's finished pouring.

PREFERS SLACKS

Question: When we have a party in our house, I prefer wearing slacks, which I find are more comfortable than a fussy skirt or dress. We usually entertain quite informally, in my husband still thinks that slacks are out of place, particularly on the hostess. I've seen him pictures in magazines or very fashionable women wearing slacks at soirees, but he's still not convinced that this is acceptable attire. Would you put in a good word for slacks as far as good manners are concerned?

Mrs. F. C. D., New Haven, Conn.

Answer: Slacks may be worn for informal entertaining at home, providing they look partyish and not like work clothes. Jeans and the like definitely would be out of place. Well-tailored designs in dressy fabrics — such as satin, velvet or brocade — might be considered acceptable for hostess wear, as long as they're accessorized correctly and, of course, the hostess cuts a trim enough figure in pants.

Role of Women In World Affairs Discussed by Club

The dinner meeting of Soroptimist International was held recently at the President Muriel Yorke presiding.

This month the Soroptimist Canadian Foundation was chartered and this means that Canadian donations to the Endowment Fund are channelled into the Canadian Soroptimist Foundation, a suitable "birthday gift" to Canadian Soroptimists in this founding month of the year. The purpose of the Foundation is to carry projects world-wide for charitable, educational, scientific and cultural benefits — all for the public welfare. During this year major emphasis will be placed on services to youth.

An area meeting for the Belleville, Cobourg Port Hope, Oshawa and Peterborough Clubs will be held in Peterborough on Saturday, November 2nd. Each Club will take part in panel discussions during the day.

As members of the largest International Service Club for women in the world, Soroptimist must emphasize the citizenship role and duty of role of women towards world affairs, they must find new and better ways of knowing women in other countries, must engage in more education and health projects on an international scale, and find ways of assisting women to prepare and assume their full citizenship role in world affairs.

Co-operatives, Credit Unions And Caisses Populaires Said Favored in Taxation Field

OTTAWA (CP)—The Equitable Income Tax Foundation said today that in the entire field of Canadian taxation there is nothing to equal the discrimination in favor of co-operatives, credit unions and caisses populaires.

In a brief brief to the royal commission on taxation, the non-profit foundation said there is no excuse for these types of organizations not contributing their fair share to the cost of government. Many of the historic reasons for granting them tax exemptions were no longer valid.

The foundation, with headquarters in Toronto, was formed in 1952 by corporations and individuals to maintain a continuing study of the entire Canadian tax field.

The brief said the present burden of corporation tax is onerous "and it becomes doubly so where competitors classified as co - operatives escape paying their equal share."

Under the Income Tax Act, co-operatives can deduct patronage dividends from taxable income and can thus reduce tax able income down to three per cent of employed capital. New co-ops are also given complete exemption for the first three years of operation.

Credit unions are completely exempt from taxation.

The original concept of a co-operative consisting of a small group of persons with common interests banding together to pool their resources no longer exists, said the brief.

"The modern co - operative tends increasingly to become a powerful organization, with large amounts of capital engaged in a multiplicity of activities, many of which are far distant from the farm level."

The brief said many co-ops are carrying on their operations in a manner indistinguishable from their fully-taxed competitors.

So far as credit unions and caisses populaires are concerned, said the brief, there is no longer any reason for granting them total tax exemption. They also had grown out of their original concept of a small group of persons banding together to save mutually and encourage thrift.

". . . Credit unions of this modern day have become a closely integrated and highly organized network of competitive financial institutions which span the nation from Newfoundland to British Columbia." They were operating in direct competition to investor-owned banking and other financial institutions.

Some Bishops, Priests Shocked By Decision

LONDON (AP) — The church of England agreed Wednesday that women should be allowed to conduct some of its services and preach sermons.

The decision shocked some bishops and die-hard bachelor priests but it went through the convocation of Canterbury after two days of sometimes heated debate.

The upper house—composed of only diocesan bishops — approved the measure by 19 votes to six. The lower house—all other ranks of clergy—passed it by the narrower margin of 72 to 60.

Now canon law must be revised so the women can take up their duties.

The whole body of Anglican canon law is undergoing an overhaul to bring it up to day with modern times—a job which should be completed within four to five years. Since the Church of England is the national established church, Parliament must then give its approval.

The decision taken Wednesday means that women can be licensed by a bishop to be lay readers. That means they can preach, assist the parish priest in his duties and conduct the minor services of morning and evening prayer. They cannot celebrate the eucharist, conduct baptisms, weddings or funeral services.

Says Detroit Mafia Runs $150 Million a Year Racket

WASHINGTON (CP) — Police Commissioner George Edwards of Detroit charged today that a 86-man Mafia organization controls a $200,000,000-a-year legal and illegal business operation in the Detroit area. Included in this group were three men from Windsor, Ont.

Appearing before the Senate investigations subcommittee, Edwards said this Mafia group, ruling over the Detroit underworld through the threat of murder, grosses about $150,000,000 a year through a variety of rackets including narcotics and gambling. It grosses an additional $50,000,000 through infiltration of legitimate businesses.

Edwards named Joseph Zerilli as head of a five-man council known as "the dozen" or "the big men" ruling over the entire group. He included as lieutenants Onofrio (Nono) Minaudo, Joe (Cock - Eyed - Joe) Calabrolte and Nicolas (Nick) Cicchinel, all of Windsor.

Edwards said the entire body of this Mafia, which appeared to be similar to the Cosa Nostra named by mobster informant Joseph Valachi, is linked mainly through a Sicilian family relationship that virtually tied up the ruling body through blood or marriage relationships.

Edwards said that the Canadian group had been involved in such enterprises as prostitution, bootlegging, coin-machine racketeering, gambling, labor racketeering, burglary, robbery and larceny as well as extortion, mayhem and murders.

48 Cubans Said Killed By Hurricane

HAVANA (AP)—Deaths of 48 Cubans from hurricane Flora were announced Wednesday night as the government waited for flood waters to recede to learn the fate of thousands of others isolated in the countryside by flood waters.

First reports indicated the death toll would increase and painted a grim picture of destruction in eastern provinces of Oriente and Camaguey.

(Messages broadcast over the Cuban rescue radio network and monitored in Miami indicated the hurricane left 200 dead. One radio message, from the commander of the Santiago military headquarters to Premier Fidel Castro, expressed fear for the lives of 4,000 persons).

Mind, Spirit Pollution

By ROY L. SMITH

The American people are doing rather well in protecting themselves against impure drugs, contaminated foods, and (with some success) air-pollution. There is much world-wide discussion on the subject of fall-out resulting from nuclear testing.

But we are not doing so well in our efforts, or lack of effort, in the matter of mind and spirit pollution. And of the two, there are those of us who think it is a more serious matter when the souls of men are polluted, than when their bodies are contaminated.

A MORAL SWAMP

The Corinthian Christians to whom Paul was writing suffered under an unusually serious situation. The city of Corinth, in which they lived and whose moral air they breathed, was the most vicious city in all the Mediterranean area. It was a common saying, everywhere in the Roman world — when one wanted to speak in condemnation — "He lives like a Corinthian."

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for October 13: "Christian Purity," Matthew 6 : 25 - 33; 1 Corinthians 5 through 7.

There is no vice known to mankind which was not practiced openly and unashamed in Corinth. On the towering Acrocorinth, which overshadowed the city, the Temple of Aphrodite maintained barracks which housed a thousand prostitutes, whose earnings provided the revenues which supported the lavish rites. On the great festival days special sections of reserved seats were held for these women, and when they appeared at the games they were accorded the highest honors.

CORINTHIAN CHRISTIANS

No one knew better than did the Apostle Paul the evil origin from which many of the Corinthians had come. Neither did anyone know, better than he did, how difficult it is for a man to separate himself from his past.

Quite willing to look charitably on their sordid and shameful parts, Paul was quite unwilling to compromise with the Christians of Corinth on the subject of their present. He could sympathize with a man who had come up out of lechery, but he could not tolerate one who insisted on bringing his lechery over into the Church with him.

It is of great significance that the strictures which Paul levels at sexual sinning, in his various New Testament writings, were all written from Corinth.

U. S. AN OFFENDER

There was a time when Paris and Shanghai were esteemed to be the fountain sources from which the filthy, the pornographic, and the debauching materials came. Lascivious photographs, revolting printed materials, and degrading sex practices were commonly ascribed to those two origins.

But that time has passed. The centre of the loathsome trade has shifted to the United States, and no less than 54 nations have lodged complaints with the State Department within recent years since the close of World War II, protesting the traffic in pornography that is streaming out from American presses and photographic studios.

"American vice lords are poisoning the minds of the youth of the world" is the way one protestor described the situation.

Meanwhile the U. S. Post Office Department has been harassed, in the name of "freedom of the press," in every effort it has made to control the traffic.

SIN IMMORALITY

The demand made upon the Christian Church today is unequivocal. Shun immorality. That is, avoid every resemblance to immorality.

Generally speaking, the American people are very sensitive to anything that smacks of communism. A "fellow traveller" is held in contempt and avoided. If the Christian Church, and Christians, were as sensitive on the subject of morals — even upon the subject of sex —, fourfifths of modern fiction would lose its market, there would be a right-about-face in the entertainment world, and the pornographic traffic would grind to a halt.

Unfortunately many otherwise "good people" lend themselves to the perpetuation of amoral, filth, moral poison, and sex saturation.

There seems to be a grave fear on the part of multitudes that, in endeavoring to be pure, they may appear to be prudes. As if a complete divorcement from shabbiness was to be apologised for.

Must Bride Be Given Away?

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS —

1. It's just as legal without this; but perhaps not as provoking a marriage, if your parents don't approve!

2. Yes. Even without a job.

3. An engagement ring is a promise. Your parents' ability to have you return it, and make it stick, depends on the relationship to them and just how sure you are yourself. There's nothing legal involved. But remember — older people can often size individuals up better than teen-agers in love!

* * *

DEAR DORIS — Sixteen years ago I lost my sister. Her husband has done a wonderful job of raising their two daughters.

This summer he remarried to a widow who was really good to my sister and the girls. We were invited to the wedding and gave nice (not elaborate) gifts.

When my brother-in-law wrote us about his approaching marriage he said, "No more gifts," "no more Christmases at your house." They called to see us when they were en route from their honeymoon and we saw them since at his daughter's. Neither time did they ask us to "come and see them."

I suggested to my mother that we might have them for dinner when the weather was cooler. Who should entertain first, or at least who should mention it? I want to go half way, but we do not want to push in. — WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING — Your brother-in-law fears what sometimes happens — ex-in-laws who throw up the first wife's virtues to the second wife. Give her time to settle in; and him to be less on the defensive.

Sooner or later he'll realize that as the father of your nieces and your mother's grandchildren, he wants to keep you for friends. It would be tactful to let the invitation come from them.

Sunday School Lesson

Mind, Spirit Pollution

By ROY L. SMITH

The American people are doing rather well in protecting themselves against impure drugs, contaminated foods, and (with some success) air-pollution. There is much world-wide discussion on the subject of fallout resulting from nuclear testing.

But we are not doing so well in our etheric, or lack of ether, in the matter of mind and spirit pollution. And of the two, there are those of us who think it is a more serious matter when the souls of men are polluted, than when their bodies are contaminated.

A MORAL SWAMP

The Corinthian Christians to whom Paul was writing suffered under an unusually serious situation. The city of Corinth, in which they lived and whose moral air they breathed, was the most vicious city in all the Mediterranean area. It was a common saying, everywhere in the Roman world — when one wanted to speak in condemnation — "He lives like a Corinthian."

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for October 13: "Christian Purity," Matthew 5 : 25 - 32; 1 Corinthians 5 through 7.

There is no vice known to mankind which was not practiced openly and unashamed in Corinth. On the towering Acrocorinth, which overshadowed the city, the Temple of Aphrodite maintained barracks which housed a thousand prostitutes, whose earnings provided the revenues which supported the lavish rites. On the great festival days special sections of reserved seats were held for these persons, and when they appeared at the games they were accorded the highest honors.

CORINTHIAN CHRISTIANS

No one knew better than did the Apostle Paul the evil origin from which many of the Corinthians had come. Neither did anyone know, better than he did, how difficult it is for a man to separate himself from his past.

Quite willing to look charitably on their sordid and shameful pasts, Paul was quite unwilling to compromise with the Christians of Corinth on the subject of their present. He could sympathize with a man who had come up out of lechery, but he could not tolerate one who insisted on bringing his lechery over into the Church with him.

It is of great significance that the strictures which Paul levels at sexual sinning, in his various New Testament writings, were all written from Corinth.

U. S. AN OFFENDER

There was a time when Paris and Shanghai were esteemed to be the fountain sources from which the filthy, the pornographic, and the debauching materials came. Lascivious photographs, revolting printed materials, and degrading sex practices were commonly ascribed to those two origins.

But that time has passed. The centre of the loathsome trade has shifted to the United States, and no less than 54 nations have lodged complaints with the State Department within recent years, since the close of World War II, protesting the traffic in pornography that is streaming out from American presses and photographic studios.

"American vice lords are poisoning the minds of the youth of the world," is the way one protestor described the situation.

Meanwhile the U. S. Post Office Department has been harassed, in the name of "freedom of the press," in every effort it has made to control the traffic.

SHUN IMMORALITY

The demand made upon the Christian Church today is unequivocal. Shun immorality. That is, shield every resemblance to immorality.

Generally speaking, the American people are very sensitive to anything that smacks of communism. A "fellow traveller" is held in contempt and avoided. If the Christian Church, and Christians, were as sensitive on the subject of morals — even upon the subject of sex —, fourfifths of modern fiction would lose its market, there would be a right-about-face in the entertainment world, and the pornographic traffic would grind to a halt.

Unfortunately many otherwise "good people" lend themselves to the perpetuation of amet, filth, moral poison, and sex saturation.

There seems to be a grave fear on the part of multitudes that, in endeavoring to be pure, they may appear to be prudes. As if a complete divorcement from shabbiness was to be apologized for.

There seems to be a fear that, in order to be clean, we must be dull. As if the Christian life was a drab and colorless thing.

There seems to be a fear that, in order to be pure, we must be unsympathetic with the sinner. As if the Christian life was a cold and loveless thing.

There seems to be a fear that, in order to be moral, we must be unforgiving. As if the Christian life was a hard and unyielding thing.

There seems to be a fear that, in order to be clean, we must be unclean. As if the Christian life was a filthy thing.

Paul's letters to the Corinthians are filled with the most practical advice on how to live the Christian life in the midst of a pagan environment. Paul knew that the Christian life is a positive thing, and that the best way to overcome evil is to fill the mind with good.

Must Bride Be Given Away?

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS —

1. If you have a church wedding, does someone in your family have to give you away?

2. Can a girl quit school after 16 if she has a job?

3. Can your parents make you return an engagement ring if you are only 19? — IN LOVE.

DEAR IN LOVE —

1. It's just as legal without this; but perhaps not as promising a marriage, if your parents don't approve!

2. Yes. Even without a job.

3. An engagement ring is a promise. Your parents' ability to have you return it, and make it stick, depends on the relationship to them and just how sure you are yourself. There's nothing legal involved. But remember, other people can often size individuals up better than teen-agers in love!

• • •

DEAR DORIS — Sixteen years ago I lost my sister. Her husband has done a wonderful job of raising their two daughters.

This summer he remarried to a widow who was really good to my sister and the girls. We were invited to the wedding and gave nice (not elaborate) gifts.

When my brother-in-law wrote us about his approaching marriage he said, "No more gifts," "no more Christmases at your house." They called to see us when they were en route from their honeymoon and we saw them alone at his daughter's. Neither time did they ask us to "come and see them."

I suggested to my mother that we might have them for dinner when the weather was cooler. She should entertain first, or at least who should mention it? I want to go half way, but we do not want to push in. — WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING — Your brother-in-law fears what sometimes happens — ex-in-laws who throw up the first wife's virtues to the second wife. Give her time to settle in; and him to be less on the defensive.

Sooner or later he'll realize that as the father of your nieces and your mother's grandchildren, he wants to keep you for friends. It would be tactful to let the invitation come from them.

U. S. Accused of Leaking Confidential Information In Latest Wheat Tiff

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States has released confidential Canadian wheat sales information but no protest has been made yet, Trade Minister Sharp told the Commons Thursday in another chapter of the Canada-U.S. wheat dispute.

"I do not think at this particular time that any such protest would be helpful," Mr. Sharp said. "However . . . we are not very happy about the disclosure of confidential information provided to the U.S. government, particularly about sales that the Canadian wheat board has made to Japan."

He was answering another series of questions on the details of the dispute in which the U.S. claims Canada is working to hold down prices and guarantee sales when brisk world demand is exerting upward pressure.

The U.S. agriculture department's protest earlier this week was triggered by the Canadian wheat board's sale at a fixed price of some 30,000,000 bushels of wheat for delivery over eight months to Japan.

SELL TO BRITAIN

It was learned reliably Thursday that a cash sale of 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 bushels of wheat has been made for delivery over six months to Britain at the price prevailing currently and to apply over the five delivery period. Both countries are good and regular Canadian customers.

The U.S. calls this a pegging action but Mr. Sharp has said repeatedly that is not new wheat board practice.

Meanwhile, farm spokesmen on the Prairies voiced support for the wheat board actions and Chief Commissioner W. C. Mc-Namara of the board said at Winnipeg Thursday that the crown agency will continue to operate in the manner best suited to the interests of Canadian wheat growers.

Wheat sales are a competitive matter, he said.

PRICES CONFIDENTIAL

Disclosure of Canadian sales and their details are regarded as a breach of confidence because the Canadian wheat board, inside Parliament and out, has declined under the former Conservative and the present Liberal government to disclose what prices it charges customers, or what interest rates it accepts or credit deals.

There was no public mention made here of a further U.S. leak of Canadian information by President Kennedy himself.

He revealed Wednesday, in announcing the long-expected sale by the U.S. to Soviet Russia of some $250,000,000 of wheat, that Canada's interest rate on its record Russian sale was close to five per cent.

The Canadian wheat board never has revealed, despite pressure inside Parliament and outside, its interest rates on credit sales to Red China or other countries. Nor has it given the per-bushel prices other than to say they are those prevailing in its daily-posted schedule at the time of agreement.

Mr. Kennedy's statement said the Russians prefer to spend cash than pay the Canadian interest and that Moscow has about 80 per cent of the 227,500,000 bushels for cash despite the credit allocation authorized by the Canadian government of $200,000,000.

Dr. L. Pauling 2-Time Winner Of Peace Prize

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Dr. Linus Pauling, long a foe of nuclear tests leading to fallout, has won the 1962 Nobel Peace Prize.

The crusading American, a centre of controversy in his own country, has thus become a two - time winner of Nobel awards.

The brilliant research scientist from the California Institute of Technology was awarded the Nobel Prize for chemistry in 1954. He is the second individual to win two Nobel prizes, counting that honor with Mme. Curie of radium research fame.

The Norwegian Nobel committee announced Thursday that Pauling will be given the prize for 1962. An award for that year never was announced. The 1963 peace prize will be divided between the International Red Cross Committee and the League of Red Cross Societies.

Pauling, 62, appeared astounded at the award. He got the news at his ranch near San Simeon, on the California coast.

He said later that he regards the award as "recognition of the work I and other scientists have been doing in educating the world to the need for a treaty to end nuclear testing."

TO ANNOUNCE REASON

The reason for the peace award will be announced Dec. 10 when Pauling receives the $57,218 bronze (about $77,177) prize in a ceremony in Oslo.

But a friend, Dr. Otto Matiasen, professor of chemistry at Oslo University, mentioned Pauling's campaign against testing.

"Pauling's greatest effort was that he calculated the harmful effects of the fallout," Matiasen said. "He also got other scientists interested and has created an opinion against nuclear tests among scientists all over the world.

"He also collected signatures on a petition from scientists on both sides of the Iron Curtain and asked the United Nations to make the big powers stop the tests."

The signature campaign got Pauling into hot water with the U.S. Senate internal security subcommittee in 1960. At the risk of contempt of the U.S. Congress, he refused to name scientists who helped him get the signatures. The subcommittee branded him as "a consistent pro-Soviet bias."

The professor has denied under oath that he is a Communist.

Canadian-U. S. Relations Have Few Bright Spots

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada-American relations in 1963 reached the stage Thursday where two Canadian cabinet ministers accused American officials of leaking confidential information.

Labor Minister MacEachen said U.S. Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz had disclosed details of private discussions concerning a possible private trusteeship over Great Lakes unions without asking the permission of the other parties concerned.

And Trade Minister Sharp said the U.S. had released confidential Canadian wheat sales information.

On top of that, there was the threat of the top U.S. unionist to support the Seafarers' International Union of Canada whose controversial conduct has forced government legislation to impose public trusteeship on it and four other marine unions.

BAD START

The year started badly. In January, the U.S. government accused the former Progressive Conservative administration of not pulling its weight in North American air defence.

This played a prominent part in the fall of John Diefenbaker's Conservative government and the subsequent political campaign leading to the April 8 election of a Liberal government under Lester B. Pearson.

The Liberals were accused during the campaign of being pro-American. But:

1. Finance Minister Gordon's June 13 budget proposed a take-over tax on sales of Canadian companies to U.S. interests but it was quickly withdrawn. Another tax measure, not withdrawn, discriminates against American - controlled subsidiaries which don't offer at least minimum ownership opportunity to Canadian investors.

TAX STOCK ISSUES

2. President Kennedy proposed a tax of up to 15 per cent on Canadian stock issues floated in the U.S. after some of the Canadian representations' be absolved any new issues.

3. The Canada-Labor war caudron boiled over after prolonged negotiations failed to avoid the basic intent of the Canadian government to protect with legislation imposing trusteeship on the five marine transportation unions.

4. The U.S. objected to Canadian plans to have more car parts made in Canada instead of imported from the U.S.

5. The U.S. Congress killed a U.S. Army order for the Canadian Canadair transport plane and in Ottawa officials said Lockheed of California's chances of selling more planes to Canada had considerably declined.

6. On Oct. 9 Prime Minister Pearson announced that Canada has agreed to permit the U.S. to store defensive nuclear warheads at Harmon Field, Nfld., and Goose Bay, Labrador. Opposition MPs said this is forging closer ties to Canada's military dependence on the U.S.

7. Mr. Sharp fired back at the U.S.—which claimed Canadian wheat sales are designed to hold down world prices and unfairly penetrate markets—by saying information given to Washington is a "normal and course of mutual consultation that has been leaked. U.S. sources indicated a wheat price war may result.

Parliamentary Notebook

OTTAWA (CP) — Vocal support can be found among many MPs for cash and even holiday ministers for doing away with the special $4,000-a-year allowance for leaders of smaller parties.

If talk among Liberal and Progressive Conservative MPs is any guide, the plan could be headed off at the pass when Parliament resumes session of Parliament.

The allowance, paid to leaders of parties with 12 or more MPs in addition to their regular $18,000 as MPs, was part of the pay increases bill passed by Parliament in August.

At the time, the only comment about it in the House was made by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker who argued that it was contrary to the concept of parliamentary government and democracy.

The step "may well be introducing a multiplication and proliferation of parties in the years ahead," he said.

HOW PROVED?

When the Social Credit party later split into two wings—one led by Real Caouette and another of 11 under Robert Thompson — Mr. Diefenbaker was asked if the split was proved.

"If such a payment were not available, I doubt very much whether there would have been the division which has taken place," he told the Commons after the Social Credit split.

His remark stung Prime Minister Pearson who later mentioned the leaders' allowance previously in debate. He said Mr. Diefenbaker was a little late in being so wise when Mr. Diefenbaker had been supported by only five Conservative MPs in providing for the increase bill and hadn't made use of earlier opportunities to propose amendments.

If it hadn't been for that exchange between the two leaders Oct. 30, the $4,000 allowance might have been on the way out in this session. It would appear to be necessary for the government to propose its withdrawal now without giving Mr. Diefenbaker a chance to say which to belabor the government and Mr. Pearson.

OTTAWA PROBLEM

The reason opinion seems to have swung behind the idea of dropping the leaders' allowances is that it created an entirely new problem for Parliament.

The act providing for the allowance referred for the first time in Canadian parliamentary history to three party parties in the Commons. In theory, MPs are elected as individuals. Even the ballot which the voter marks makes no mention of his being a member of one or another party.

This mention of party caused no problem until Real Caouette's followers demanded recognition as a party and payment of the $4,000 to their leader.

EXPLAIN DEATHS

YORK, England (Reuters)—Eight British racehorses found poisoned at trainer Jim Moubalt's stables near here earlier this week died by eating feed "accidentally contaminated" by rat poison, police said Thursday.

Reports Differ On Autobahn Traffic Block

BERLIN (AP) — A U.S. spokesman announced today that the Russians had blocked all traffic on the Berlin Autobahn to West Germany but noted cities later corrected the statement and said "some civilian traffic is moving in both directions."

The conflicting official American statements came as confusion heightened over the most serious East-West incident in four years on the lifeline Autobahn.

First, the spokesman said the Russians "totally blocked all Autobahn traffic as of 11:45 a.m. (6:45 a.m. EDT) with armored personnel carriers."

He announced the Soviets advised this would continue until an East-West controversy over the handling of U.S. military traffic on the Autobahn was resolved.

In a second statement, about 20 minutes later, the spokesman said that "contrary to previous information, Soviet personnel carriers are not moved down the eastbound lane (of the Autobahn). They were placed into the westbound lane. Some civilian traffic is moving in both directions using the westbound lane."

THREE DELAYED

Since Thursday morning, the Russians have delayed three convoys, one of them twice, but cleared two other groups for the trip between West Berlin and West Germany without a holdup.

An 18-vehicle American convoy with 61 men aboard, delayed by the Russians for 16 hours Thursday, left Berlin across the East Germany border, was stopped again by the Russians this morning as it tried to enter West Berlin at the Babelsberg checkpoint.

The Russians made the same demand they had made at the East German border Thursday —that the 61 soldiers dismount to be counted. The convoy commander refused, upholding the U.S. contention that military convoys are not subject to interference if their papers are in order.

Reliable informants said about 100 Soviet troops were deployed around the checkpoint at Babelsberg Russian officers stopped the convoy. The Russians were reported armed with sub-machineguns and war ammunition pouches and some wore steel helmets.

Possibility of Control Posts, Inspection Teams In Canada Is Mentioned

OTTAWA (CP) — The possibility of control posts and inspection teams being established in Canada as part of an East-West plan to prevent surprise attack is being mentioned in diplomatic quarters here.

Such posts and teams would include observers from Communist countries.

Earlier this month, External Affairs Minister Martin listed three areas in the disarmament field where strenuous attempts should be made at agreement to follow up the nuclear test ban treaty. They were:

1. An agreement by the Unite States and Russia to outlaw nuclear weapons from outer space. There has already been agreement in principle on this point.

2. Establishment of control posts and inspection teams on both sides of the Iron Curtain to eliminate the possibility of surprise attack by either side.

3. Steps aimed at non-dissemination of nuclear arms.

Information on Canada is mainly interested in establishing inspection teams in West European countries and Western arm inspection in Communist East Germany.

However, the Western powers would never agree to inspection being limited to East Germany or to the Iron Curtain countries.

This meant that the inspection area would be considerably larger and would likely take in the NATO countries on the Western side and the Warsaw pact nations on the Communist side. The Warsaw pact comprises Russia and its Communist satellites in Eastern Europe.

Informants said there haven't yet been any negotiations which have developed to the point where it can be said exactly where control posts might be established.

But the eventual presence of inspection teams in Canada could not be ruled out even though there were no offensive weapons in this country.

Russia would be interested in having inspection teams at Canadian radar sites as a means of keeping watch on reserve the flights of American bombers and missile launchings in the U.S.

AGAINST CO-OPERATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives voted Thursday to ban U.S. co-operation with any Communist country in outer space at the moment. It wrote the ban into the 1964 U.S. space agency's appropriation bill by a standing vote of 125 to 110 which could be reversed later on a roll-call.

No Wheat Coming Into Montreal Port

MONTREAL (CP) — How seriously have wheat shipments been affected by the continuing strike of longshoremen in Montreal, Trois-Rivieres and Quebec?

"Well, in this way," a shipping executive said Thursday, "there just isn't any of it moving."

However, a survey shows some wheat is moving through Sorel, a St. Lawrence River port 40 miles northeast of Montreal, and Baie Comeau on the St. Lawrence River 220 miles northeast of Quebec City.

The shipping executive's statement reflects the mood of those concerned with what the average effects the strike may have on wheat movements.

No one wants to talk about it. The strike, if prolonged, could place unexpected pressure on the job of delivering by July 31, 1964, the 228,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat sold to Russia last month.

But the job has only just begun.

GRAIN ARRIVING

"There isn't a grain of wheat coming into Montreal at the moment in any way, shape or form," an official at the Montreal grain elevators said.

The only ship to leave Montreal with grain was an Upper Lakes vessel, the J. E. F Mercoeur, which sailed Wednesday. Port employees handled her while longshoremen watched.

The major wheat shipping ports on the St. Lawrence River are Montreal, Sorel, Trois-Rivieres, Quebec and Baie Comeau — and are handling grain on a normal basis.

WON'T QUIT

BERLIN (Reuters) — West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, who retires Oct. 15, said Thursday he would not completely abandon the political stage. Adenauer, speaking in West Berlin where he became an honorary citizen of the city, said however, he would return only "when asked to do so."

Wheat Quarrel Just One More Example of Complex Canadian-U. S. Relations

By ARCH McKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The wheat quarrel between Canada and the United States bears out a recent statement by Prime Minister Pearson that more problems will emerge as relations become more intricate and complex between the countries.

Mr. Pearson was speaking in Cleveland Sept. 29, noting that problems certainly do exist in trade and financial matters despite the long record of friendship along the international boundary.

The great lakes labor war, the Columbia River project, Canada's trade imbalance with the U.S. and the dominance of American investment capital in certain areas of industry are examples.

In fact, Justice Minister Favreau is acting prime minister told the House of Commons Thursday, the federal cabinet then was spending most of its time in attempting to ensure that relations with the U.S. do not create crisis proportions over the labor question or wheat.

Wheat problems recur periodically since Canada and the U.S. are the largest exporters in the world and each can easily grow in most years far more than it can use or sell on commercial world markets. Competition is keen and the Canadian flour industry in particular has been losing ground steadily.

SHOE ON OTHER FOOT

But this time it is the U.S. turn to be annoyed, where in the past Canada usually has been the complainant about wheat disposal practices.

Canadian concern has centred on U.S. export subsidy or other foreign aid programs which infringe on export markets where Canada has been selling, or trying to.

This time, the U.S. accuses Canada of an impudent attempt on the upward trend in world wheat prices by selling to countries at a fixed level for deliveries over a period of months. Japan, where the U.S. and Canada are locked in competition is the particular irritant now to the U.S.

There are some fundamental differences involved.

The U.S. wheat market operates on speculation akin to the stock market.

World demand led by U.S.S.R. and other Communist countries' needs following poor harvests have pushed prices upward. But the U.S. is saying in effect that they would go even higher — with resulting profits to Western exporters—if Canada played ball. The U.S. would gain most since Canadian supply lines already are stretched tight.

Canadian prices are the responsibility of the Canadian Wheat Board, a crown agency formed in the 1930s at the request of Prairie farmers to act as mandatory sales outlet for their wheat, oats and barley.

Wheat trading has been removed from the Winnipeg Grain Exchange — unlike the U.S. situation—for a number of years.

The wheat board's view at this time is that any uncontrolled wheat price increase will stimulate production and result in a return to burdensome surpluses which plagued Canada during the 1950s.

DRAWN AGREEMENT

Canada and the U.S. have worked closely in the past on making the latest stability into world wheat price patterns. One instrument has been the International Wheat Agreement first drawn up in the late 1940s to guarantee importing countries that they could get some wheat at a fixed price level no matter how much higher prices generally might go.

Conversely, exporting countries were guaranteed a market for some wheat at fixed price levels in the event that the world price plunged disastrously.

But the U.S. has consistently grown more wheat than it can sell commercially and its surplus has lingered despite large amounts shipped as foreign aid regularly.

Then, earlier this year, American wheat farmers in a vital referendum rejected the concept of further wheat production curbs, saying the door to heavy output even though they might get a lower price.

This fact combined with present opportunities for exports may, in the Canadian view, lead to much wider U.S. wheat surplus than before, if prices soar during this period of brisk demand.

Profumo Scandal Did Not Force Macmillan to Quit

LONDON (Reuters) — Harold Macmillan, prime minister of British since January, 1957, had in recent months faced in the Conservative party one of the most virulent attacks of any political leader in the country's history.

This urbane politician, seemingly imperturbable, had repeatedly survived crises which both from the opposition and from within his own Conservative party had threatened to sign because of allegations of mismanagement of the country's economy.

Macmillan has announced his decision not to run in the next general election, to be held sometime next year. But apparently not the Profumo scandal which forced the decision.

Macmillan's surprise announcement was disclosed Thursday a few hours after the 69-year-old leader underwent an hour-long successful operation to clear a prostate obstruction.

The campaign for Macmillan's removal reached its peak during the notorious affair in which John Profumo resigned as war minister. Profumo admitted he lied to the House of Commons about his relations with playgirl Christine Keeler, who also was linked to Russian Naval Attache Yevgeni Ivanov.

FOLLOWED EDEN

Macmillan became prime minister when Sir Anthony Eden (now the Earl of Avon) resigned because of ill health. He took over when his party and the country was deeply split over the Anglo-French military intervention in Egypt following the nationalization of the Suez Canal.

But he was able to lead the Conservatives back to power for a fourth successive term in the general election of 1959.

Macmillan has had to battle with difficulty with many domestic issues, particularly finance, housing and security, and has been hard hit with some major world problems.

Born Feb. 10, 1894, Macmillan succeeded to control of the prosperous publishing firm founded by his grandfather.

MARRIED IN 1920

In 1920, he married Lady Dorothy Cavendish, daughter of the ninth Duke of Devonshire. They have one son and three daughters.

He unsuccessfully contested the Stockton on Tees seat in the 1923 parliamentary election, but won the seat for the Tories in 1924.

Apart from a short period between 1929 and 1931, he has been in parliament ever since.

He has held a number of ministerial posts and was British resident minister in North Africa from 1942 until the end of the Second World War.

In Conservative governments, he also was foreign secretary and chancellor of the exchequer.

TO TRAIN DOCTORS

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The Newfoundland government is to put 330 doctors and dentists through university and medical school at a cost of about $4,000,000, Premier Smallwood announced Thursday Mr. Smallwood said the project should start immediately with the training of 50 future doctors and five dentists to start immediately.

Meet Esks Saturday

Esks Make Changes

Calgary Shakes Up Squad

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

You still need a program to tell the players in the Western Football Conference.

Heading into an important mid - October weekend when coaches would rather have such things settled, new men continue to show up on the practice fields.

Calgary Stampeders made a surprising cut Thursday when they dropped halfback Ed Buchanan. Buchanan, in his third season, last year caught 30 of 35 passes thrown his way for 390 yards, rushed 900 yards and scored 10 touchdowns.

The Stamps picked up two men from Edmonton Eskimos. They purchased Canadian end Bruce Claridge and picked up veteran centre Don Stephenson who was placed on waivers Thursday after six years with the club. The Esks also dropped newcomer Luther Jerakis, an end.

Eskimos play the Rough Riders in Ottawa Saturday and the Tiger-Cats in Hamilton Monday. A single Saturday game in the West has the third-place Saskatchewan Roughriders in Vancouver to play the league - leading British Columbia Lions. On Monday, Calgary is host to Winnipeg for the third and last season meeting of the Stampeders and Blue Bombers.

PICK UP SIMMONS

The Edmonton makeover includes bringing C. B. Simons, an American League reject, into camp for work at centre, guard or linebacker.

Stampeders want Claridge to fill the gap forced by a knee injury to Bill McKenna.

Riders can be sure of at least third place after the weekend if they defeat BC. They are a point ahead of Saskatchewan and Calgary. The Lions.

Phillies Manager Collapses

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—John Quinn, 63, general manager of Philadelphia Phillies of the National League, collapsed at a press luncheon Thursday.

After Quinn was taken to a hospital, he regained consciousness and sat up. Bob Carpenter, the club's owner, said Quinn felt better and wanted to leave the hospital. But he was detained overnight.

Spokesmen at Jefferson Hospital said Quinn's ailment was not serious, but did not say what afflicted him.

Quinn, who in the last five years rebuilt the Phillies from a cellar dweller to a first-division team, was at a luncheon announcing the appointment of a new farm director.

In September, 1960 Quinn collapsed from what was later described as a gastro-intestinal disturbance. He quickly recovered.

At the luncheon Gene Martin announced he was retired as head of the Phillies' farm system and his assistant for the past two years, Clay Dennis, was named to the post. Martin said he will help the Phillies as a special scout.

HOLDS HIGH POST

The Archbishop of Canterbury, head of the Anglican Church, receives $31,000 a year.

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The stage is set for Frank Clair to perform another miracle.

For the man many believe to be the outstanding football coach in Canada, the drive begins this weekend to lift his Ottawa Rough Riders to a first-place finish in the Eastern Football Conference.

Clair has led the Riders since 1956 and has never missed the playoffs. But they have never finished first, and this could be the year.

Many pre-season predictions had Ottawa mopping up the cellar of the four-team league.

But Clair assembled the flotsam and jetsam he discovered when the team began training and molded it into a football team which now is tied for first place with Hamilton Tiger-Cats, last year's Grey Cup finalists.

Each team has four games left, beginning this weekend when they both play host to Edmonton Eskimos in Canadian Football League interlocking contests. The Esks play in Ottawa Saturday and in Hamilton Monday.

Edmonton has no prospect but to act as spoilers. The Eskimos are deep in the basement of the Western Conference, with just two victories in 11 games.

In the only other eastern action this weekend, Toronto Argonauts visit Montreal Sunday for a game with the Alouettes which will not mathematically eliminate the Argos from playoff contention.

Clair isn't overly optimistic about finishing first.

"I'd really like to finish on top this year," he admits. "But to do it, we'd have to win the next four games."

The Rough Riders will play two of their final three games at home, against Montreal and Toronto, but the big contest may be in Hamilton Oct. 26. The Ticats won 36-20 when the two teams met there Aug. 24.

The Tiger-Cats will play Edmonton Monday with one new Canadian in their lineup. He's all-Canadian lineman John Barrow, who will become a Canadian citizen Saturday.

"It's something I've been thinking about for a couple of years," said Barrow, who became eligible two years ago. "It involves my future and the future of my family."

The Argonauts may try yet another new man in their offensive backfield against Montreal.

Fullback Jon Rechner, recently removed from the Argo disabled list, may finally have disabled list, may finally have ably not at fullback. Toronto already has Larry Hickman and Ron Kitcher at that position.

Rechner was one of five players dealt to Edmonton during the winter for Jackie Parker. The Argos regained him when they later sent Bruce Claridge to the Eskimos.

The main interest of Montreal fans seems to be in who will play quarterback for the two teams in Sunday's game. Argo coach Nobby Wirkowski hasn't yet revealed whether he will start ex-Alouette Sandy Stephens or Parker.

Montreal coach Jim Trimble plans to start Warren Rabb, recent acquisition from Buffalo Bills of the American Football League. He may not dress Bubba Merritt as backup man.

Moira Wins Over Napanee

By CARSON McLAUCHLAN

Moira Trojans travelled to Napanee for their second victory of the year. Moira controlled the ball from the start to win the game to the tune of 39-7. Ron Faulkner scored Moira's first major on a 15 yard pass play from Ian Glen. In the second quarter after a B. C. interception by Moira, L. Glen connected with brother Rod to set up Moira's next T.D. Carmen Milligan received an end zone pass for the major. R. Faulkner scored his second T. D. of the game on a fine run play. Lang kicked for the points after hitting for 2 out 3 to give Moira a 20-0 lead at the half.

In the third quarter Moira recovered a fumble on the kick off. Three plays later they capitalized as I Glen ran for his first T.D. of the game. Napanee was then forced to kick and Moira marched down the field again.

After a combination of fine runs and passes C. Milligan was set up for his second major of the game on a 20-yard pass and run play. The converts were missed so at the end of the third quarter the score was 32-0.

In the final quarter L. Glen romped to his second T.D. of the game. R. Faulkner made the convert by running around the end. With only a few minutes left Napanee scored its only T.D.

Moira's defence played a fine game by intercepting many of Napanee's passes and recovering fumbles.

Will Have Cartilage Removed

Mickey To Get Cut - - On Knee

NEW YORK (AP) — Mickey Mantle definitely will have an operation on his left knee within two weeks in a New York hospital.

The New York Yankees announced Mantle's imminent operation Thursday after manager Ralph Houk had conferred with co-owner Dan Topping and general manager Roy Hamey. Houk contacted Mantle on a golf course in Dallas where he was playing with Ben Hogan.

Dr. Sidney Gaynor, club physician, will operate on Mantle for the removal of an outside cartilage of the left knee which was torn when he ran into a fence in Baltimore, June 18. He also suffered a broken bone in his left foot.

Bob Fishel, Yankee public relations chief, said Mantle will come to New York in a week or 10 days after he has arranged up some personal business and will undergo the operation at Lenox Hill Hospital.

Mantle underwent an operation for removal of the inside cartilage of his right knee after the 1951 World Series.

The Yankee slugger, who will be 32 on Oct. 20, played only 65 games this season. He hit .316 with 15 homers and 35 runs batted in. It was the first time he had failed to play at least 100 games.

DENY HE'LL FIGHT

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sonny Liston's adviser denied Thursday night that the heavyweight champion would defend his title before the end of the year. "There's nothing to it," said Jack Nilon. "There will be no fight with (Ernie) Terrell. There will be no fight, period."

AFL Defences Tougher

Yardage Harder Says Cookie

BUFFALO (AP) — Cookie Gilchrist is sure of one thing: defence in the American Football League are a lot tougher than a year ago.

The Buffalo Bills' massive fullback, voted the AFL's most valuable player in 1962 after he ripped apart enemy lines for 1,096 yards, doesn't think 1963's rushing champion will have to go that far.

"I think someone may win the title with less than 1,000 yards this year," he says.

"The yardage is coming harder."

Gilchrist, 28 and weighing 251 pounds, has been bothered by a variety of ailments and rib injuries this season. Despite his aches and pains and some bench warming because of them, he has picked up 206 yards in 38 carries for a 3.5-yard average.

IS SECOND

His ground total is only 100 yards under that of Boston's Larry Garron, the AFL leader who is averaging 3.8 yards in 80 carries.

Last year at this time, Gilchrist had carried the ball 53 times for 382 yards.

He seems optimistic that he might retain the league rushing title.

"We've still got nine games to play, so I think I've got a good chance if I get the ball enough."

Gilchrist carried the ball 214 times in rushing for his league record 1,096 yards last year. Thirteen of the carries were good for touchdowns.

Win 15-8 In See-Saw Battle

Trenton Defeats B.C.I.

By ROBERT WILLIAMS

Playing in a "must bowl" at Trenton High School the Trenton seniors defeated B.C.I. 15 to 8 in an all-out see-saw battle.

Jim Clement led the way for the rough-tough Trenton team who were assessed over 100 yards in penalties, by scoring both touchdowns.

L. Adams of B.C.I. opened the scoring by kicking a 35-yard major. Trenton, after their first punt when Vitriak kicked a single from the 30-yard line.

B.C.I. took over and J. Clement then intercepted a pass and ran it back to the 20-yard line. On the 10-yard line his took it over for the touchdown.

Trenton scored their next touchdown a few minutes later. Gautier passing to J. Clement for the major. The convert was missed.

Trenton got their last point when L. Louis picked off a pass on the 30-yard line his kicked for a single point.

In the second half B.C.I. started fireworks with J. Miller and B. Ridley grinding out good yardage. Millar took the ball 10 yds. to the 5 where Alan Mott passed to Lyle Adams for the T.D.

The quarter ended with B. Hallam of B.C.I. intercepting a pass and taking it back to Trenton's 50 yard line.

With 8 minutes to go in the last quarter B.C.I. attempted their 4th fake 3rd down punt and again gained a first down by passing instead of kicking.

Trenton got the ball but fumbled it on their 10 yd. line where B.C.I. took over. Again the offence was brought to a standstill and play ended when Trenton later recovered their own 3rd down punt.

In the junior game B.C.I. absorbed their second shellacking to the tune of a 39-0 score. Peter Wiltshire of Trenton was About Whisky, Bottles, Labels Etc.

One day while we were contemplating a number of our Wiser's whiskies, in different bottles, each with brilliantly individualistic labels, we were struck by the absurdity of the whole thing. We are not really selling bottles, or labels . . . just good Wiser's Canadian whisky.
So we decided to select just one good bottle and try it for most of our different brands. We chose our squarish bottle . . . attractive, popular, easy to pack for travelling; in short a delightfully functional bottle.
The whisky, as always with Wiser's is older than other whiskies on the board in virtually every price class. Thus if a mellow age-in-wood interests you, you will find Wiser's offers just about the best values in whisky today.
If you like well-aged whiskies, here are some good values: Wiser's De Luxe, 10 years old; Wiser's 101, 6 years old; Wiser's Old Rye, 5 years old; Wiser's Special Blend, 4 years old.

Brighton Edges Quinte

By ROBERT SNEVILLA

Two converts and a bit of luck helped Brighton seniors edge Quinte Saints 20-18 in Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. play at Brighton yesterday afternoon.

Quinte scored a few minutes after the opening kickoff. The key play in their drive was a 40-yard pass play to Joe Rebel. Tom Lockie, Quinte halfback, then ran 20 yards for the major The convert was missed.

After a series of punts Quinte started moving again. Joe Rabel ran 35 yards, but a penalty soon after forced Quinte to punt. The kick was blocked by Brighton. A few plays later Tony Stable went all the way for a 70-yard touchdown on a pass play. The convert was good.

In the second quarter a punt was recovered by Quinte. Five plays later, Richard Eves, Quinte quarterback, ran nine yards for the major. The convert was no good.

With a few minutes left in the half Elston Blake received a punt and ran 75 yards for a Brighton touchdown. The convert was missed.

The second half started off with no one able to move the ball very far. Then Dennis Lane intercepted a Brighton pass. On several good runs by Wilmer Matthews and a 25 yard pass to Bruce Spooner, Quinte moved down the field. Bill Leslie went two yards for the touchdown. The convert was missed again.

About halfway through the fourth quarter a punt was fumbled by Quinte and recovered by Brighton. The Brighton offence moved down to the one yard line of Quinte, but were penalized on the next play. Brighton then went to the air but Richard Eves intercepted the pass. The Saints were forced to punt.

With two minutes left in the game Blake got his second touchdown on a 30 yard sprint and Brighton took a 20-18 lead. Their defense held for the remaining minute.

In the Junior game Brighton won 19-13. Scoring for Brighton were Wayne Lucie and Brian Finley. Ted Lessels scored a touchdown and a convert and Eric Emerson ran for a touchdown for Quinte. Mike Shonker was outstanding on defense for Quinte.

NEW YORK (AP) — Owners of a dozen or more two-year-olds will put up $500 each today to qualify for the 52nd running of the Champagne Stakes Saturday at Quebec. The Champagne is the United States' oldest stakes for juveniles and richest in the history of New York racing.

The probable favorites for the $125,000-added one mile dash are Roman Brother and Count Bud from the Harbor View Farm, and Mr. and Mrs. John Rigney's Dunfee.

There is already $195,650 in the till, and with another $1,000 for each starter Saturday, the Champagne would gross $215,150 with $155,150 for the winner if 13 parade postward.

Ottawa Rough Riders

Want Interlocking Referees

OTTAWA (CP) — General manager Red O'Quinn of Ottawa Rough Riders said Thursday that he will recommend "interlocking referees" at a meeting of the Eastern Football Conference in Toronto next week.

Both O'Quinn and Ottawa coach Frank Clair have been reported as unhappy with the refereeing in Regina last weekend when Ottawa played Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Ottawa beat Saskatchewan 22-13 and drew 10 penalties for a total of 90 yards. Saskatchewan drew two five-yard penalties.

O'Quinn said eastern referees should handle interlocking Canadian Football League games in the West. Western referees should accompany western clubs in their eastern swings.

"It would cost some extra money but we're out of the bush league now," said O'Quinn.

Referees did work partial interlocking schedule earlier in the season. Paul Dojack handled two interlocking games in the East while eastern referees Ray Boucher and Seymour Wilson handled one game each in the West.

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Jim Trimble looked up from his desk in Hamilton's Civic Stadium one day in September, 1960, to behold a visitor: A 21-year-old, studious-looking fellow wearing large horn - rimmed glasses.

—"What will you have?" asked Jim, then coach of Hamilton Tiger - Cats. He thought the caller must have the wrong office. Trimble was looking for football players, not clerical assistants.

"I'm Garney Henley," was the young man's reply.

The Tiger coach, now with Montreal Alouettes, was looking for a halfback and here was a six-foot, 175-pound brush - cut chap who looked as if he belonged behind a librarian's desk.

But this native of Heyri, S.D., a village of 500 souls, was for real. He was a late cut from Green Bay Packers of the National League and coach Vince Lombardi had suggested he take a fling with Tiger-Cats.

HAD GOOD MARKS

His credentials certainly were there. He had never played football in lower school but with Huron College in South Dakota in 1957-58 he had set a U.S. small college scoring record of 391 points. That broke the mark of 364 points established by Leo Lewis, now of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, during his 1951-54 career with Lincoln University in Mississippi.

That visit to Trimble's office was to mark the start of a brilliant football career in Canada for the young American who has developed into one of the most valuable two-way halfbacks in the East or West. This season, he should be right up there when the balloting is conducted for the outstanding player in the country.

Henley does everything well.

He is rated as one of the top punt-return men in the Canadian Football League. Right now, he is tied for first-place in the Eastern Conference in pass interceptions with teammate Tommy Grant, each with four.

Trimble used him mainly on defence but still rated him as one of the finest offensive halves in the Canadian Football League.

ALWAYS A THREAT

He showed that Monday night in Winnipeg when he killed the Blue Bombers with a treasonous leaping catch of a Bernie Faloney pass in the final minute that set up the winning touchdown in Tigats' 26-14 victory. But that wasn't all.

He scored a touchdown on a pass from Faloney and made two pass interceptions.

This is the sort of thing he has been doing for years.

In the Dec. 1-3 Grey Cup final against the Bombers last year, Henley was the big man. The Tabbies lost the fogbound game 28-27, but fans in the ground-level seats could easily spot Sweater No. 36 in the Hamilton lineup.

Henley gained 217 yards of Hamilton's total offence of 480.

He scored two touchdowns on 74- and 18-yard runs, set up another with a 38-yard gallop and took five passes for 118 yards.

And last year he tied for fourth place in the EFC scoring — 13 touchdowns for 72 points. He was fourth in pass receiving with 37 catches for 731 yards, a average of 19.8 yards, and was up there in ground gaining with 226 yards in 50 carries for a 5.2 average.

What more does anyone want from a football player?

Two months after the 1963 Cup final, Ralph Sazio was appointed head coach of the Tabbies. He had this to say about Henley:

"I've always thought he should play on defence. Garney isn't strong enough to go all the way on offence. However, he's a great receiver and a great runner."

"Just let's say he'll play some

And the Ticat board of directors can pass a vote of thanks on to Vince Lombardi. He was the man who steered Henley to Hamilton.

IT'S NO PROBLEM

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. Wilder Penfield, famed Montreal neuro-surgeon and Guggenheim fellow in education Thursday said "two or three languages present no greater problem to the child than a single language" Dr. Penfield, retired director of the Montreal Neurological Institute told the conference on symbolic analysis that the fear of "confliction with the introduction of a second language was unfounded.

Petes Jrs. Hot in Exhibitions

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior League are going like a house afire in their pre-season exhibitions.

When they downed Kitchener 6-3 Thursday night in Peterborough, it was their fourth win in five pre-season games.

Toronto Marlboros, returning to the league after a year's absence, walloped Whitby Dunlops 8-3 in Whitby in another exhibition. The Dunlops will play in the Metro Junior B loop this season.

In another Junior A game, St. Catharines Black Hawks came from behind to beat Hamilton Red Wings 5-3. It was the Black Hawks' second win in three pre-season starts and it was Hamilton's first game.

Even in choice!
METEOR
makes it big for '64

a big fun-loving convertible!

People who like convertibles often drive a hundred miles just for the sheer fun of it. If you're this kind of person—the big Meteor Custom Convertible is for you. Its leather-grained vinyl upholstery oven awaits you. Flaunt it. Its 390 cubic-inch V-8—pair it off with a slick "four on the floor" transmission. Put the roof down and just nudge the accelerator and you're as fancy free as a summer breeze. And here's a surprise, this fun-loving convertible is priced with the lowest in its class.

a big luxurious hardtop!

That optional Breezeway Rear Window goes down as well as the side windows so just about the only glass around you is the windshield. This open air feeling of bigness is matched by Meteor's inches length and width to give you lots of room inside. Supple vinyls and fashionplate fabrics cover deep-them-padded seats front and rear. Thoughtful conveniences include padded arm-rest and visors, pile carpeting, crank-operated side vent windows and a specially cowled instrument panel that prevents glare. In luxury, and all the other things that mean extra value in a low-priced car, this Meteor Custom hardtop makes it big for '64.

big beautiful sedans!

Whatever your taste or budget—there's a big beautiful Meteor Sedan just right for you. If you want to make it big in luxury, choose the 2-door or 4-door Custom models. If you want to make it big in extra value you'll like the 2-door or 4-door Montcalm models. All give you Meteor's beautifully distinctive big-car styling along with the optional rear window that goes up and down.

big value-packed wagons!

Here is all the style of an expensive sedan plus interior luxury that is quite new in station wagon design. But when you want to be practical, Meteor's extra length and width really pay off. A quick one handed operation folds the rear seat back flat to the floor and you have an enormous flat cubic foot of cargo space behind you. Fill it to the brim with whatever you like. Meteor's strengthened frame and rubber mounted body are designed to take the heaviest load with ease. Choose from the Custom Wagon or the Meteor Wagon in either 6 or 9 passenger models.

Models illustrated from top, Meteor Custom Sedan, Wagon, Convertible and Hardtop—four of the Ford Family of Fine Cars made in Canada

BUSINESS EXECUTIVE ACTRESS—Lucille Ball, star of the Lucy Show, is president of Desilu Productions Inc., a company devoted primarily to television productions. It was Lucy's comedy talents, in partnership with those of her former husband Desi Arnaz, that originally built the company, now valued at more than $12,000,000. (CP Photo)

Lucille Ball, President Of $12,000,000 Business, Asked Pointed Question

By CYNTHIA OWEY

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Toward the end of a stockholders' meeting of Desilu Productions Incorporated, a shareholder rose and directed a question to the chair:

"Can Miss Ball give the time necessary to the presidency when she is employed full time as an actress?"

The six men who as directors the stage of the studio theatre looked at the red-haired comedienne. She in turn eyed her questioner for a long, almost hostile moment.

"Well," she finally replied, sharply, "I'm giving it. I'm never unavailable and it some times means holding meetings at 8 or 9 in the morning and after 5 when I'm actively participating. It's mostly a matter of budgeting your time differently."

Lucille Ball is one of the few women presidents of companies whose stock is listed on one of the two big U.S. exchanges—New York's American Stock Exchange.

Desilu owns what the authoritative Standard and Poor's Standard Listed Stock Reports calls "the largest and most complete motion picture studios 'in the world devoted primarily to television."

BIGGEST ASSET

Its president may well be its most valuable single asset. It was Lucy's comedy talents, in partnership with those of her former husband Desi Arnaz, that originally built the organization, now valued at more than $13,000,000.

In recent years many big companies have been attempting to make shareholders feel they were part of a corporate family. But never before have stockholders—100 of them plus a number of their children—arrived at an annual meeting early to queue up for autographed pictures of the company president.

The occasion was Lucy's first annual meeting as president. The session was held in Desilu's Gower studio where The Lucy Show is filmed. There were almost as many TV, radio and newspaper reporters present as shareholders and Lucy, forewarned, turned up in a gay linen print, open-toed sandals — and full television makeup.

For the most part she was serious. Wearing horn - rimmed glasses, she read from prepared notes. But occasionally she was unable to resist a spontaneous flight into mild humour. She nagged ruefully while reporting that an oil well drilled on the studio's theatre back lot had produced nothing.

NO DIVIDENDS

She had anticipated most of the questions she would be asked, and ended her report with a one-typed summary of the answers—no cash dividends now because "they're not in the best interest of the company or stockholders."

She quickly pushed the microphone toward company vice-presidents to answer questions about their departments. The meeting went off smoothly, slickly and without any problems.

Later she sat down in a CBS rehearsal hall to discuss the job of being a full-time television star and big business executive at the same time.

"It isn't easy," she said. "I go to meetings, of course, and listen carefully, and I find I now understand what they are talking about."

Lucy acquired all of Desi Arnaz's stock in the company after their divorce. She became president when he left the company.

She says she still isn't certain whether she likes the added responsibility or even whether she wants to keep the position indefinitely.

Meanwhile, she and her second husband, comedian Gary Morton, found time for a vacation this summer. Her Lucy Show has started its second season. Desilu also has Glynda the Greatest Show on Earth.

The Lucy Show and Glynis have been picked up by CBC this year while The Greatest Show on Earth is being carried on at least one private station in Canada.

NEW INDUSTRY

A new industry for Tweed is to start about 20 workers at the start is expected to be operating by December. The new company, Tweed Veneers Ltd., will be a comparatively small plant to supply a variety of customers with veneer, mainly maple. Its products will go mostly to U.S. markets to furniture makers. The plant will go a step further and do some multiple-ply moulding of furniture parts.

Last March Mr. Hunter disposed of his interests in Hunter Veneers, Ltd., which has been located in Tweed since 1946. He remained here with the parent company, Wood Mosaic Corporation, during the period of transition and resigned effective October 1st as vice-president to concentrate on setting-up the new Tweed Veneers operations.

Work has already started on the building of the new plant and machinery and equipment has been ordered.

Mr. Hunter said the two veneer plants in Tweed will not be directly competitive as there is an ample market for both to work at capacity to meet the demand.

C. of C. Warns Spending Will Hurt Economy

QUEBEC (CP)—The sounding board of Canada's businessmen has declared war on what it considers the federal government's unnecessary and potentially economy-crippling spending.

Winding up its annual meeting Wednesday, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce warned Ottawa that it continues on its present path of spending the Canadian economy will be hurt.

The chamber, in a strongly worded statement, to carry over the next 12 months, which said the federal government is following a low sound fiscal policies and social welfare programs.

On the business scene, the new tax policy declaration was a call for both government and business to take advantage of the changing international trade scene to enrich the entire country and raise personal standard of living.

The feeling among Canadian businessmen is one of confidence, said chamber President Howard T. Mitchell of Vancouver.

Summing up the four - day meeting, Mr. Mitchell said the chamber feels free enterprise still can meet peoples' needs better than any system of government control.

New Suspense Theatre Justifies Series Name

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's new Suspense Theatre began Thursday night with an exciting story that actually justified the series name.

The premiere was the first of a two-part tale called The Case Against Paul Ryker and for the first time since multi-part series became a television vogue, I am impatient to find out what happens.

It is a story about a U.S. army sergeant, played tough, hard and angrily by Lee Marvin, caught shedding the uniform of a Red Chinese major. The scene is wartime Korea and he is sentenced to hang for treason. Bradford Dillman plays the sensitive, able prosecutor played by doubts about the justice of the verdict.

At the end of an hour, there were some fascinating bits to chew over for the next week. Why was the grave of the colonel, the one man who might have saved Ryker, empty? Why was a mysterious motorcyclist trying to machinegun the prosecutor? Was Tyker a traitor or patriot?

RECOMMENDED VIEWING

Tonight — Something About Lee Wiley, NBC, 8:30-9:30, dramatized incident in the life of the popular blues singer of the 1930s, with Piper Laurie, on the Bob Hope anthology show.

Teen-Age Canada

B-O-O-M: No career offers as much challenge and intellectual adventure as chemistry, suggests Teen-Age Canada today.

William Henry Perkin Brilliant Young Scientist

By JACK HUTTON

Slightly more than 100 years ago 18-year-old William Henry Perkin was experimenting with a messy black test tube when he noticed a strange color in the mixture.

The second look which the young Englishman took at the test tube made history.

Quite by accident, William Henry Perkin isolated from coal tar a brilliantly colored substance that opened the door to a new range of dyes, replacing overnight the older types. We can't all be brilliant young scientists like William Henry Perkins. But I'm confessing here and now that chemistry still sounds like one of the most fascinating careers anyone could follow.

If you're thinking about it — or even wondering whether you should — look for one paperback book in your neighborhood. It's called "Understanding Chemistry," written by Lawrence P. Lessing, and published by Signet for 40 cents.

But I warn you. Nothing will ever seem the same again. Not the light streaming through your window, the shiny cover if a book, the feeling of heat in midsummer, the sound of a cricket, or the chime of a doorbell.

You'll feel sorry for the first caveman who noticed fire and couldn't understand what was happening.

Imagine what he told his wife: "Funny thing happened on my way to the forest!"

Mr. Lessing, one of the few writers who describe highly technical subjects in terms that you and I can understand believes that no one understands the world without understanding chemistry.

NEW-MOWN HAY

He says bluntly, "All our senses are based on chemical change. Even the smell of new-mown hay registers itself upon our brain by chemical means.

"Tiny invisible particles of matter wafted through the air from the cut grasses fall upon fatty receptors in our nostrils where their aroma is absorbed to give us the sensation of grassy fragrance and open fields."

No one yet understands, by the way, exactly how the "tiny invisible particles" are absorbed to give us the sensation of smell. If you're looking for a mystery to solve, that is only one of the millions awaiting you.

If you're interested in astronomy or the mysteries of other planets, you'll be intrigued by the "coincidences" of our planet that make it possible for us to live. We wouldn't have the same luck on Mars or Venus.

We know a lot about how the earth was formed, but there are a great many blank spots here too. Do we date from an explosion of the sun? Did we evolve from a cluster of matter in a giant cloud? Another mystery for you.

Scientists figure our solar system has been around for five to seven billion years (how's that for an exact figure, eh?), but they don't begin understanding some of chemistry's basic laws in the last 300 years.

A great deal has been discovered within the last 30 years — in fact, within the last month. But a list of what we don't know would fill this column several thousand times over.

I rather suspect William Henry Perkin would enjoy being around today as a teen-ager.

DOWN WITH ELEPHANTS

Perhaps it would happen. Someone has finally asked "What is Blues is funny about the elephant jokes we're been printing and which seem to tickle a lot of people.

John Clarke of Halifax describes himself as "a 40-year-old with what passed for a reasonable sense of humor before I started hearing those jokes about elephants."

"I've read your column off and on for quite some time," says Mr. Clarke, and enjoy it. I like the fact that you believe many teen-agers are more sensible and discriminating than many adults."

"But suddenly my faith is shattered. What in the world is funny about saying an elephant is grey so you can tell it from a blueberry? Everyone knows a blueberry is blue. What's the fuss?

"And why do elephants have flat feet? They thought of them jumping out of trees is so brilliant that it can't be funny. It's a joke which wouldn't appeal to anyone with a mental age above five.

"If any of your readers can stop chuckling at these unfunny jokes I'd like to challenge them to explain it. As the elephant jokes are funny, I've just about written off this generation."

Soviet-Blocked US Army Convoy Enters W. Berlin

Protests Said Action Entirely Unwarranted

BERLIN (AP)—A U.S. Army convoy held up by the Russians in East Germany for more than two days finally rolled into West Berlin today.

The U.S. Army said the troops were cleared through Babelsberg checkpoint "in accordance with established procedures."

That meant the Americans had won their latest battle with the Russians over the question of whether troops in small convoys have to dismount to be counted by Soviet guards when passing through Communist Germany from the West to isolated Berlin. The Western allies insist dismounting is unnecessary in small convoys.

The convoy of 18 vehicles and 61 men had been delayed since 9 a.m. Thursday at Helmstedt, territory by the controversy over the way they should be checked.

First the Russians held the convoy 15 hours at Marienborn, the west end of the 110-mile stretch of Autobahn to Berlin the U.S. officers refused to order their men to dismount.

Eventually the convoy continued on its way. But there was another snag Friday at Babelsberg, the Soviet checkpoint 10½ miles from West Berlin. Again the American officers refused to dismount.

The Soviet blocked the highway with two armored personnel carriers and surrounded the convoy with about 100 combat-ready troops in another 10 armored cars.

The U.S. Army announced "the soldiers did not dismount from their vehicles for a head count by the Soviets."

Swede Wins World's Plow Title

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP)—The 1963 world plowing champion is a stocky, crew-cut Swede who was giving up competitive plowing this year.

Yngve Manason of Ravlanda, Sweden, captured the coveted "gold plow" Friday at Caledon, 18 miles north of here, in what plow officials say was the closest competition in the event's 11-year history.

The announcement came as a surprise to the 36-year-old dairy farmer. His name had not even been mentioned as a contender Thursday as the contestants completed the stubble class of their two-day program.

His 294.46 points compiled during the two days enabled him to edge 33-year-old Eero Rautiainen of Karjalahja, Finland. Rautiainen completed 294.42 points.

"It was one of the finest finishes in the history of these competitions," said Alfred Hall of England, secretary of the world plowing organization.

CHANGES MIND

Manason said he intended this to be his final fling in international competitions. But his twin 34 - year - old wife Ingre, who accompanied him on the trip, said: "He was seriously thinking this would be his last competition, but now I don't think so."

Canada's hopes lay with Grant Wells, a 33-year-old dairy farmer from Stouffville, Ont., who finished third with 293.66 points. Thursday's favorite, after the stubble plowing event, Jack Barr of Coleraine, Northern Ireland, ran into difficulty on the second and wound up fourth with 292.60 points.

Word of the championship results came to Carlsruh, expectant crowd of more than 500 packed into the Brampton Curl-

Pearson Phones Kennedy

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson telephoned President Kennedy today in a personal bid to cool inflamed Canada-United States relations and seek U.S. government co-operation in abolishing labor lawlessness on the Great Lakes.

Informants said Mr. Pearson will emphasize to the president that all Canada—the government, Parliament and public opinion—is seriously concerned about Washington intervention in Canadian efforts to give the Great Lakes sailors free, democratic unions.

The person-to-person talk may propel Washington into making a new offer for a voluntary, union-sponsored trusteeship over the Seafarers' International Union of Canada—which the Canadian federal trusteeship under special legislation approved Friday by the Commons.

The federal trusteeship, unprecedented in its involvement in the internal affairs of trade unions, was approved in principle by a 181-16 roll-call vote on second reading. It was then given final Commons approval after the Liberal term was cut to three years from five.

DOOR AJAR

Ottawa's door to private trusteeship, an alternative favored by the U.S., still is open by the fact that the legislation will not get Senate approval and royal assent until next week.

The government could keep the door ajar longer since the legislation will not become effective until proclaimed formally by a cabinet order.

The Canadian position has been backed Friday for a private trusteeship. Both the U.S. government and the AFL-CIO would have to give majority authority to Canadian trustees and grant them unassailable powers to reform the SIU and to fire SIU president Hal Banks.

The AFL-CIO so far has balked at the government-backed idea of the Canadian Labor Congress that two of the three private trustees be Canadians.

Sources here believe that either U.S. Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz or AFL-CIO President George Meany may try to revive the abortive negotiations in the hope of contributing to the turbulent lakes problem.

The two men intervened Thursday in the situation. Mr. Wirtz blamed the collapse of the talks on a demand by the Canadian Labor Congress for Canadian control of any private trusteeship. Mr. Meany asked AFL-CIO support for the Canadian position in the fight against public trusteeship.

CREATE UPROAR

Their public statements caused an uproar in the Commons Friday, with Mr. Pearson accusing the Americans of failure to recognize that the Great Lakes dispute is essentially a Canadian affair.

The prime minister's statements were promptly relayed

Despite Cancer Scare, Reports Show Canadians Like to Smoke

TORONTO (CP)—Canadians like to smoke, cancer scare or no cancer scare.

Based on consumption of cigarettes and cigars as indicated by the sale of excise revenue stamps, Canadians this year will smoke about 41,295,568,000 cigarettes and about 35,624,000 cigars—more than in any other year.

While the cigarette industry is optimistic that the increased sales will mean better profits this year, it also is worried about the possible harmful effects of smoking and its alleged connection to lung cancer.

The industry will meet with Health Minister Judy LaMarsh in Ottawa for three days next month, Nov. 25 to 27. Also present at the meeting will be representatives of the Canadian Medical Association, the Canadian Cancer Society and other health organizations.

A spokesman for Rothman's of Pall Mall Canada Ltd. said the "health cancer problem will be discussed in depth and debated and in what way the industry can help."

He said the meeting will also consider an educational program to maintain young people from acquiring the smoking habit."

One firm—Canadian Tobacco Ltd.—has moved its advertising on television to after 9 p.m. so children won't be influenced.

The company says one has to be an adult before deciding whether or not to smoke. "It is not a children's product."

However, most companies say they are not doing anything special about the cancer problem nor changing their advertising methods until after the November meeting when the whole thing has been gone over thoroughly."

There are some 100 brands of cigarettes on sale in retail outlets throughout Canada—each which sell more than 1,000,000 cigarettes a month.

Mrs. M. B. Stewart, president of Macdonald Tobacco Co. says it is impossible to explain the recent increase in cigarette consumption.

Rothman's simply explains it as "forbidden fruits are always better."

Canada Intends to Place U.S. Contracts Says Hellyer

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada intends to place substantial defence contracts in the United States next year, Defence Minister Paul Hellyer said Friday. He said the flow of orders will rise gradually over the years as Canada considers the need for aircraft and other defence replacements.

Hellyer told a press conference that it is Canada's intention that the increasing flow of orders southward will attract greater flow of U.S. orders to Canada. He said the press conference after confidential talks with Defence Secretary Robert McNamara and his advisers.

Hellyer said he still has hopes, on the basis of his talks with McNamara, that the Pentagon will continue to participate in development of the Canadian Caribou II transport plane, despite the fact Congress recently lopped from the U.S. defence budget $25,000,000 intended to pay the U.S. share of development costs.

Hellyer said he also believes the question of the U.S. Army purchase of Canada's new Caribou I plane, built by de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Limited, Downsview, Ont., is not completely dead, although the projected sale of 30 aircraft has been dimmed by the congressional hatchet-job on that program.

The Caribou earlier this week refused to approve $31,700,000 for some 45 new Caribou I planes the army originally had intended purchasing this year.

Hellyer said the question of the Caribou program will be reopened by Industry Minister C. M. Drury and by a conference with McNamara next week.

Hellyer pointed out that Mc-Namara had agreed publicly to match Canadian defence orders in the U.S. by Americans orders in Canada, dollar for dollar.

Currently, American defence orders in Canada are running slightly ahead of Canadian orders placed in the U.S. However, Hellyer said, the traditional deficit in over-all trade with the U.S.

There has been reports that McNamara is anxious to hear just what new defence contracts may be expected from Canada, and Hellyer in effect confirmed earlier reports that it may take some months before Canada

Wrong Skunk

MORRISON, Colo. (AP)—Flower, a pet with her smell removed, disappeared about a week ago. Then a neighbor started raiding the garbage can at Sam Arnold's residence.

One night during intermission a folk singer ran to the aid of a woman who let out that Flower was back. The singer grabbed the skunk.

But it wasn't Flower.

Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS
FRIDAY, Oct. 11, 1963

Prime Minister Pearson said he will not hesitate to complain to President Kennedy about U.S. intervention in the lakes union crackdown.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker had raised the issue, citing comments Thursday by U.S. Labor Secretary Wirtz and AFL - CIO President Meany.

The House voted 181 to 4 to approve in principle the bill for federal trusteeship over five Great Lakes unions.

Trade Minister Sharp defended Canadian wheat board pricing policies from criticism by the U.S. which leaked confidential Canadian data Thursday.

NDP Leader Douglas said expelling SIU chief Hal Banks won't end labor violence because another SIU goon would promptly arrive from the U.S.

Rebel Berbers Retreat Deeper Into Mountains

ALGIERS (AP)—Rebel Berber tribesmen retreated deeper into the Kabyle Mountains today before superior government forces, but they vowed to wage a relentless guerrilla war.

The Berbers gave ground in the central day of combat in a 10-day war of insults with President Ahmed Ben Bella's regime on the eve to actual shooting Friday.

With medium tanks, bazookas and recoilless rifles, the government troops blasted through a Berber road block at Fort National and took Tizi Ouzou, with a population of 4,000 and two other towns.

Just before the retreat, rebel chieftain Hocine Ait Ahmed told a radio in Michelet that his men would give Ben Bella's army no rest. Draped with machine-gun belts, Ahmed said the rebels had an all-out war against the government.

The rebel command was reported to have set up headquarters in a mountain cave after the battle. A spokesman said contact had been lost with most of the Berber units. But he claimed that the rebels would ambush government troops at every opportunity.

Three government soldiers were killed and several wounded by Berber gunfire during the fighting.

Rebel casualties were not known although they were believed heavier.

Butler Leading In Race

BLACKPOOL, England (CP) The ruling Conservative party today prepared to wind up its annual convention here with R. A. Butler apparently still leading in the race to succeed Harold Macmillan as prime minister.

However, there were signs that Selsdon Minister Quintin Hogg's sham had narrowed the early lead established by Butler, acting prime minister now heading the government while Macmillan is in hospital in London.

Hailsham today received a deafening ovation when he stepped to the rostrum during a conference debate. Cheers and the ringing of a handbell lasted for more than a minute.

Some thought Foreign Secretary Lord Home's stock might be rising as that of Chancellor of the Exchequer Reginald Maudling fell. Home was seen as possible compromise choice acceptable to all sections of the party.

Butler's big moment of the convention is expected to be later in the day when he was to address a wind-up rally in place of Macmillan. Butler's by the successful prostate gland operation Thursday which led to the announcement by Macmillan of his intention to retire soon.

DEPENDS ON SPEECH

If the speech gets a good reaction from party and the country, it could greatly boost Butler's chances of a "peaceful exit lease" on London's 10 Downing Street, official residence of British prime ministers.

If it flops, Hailsham's prospects might soar. Hailsham, already popular, has risen in party rank and file, was thought to be winning adherents in the cabinet, as well.

However, rank-and-file Conservative members of Parliament still leaned toward Butler or Maudling, though the latter's Conversation speech Friday did not go over with a high-powered bang and his stock slumped.

But Home got a warm, prolonged standing ovation from the 4,000 delegates—which apparently surprised the party hierarchy.

Macmillan was reported to be making steady progress following his operation. He was delaying his actual resignation until well enough to visit Buckingham Palace in London to talk with the Queen.

Treated Politely

JUSTICE, Ill. (AP) — There was courteous injustice in justice Friday.

Mrs. Mary Hamilton used a supermarket cashier into the back seat of her car as she was preparing with money from a bank.

The cashier, Mrs. Beatrice Sleathe, 47, said the men treated her politely, but took $4,250 from her, then let her out several blocks from the suburban home.

She said one of them told her: "Don't worry, about the money, it's insured."

Acceptance Said To Be Margin Of Four-To-One

Proposals Advanced By Federal Mediator

MONTREAL (CP) — Striking longshoremen voted today by secret ballot to accept settlement proposals advanced by federal mediator Judge Rene Lippe.

Officials emerging from the voting hall said acceptance was by a margin of about four to one.

The exact figure was not immediately announced.

The same proposals accepted by the longshoremen now will be considered by the Shipping Federation of Canada, representatives of the ship owners.

Judge Lippe said the federation is to meet at noon.

As the longshoremen left the Centre Maisonneuve gymnasium, where the balloting was held, one of them said there were 1,212 ballots cast and that a little more than 900 were in favor of accepting the proposals.

MENTION DOUBLECROSS

Newspaper men heard a number of the longshoremen muttering that they had been "double - crossed" and "betrayed." They said there should have been more than 1,212 ballots cast.

Newspaper men reckoned there were more than that number in the gymnasium but they had no knowledge of any possible abstentions or spoiled ballots.

Officials of the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC), which called the strike a week ago Friday, hurried from the building. Interna-

Adenauer Hands In Resignation

BONN (Reuters) — Konrad Adenauer has handed in his resignation as chancellor of the West German Federal Republic — a post he has held since the republic's birth 14 years ago— but he will not disappear from the political scene.

Politicians here are asking whether the "Adenauer era" really will come to an end when he is succeeded as chancellor next Wednesday by his economics minister, Professor Ludwig Erhard.

Although 87 years of age, Adenauer still appears physically and mentally fit. He will remain as chairman of the Christian Democratic Party and keep his seat in Parliament.

No one here doubts that he will use his immense prestige and his experience to prevent the government from making any "dangerous" deviations from the course which he has laid down.

Even Adenauer's bitterest enemy would admit that he has been the main architect of West Germany's strong position in the world today.

HIT TOP AT 73

When in 1949 he became the first chancellor of the newly-formed German Federal Republic, he was 73, an age at which most men have retired into private life. He had had no political career on a national level.

He is not retiring of his own free will. His Christian Democratic Party put strong pressure on him to do so, and chose Erhard as his successor against the chancellor's strong objections. Adenauer claims his economics minister does not have enough political experience to run the country.

Born July 5, 1876, the third son of a Cologne justice official, Adenauer in many ways resembles the authoritarian father figure of the late 19th century.

In his youth, he dreamed of becoming a theological student. Instead he became mayor of his native Cologne in 1917, at the age of 41, and continued in the Canadian Coast Guard Battles Bad Weather to North Outposts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Coast Guard battled the worst ice and weather conditions in the history of arctic navigation in this year's seaborne supply mission to north outposts.

Capt. R. S. Brand, director of marine operations for the transport department said in an interview Friday that despite unprecedented navigational problems all supplies were delivered although they were late at some points.

He said the 27 icebreakers and cargo vessels encountered severe ice conditions in all areas of the eastern Arctic except Foxe Basin on the west coast of Baffin Island.

Ten ships, including the coast guard icebreakers John A. Macdonald and the Montcalm, were damaged by heavy pack ice. Fog also infested the sea lanes. A number of ships, including the supply vessel C. D. Howe, were stuck for periods in heavy ice and had to be freed by icebreakers.

Capt. Brand said that besides the severe ice conditions the ships had to contend almost daily with gales, snow, fog and below-normal temperatures.

The successful delivery of some 100,000 tons of cargo to northern posts under adverse conditions was a tremendous example of good seamanship by the men involved," he said.

Transport Minister McIlraith said this year's experience illustrates the necessity of using stronger ships for northern navigation. This would become increasingly important as the commercial development of the north proceeded.

Capt. Brand said when this year's mission was being planned the department had no idea that trouble was ahead. Long-range forecasts were that ice and weather conditions would be similar to 1963 when they were good.

However, when the icebreakers Labrador and N. B. McLean arrived July 23 in Hudson Strait between Baffin Island and northern Quebec they found it clogged with ice. It took the icebreakers until late August to smash the sea route to Chesterfield Inlet.

Priest Given up for Dead 16 Years

U.S., Reds Complete Swap of Spy Suspects

NEW YORK (AP)—Two communist suspects were traded for each other over the Atlantic ocean today to complete a swap of spy suspects—two Russians for two Americans, one of the latter a priest given up for dead 16 years ago.

Arriving at Idlewild Airport this morning, after a flight from Moscow by way of London, were Rev. Walter Ciszek, 59, of Shenandoah, Pa., and Marvin W. Makinen, 24, of Ashburnham, Mass.

The Roman Catholic Jesuit priest was arrested by the Soviets on espionage charges in 1960. Makinen, a former Fulbright Scholar, was vacationing behind the Iron Curtain when he was arrested two years ago.

At Idlewild Airport Friday night the two Russians, Ivan D. Egorov, 44, and his wife, Alexandra, 39, departed by plane for Moscow by way of Copenhagen.

The person - for - person exchange was announced Friday afternoon when charges against the Soviet couple were dismissed in Brooklyn federal court.

Father Ciszek was arrested by Soviet authorities 23 years ago on the, Polish border and was sentenced to a 25 - year prison term as a spy. In 1947, when his father died and the family estate was probated, Father Ciszek was declared legally dead.

But a word came from the Soviet Union until 1955, when a letter arrived at the Convent of the Bernadette Order of St. Francis in Reading, Pa. The letter was addressed to Mother Superior Josephine Ciszek's sister.

She in turn conveyed the news to another family member, Sister Conrad, also a member of the Bernadette Order. Another sister of Father Ciszek, Helen Gerhardt, lives in Washington, D.C.

Following receipt of the letter, the family got in touch with the State Department. Last August relatives were informed by Attorney-General Robert Kennedy that the priest's release was expected.

Makinen was on vacation in the Soviet Union after a scholarship year at the Free University of West Berlin. He was arrested in Kiev July 27, 1961, for assertedly photographing military objectives. He was sentenced to two years in prison plus six years in a corrective labor camp.

The Egorovs were arrested last July 2 in their Flushing, N.Y., apartment. A federal grand jury indicted them on spy charges just two days ago. Egorov, employed by the United Nations secretariat, claimed diplomatic immunity. This contention was rejected and they were ordered to stand trial Nov.

Historic Letters Highlight Workshop

The discovery of a number of letters written by the noted Canadian author, Sir Gilbert Parker, highlighted the Museum Workshop held Monday evening at the Hastings County Museum. The letters were among a number of documents recently presented to the Provincial Society by the estate of the late Col. W. N. Ponton. The letters dealt with local celebrations in the early 1900's and the installation of a stained glass window in St. Thomas' Church.

Also at the workshop, the tasks of cataloguing the newspaper collection and of indexing Mikal's "City of Belleville History" were continued. At the conclusion, light refreshments were served by Museum curator, Mrs. J. Sargent.

There will be no workshop next Monday, Thanksgiving Day, but they will resume the following Monday, October 21, at 8 p.m. and interested persons are welcome.

Two Juveniles Found Sleeping In Laundromat

Belleville police are holding two juveniles — 700 miles from home.

The pair were found sleeping in a laundromat early this morning. Brought to city head-quarters, they confessed to running away from their homes in Columbus, Ohio, last week. One boy said they had financed part of the escapade with $25 he stole from his mother's purse.

Robert Temple Endorses Bill On Polls

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons agreed Friday to consider a change in the Canada Election Act that would provide for $500 fines for anyone convicted of leaking advance poll results before or on election day.

The House passed a motion by Solicitor-General MacNaught that the matter be studied of a private member's bill sponsored by Rodolphe Leduc (L—Gatineau) be referred to the privileges and elections committee for detailed study.

Under present legislation, deputy returning officers found guilty of this offence are disciplined and lose their indemnities. Newspaper officers convicted of publishing advance polls results prematurely are liable to a $500 maximum fine.

Robert Temple (L—Hastings South) endorsed Mr. Leduc's bill. He said present legislation makes it easy for a party to pack advance polls and leak the results in an effort to create a bandwagon approach" on election day. Reid Scott (NDP —Toronto Danforth) suggested it would be better to prohibit publication of public opinion polls during election campaigns.

Road Accident Spawns Two Other Mishaps

Curosity—the kind that draws crowds to accidents — brought disaster for motorists on Highway 37, at Plainfield yesterday.

Provincial police officers, investigating a spectacular accident involving a transport tanker, had their hands full keeping traffic on the move.

Before the situation was normal, there were two accidents involving other cars at the scene, one driver had been charged for passing in a dangerous place and another cautioned for speeding.

Cool Weather Affects Crowd On Market

A small crowd was seen on the city farmer's market here early this morning as somewhat cooler conditions hung over the Bay of Quinte area.

Few potatoes were offered this morning. Sahagos sold 65 cents a six quart basket and small cobblers for 50 cents a six quart basket.

Due to the cold weather encountered over the past couple of weeks, tomatoes have been affected and a fewer than usual number of baskets were seen lined by the sidewalks today, although still at the usual price of from 65 to 75 cents a six quart basket. Green peppers brought 50 cents.

Onions, beets and radishes were offered for 15 cents a bunch or three bunches for a quarter. Some corn was offered this morning and sold for 45 cents a dozen. Bon Corke Not Running For Re-election

Pressure of business will make it impossible for Deputy Mayor Ben Corke to offer himself for re-election in the forthcoming municipal election.

"I have too many matters of my own to look after to think of seeking re-election," Mr. Corke stated. He also announced he would be bowing out of municipal life at the end of the year.

First elected to city council four years ago, Mr. Corke has been deputy mayor for two years and has also served on the finance and executive committee.

And much of the investigation prior to the city taking over the Bell Telephone franchise was done by Mr. Corke during one of his first committee appointments following his election to council.

Acceptance

tional President Thomas (Teddy) Gleason of New York said, "I'm glad this is over."

Secretary-Treasurer James Lemaire of Local 375—the big local comprised of stevedores—said ILA members in Quebec and Trois-Rivieres had already agreed to accept the proposals. Total number of members for those ports has been estimated at 600 or 700.

There are two other locals in Montreal, smaller ones comprising the checkers and the ship - liners. Their total is roughly 500.

MAY CHANGE MINDS

The checkers previously had decided to reject the proposals unless the new contract were put on a two-year basis instead of three-year basis, but it was also reported unofficially they were ready to go along with the vote of the big local—the stevedores—which numbers around 2,200 members.

There was no immediate indication when the shipping federation would announce its action on the proposals. The federation represents 38 carriers.

REVISE PROPOSALS

The strikers last Thursday turned down proposals by Judge René Lippe. Since then the proposals have been revised.

This was the first time during the strike, which started Oct. 4, that there has been a secret ballot.

The proposals they voted on included a three-year contract with a raise of 10 cents an hour each year. The increase would be retroactive to last Jan. 1 when the old contract expired. Their current pay is $2.33 an hour, with fringe benefits valued at 29 cents.

ADAMS — In loving memory of a dear grandson, Ronald Adams, who passed away October 14th, 1962.
The world goes on, dear son, as it was Before you left us for a while.
But we have lost a part of us
When you went with a smile.

And you have left to stay,
Every day in some small way,
Memories of you we fondly treasure.
Though absent, you are ever near,
Still sweet memories linger here.

ADAMS — In loving memory of a dear grandson, Larry Ross, who passed away Oct. 13th, 1960.

How I miss your smiling face,
Your kind and gentle ways.
None on earth can take your place.

A happy home we once enjoyed,
Your place is vacant now,
But God in His great goodness,
Has comfort given us how.

Civic Action Committee New United Appeal Agency

The Civic Action Committee of the Catholic Women's League has been welcomed as an agency of the Belleville United Appeal, it was announced today by Appeal headquarters.

The Civic Action Committee is comprised of two representatives from each parish council of the League, the presidents, citizenship conveners and a director.

In the past, civic action funds have been raised independently of any parish council and are managed by the committee treasurer and do not support the church.

Mrs. Cliff (Yvonne) Murphy, chairman of the Civic Action Committee, said today that in the past civic action funds have been raised by a tag day, special collections at the churches and by an assessment levied on each member of the league.

"The work of the committee is three-fold" said Mrs. Murphy. "It promotes welfare, fosters character building and assists new Canadians irrespective of the religious faith of the parties involved."

Elaborating on some of the welfare work of the Committee in the past, Mrs. Murphy recalled the disastrous fire in the area in which a family lost its home and all its belongings. This unfortunate citizen, a father of twelve children, was assisted in rehabilitation through a building fund started by the Committee.

"Gifts are provided at Christmas for residents of the Hastings County Home and entertainment is sponsored for their enjoyment."

A young lady of foreign extraction involved in an accident found herself alone and friendless in the city hospital. Members of the Civic Action Committee visited her and provided clothing, treats and moral guidance, Mrs. Murphy said.

"Every day" she pointed out, "hundreds of all denominations call at the three parish rectories where meal tickets are given free and paid for from Civic Action treasury."

Among the other activities the Committee has established a nursery to assist needy students.

"In the past two years," the chairman said, "it has been our privilege to assist financially two new Canadians to apply for citizenship papers and to act as sponsors."

"One gentleman" she recalled, "found it impossible to save enough money for citizenship due to costly medical expenses. Necessary funds were provided by the Committee and today this family of proud Canadians is adding much to the cultural life of the city."

Funds were provided recently to a lady desirous of becoming a Canadian citizen. "She is extremely grateful to us for our interest and assistance," Mrs. Murphy said.

She added that in the past years the Civic Action Committee has made contributions to all local charitable organizations and has representatives serving on various boards at the present time.

"This is the first year this committee has been an agency of the United Appeal" Mrs. Murphy concluded. "The one hundred members of the Catholic Women's League will work with the United Appeal by taking part in the residential canvass October 31st to the 26th."

moved vehicles.

Friday the Berlin command sent 144 U.S. infantrymen in 25 vehicles to Babelsberg to stand by the convoy. The second convoy was cleared by the Soviets, but stayed at the checkpoint.

The 205 troops prepared for a long stay while the issue was fought out at the diplomatic level.

Release of the convoy came suddenly. The first reporters knew of it was when they spotted the lead vehicle coming around the bend to the allied checkpoint at Drellinden, on the West Berlin city limits.

In Washington, U.S. leaders hoped that firmness, coupled with diplomacy, would end the confrontation, which came as a surprise after a period of relative calm in Soviet-U.S. relations over Berlin.

President Kennedy met twice Friday with his advisers and protested to the Soviets "this entirely unwarranted" harassment.

Road Tanker Damage Said Near $30,000

The most expensive accident of the year in the Quinte district occurred yesterday at Wallace Point when a road tanker crashed off an embankment on Highway 37.

Police estimated total damage to the tractor and tank car close to $20,000.

The accident happened in heavy rain at O'Brien's Bridge. The transport — driven by 31-year-old Carl Melvin Wood, of Actinolite, went out of control on a sloping curve. The heavy vehicle veered across the highway and crashed through guide posts flanking the 30-foot embankment. Police say Wood fought for control of the vehicle all the way until near the bottom of the incline where the vehicle rolled over.

Both tractor and tanker were a write-off. Wood crawled unhurt through the shattered windshield of the cab. He was on his way home with the tank car, after delivering a load of acid from Sulphide to Cobourg.

Constable Howard Adamson of Belleville OPP detachment investigated.

Sales and Ad Club to Hear James Matthews

The second meeting of the 1962-63 season of Belleville's Sales and Advertising club will feature as guest speaker Mr. James Matthews, D.C. of Toronto when the meeting is convened next Tuesday evening at the Columbus Hall.

Mr. Matthews for many years electrified audiences along the Ontario banquet circuit when on the field of advertising and sales as an executive of Walsh Advertising Agency. After 18 successful years in this field he embarked upon a "second mile" career by returning to college for four years to earn his degree as a Doctor of Chiropractic. Today, he is able to bring a dynamic message to all young business men with his background of practical experience and clinical training. He is a past president of the Young Men's Advertising and Sales Club of Toronto and was recently appointed to the position of Associate Professor of Chiropractic and Developmental Anatomy at the Canadian Memorial Chiropractic College, a position of his attendance on occasion will be "You Can Take It With You".

This year the roster of the local club has been increased to total 125 members due to the continuing heavy demand for applications for membership in the club. Although all positions on the roster are currently filled, the club welcomes guests to its meetings and invites applications for membership, which will be placed on the waiting list for vacancies in the roster as they occur. Active direction of the club this season is in the hands of a Board of Directors consisting of 11 members headed by Gerry O'Connor as president.

Good Report On Eating Places Given

TRENTON — Health board chairman H. S. Pane and board member Miss Marjorie Gothard brought back a very encouraging report from Dr. J. H. Orr director of the government laboratory in Kingston regarding the state of cleanliness in Trenton eating places, on Thursday.

Dr. Orr gave the local hotels and restaurants a clean bill of health and said that a few adverse bacteria counts on forks, knives, spoons and dishes were "nothing to worry about".

At last month's health board meeting, Mr. Pane said that he was disturbed about some of the recent tests run at the Kingston laboratory because dishes and cutlery from local establishments had shown bad bacteria counts.

Dr. Orr said on Thursday that this could be due to any number of factors and was not really alarming.

Mr. Pane said that he was "quite happy" about Dr. Orr's statements and that the trip had been worthwhile from the reassurance standpoint.

MORE NUCLEAR TESTS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission announced it set off two underground nuclear explosions at its Nevada test site Friday—one related to weapons development and the other for peaceful purposes. Both were of low yield, meaning they had an explosive force less than that of 20,000 tons of TNT.

Mistreatment Of Dogs, Other Animals Alleged

TRENTON — Humane Society officials here are investigating the alleged mistreatment of dogs and other animals on the property of a Gerrying Place resident.

Mrs. Hilda Jones, chairman of the local branch of the society acting on a tip, visited the premises with members of her committee.

They found, it is alleged, nineteen dogs, one a female with a litter of three pups, one dead, with no signs of food and water. Two cats and two chickens were found on the shack property.

Mrs. Jones notified Toronto headquarters of the Humane Society and Chief Inspector McCarthy immediately ordered the dogs confiscated and sent to Kingston.

The man had not been located at this writing.

RESCUE TRY FAILS

EDMONTON (CP) — A three-year-old boy was crushed to death by a city garbage truck Friday despite a valiant effort of a city employee to save the boy's life. James Moore, a truck swamper, saw the boy and dived in front of the wheels in an attempt to save him. Mr. Moore was pinned beneath the truck's rear axle and his legs became entangled with the bicycle. He was in fair condition.

post until dismissed by the Nazis in 1933.

During the 12 years of Hitler's rule he lived in complete political retirement. Twice, in 1934 and 1944, he was arrested as a political enemy.

In the spring of 1945 the American occupation authorities reinstated him as mayor of Cologne, but the British, who took over power in the Rhineland, dismissed him six months later for "incompetence."

A former leader of the Catholic Party, Adenauer then devoted all his energy to building the Christian Democratic Party which was to unite Roman Catholics and Protestants in an effort to make Christian ethics the basis of political life.

His main aims have been to make West Germany an equal partner in the Western alliance, to effect reconciliation with France, the age-old enemy, and to work for the construction of a united Europe.

As a devout Roman Catholic with rather conservative social views, Adenauer abhors communism. His staunchly refusal to any attempts to edge his country out of its ties with the West. He considers that a neutralist in the old sense and he certainly is not the "militarist" that the communists claim him to be. But he insists that West Germany must be a loyal, sovereign partner of the West.

If there is one thing Adenauer has never been blamed for it is his attitude toward the Jews. He promoted the idea that West Germany should compensate Israel for what Jewry had suffered under Hitler and in 1953 an agreement to this effect was ratified by the West German Parliament.

SEES CRIME WAVE

TORONTO (CP) — Deputy Police Chief George Elliott said Friday a crime wave may be in store for Metropolitan Toronto if juvenile delinquents are not deterred from following careers of crime. He said in an interview he considered some of the sentences handed out in juvenile courts but light to stop many delinquents from becoming serious offenders in years to come.

'ARREST SUNKEN SHIP'

MONTREAL (CP) — A warrant for the arrest of the freighter Tritonien was issued Friday in Montreal. The ship was partially submerged in the St. Lawrence River where it carried 33 crew members to their deaths last July 30. A seizure was obtained by a Montreal lawyer on behalf of the Scottish widow and two children of the ship's chief engineer, Manny Dos Paing. She has a claim of $120,000 against the ship and its owners for his death.

Belleville United Appeal

To the Citizens of

Belleville and Area:

As President of the Belleville United Appeal Board I would like to bring to you, on behalf of the Board Members and myself, some information which I hope will be interesting to the people of Belleville. It indicates some of the problems that we as an organization encounter in endeavouring to collect funds on behalf of our twelve participating agencies.

As you know, our campaign has already started. Our canvassers are making their calls in an effort to collect the money required to assist in the welfare of our people. I am sure everyone realizes that our Board works in the interest of all people regardless of who they may be. The agencies embodied in the overall United Appeal organization have been accepted as participants after an extensive and careful study. They have all received the hearty endorsation of the Board and as a Board we are convinced that the money collected through our organization and distributed to these various agencies is being equitably disbursed.

In our work during a campaign such as this our canvassers hear disheartening remarks - sometimes regarding one agency or another. Recently we have had it brought to our attention cases where persons have resented giving because of the participation of the Civic Action Committee of the Catholic Women's League as a member agency in the United Appeal.

Naturally, I was surprised at hearing this and began to wonder how this could be possible. I have come to the conclusion, after discussing this matter with our executive, that we, as a Board should arrange to have more information made available in connection with this particular organization as they are comparatively new as members of the United Appeal organization.

We might point out again that the United Appeal organization is striving to bring together all of the organizations who are doing a welfare service. This particular organization was invited to participate in the United Appeal organization and we, as a Board, are very pleased to have them as a member agency. They are not only rendering a generous welfare service in the community but they are also taking a strong and active interest in the work of the Campaign.

We trust that with the information we are arranging for it will help to clear up any misunderstandings there might be. We would like to say further, that should any citizen of Belleville have any inquiry he would like to make regarding any participating agency of the United Appeal, we stand ready to give him any information he might require. We only hope and trust that the public will take a broad view of this and contribute to the very best of their ability and thus make it possible to contribute a service that Belleville can well be proud of.

Yours very truly

E. G. GURNETT, President, on behalf of the Directors of the United Appeal Board.

Unbloodied, Unbowed

Harold Macmillan has resigned as Prime Minister of Great Britain. After six-and-a-half years in office, during which he steered the country through three major crises, he has given up the helm. Typically, he saw his party safely through the final crisis before he left.

His first task, when he took office from Anthony Eden early in 1957 was an impossible one. Restore British prestige, and British self respect, after the Suez crisis. The task was all the harder because he was known as a supporter of Eden's policy in Suez.

The impossible was achieved though and within a year Britain was among the leaders, often the leader, of world affairs. It was about this time the newspapers started calling him "Supermac" and "Mac the Wonder."

The Common Market crisis was a different situation, and the political danger was greater, probably, than the political danger of the Suez move that buried Eden. And Macmillan walked into it, with his eyes open. He knew the British people's sentiment for the Commonwealth and for the remains of the empire, and he knew he was making himself the target for the rancor of an outraged nation. But he also knew what he thought best for Britain, and he went ahead.

He would probably have succeeded, too, had it not been for the opposition of deGaulle. Trusting, as he could himself be trusted, Macmillan walked into the trap laid by the man he had helped so often.

In publication, Macmillan never fully recovered from this setback. Common Market membership had been a cornerstone of his platform during the elections of 1959. Without it, he began to rebuild his party.

That job was almost complete when the Profumo scandal broke. Shameless though Macmillan was, he and his government tottered under the blow, and there were few in Britain willing to believe either the Prime Minister or the government could survive, largely because Macmillan's personal integrity was so far beyond question. Doubts across the country were already allayed, and even the unanimity of the opposition were blunted before the Denning report straightened the official record of his administration.

Whether Macmillan had any chance of being asked, at the Conservative party conference, to retain the party leadership will never be known. There is no doubt that many of the delegates would have fought tooth and nail to prevent such a development; there it is equally certain that many Conservatives would have supported him. The matter, in any case, was settled by his illness.

Of some rulers, it can be said they conquered the world, or that they prevented the world from being conquered. Of Macmillan, perhaps, it can be said that he was the leader under whom Britain found its place in the post-war world. As the leader who forged the post-war world to make a place for Britain.

Unbloodied and unbowed Macmillan leaves his post, his escutcheon unblemished and his shield bright. Forced back to his goal-line by force of circumstances, he held his ground, throwing back the forces of scandal and politics and retaining the prestige so many would have liked to take from him.

A Rebel Against Science

An article in the Windsor Star describes the one-man war being carried on by a westerner against automation. A medium-high level executive, he refuses to be subservient to a machine.

Often, he gets cards with little holes punched in them, or little spots of magnetic ink, in codes understood by machines. He cancels these, printed request that they be not folded, stapled or otherwise rendered unpalatable to mechanical clerks. The rebel, according to the article, delights in punching extra holes, folding and stapling the cards. He considers it his right to have his business handled by people, so he makes sure the machines are unable to do it.

The attitude is attractive to many, in this age of impersonal beaurocracy. There is, after all, something frightening at the thought of the dead eye of a machine gazing at one's life history, written in magnetic ink, and deciding that one's account is overdrawn.

But with the flourishing growth of paper work in the modern world, the machines are the only way to handle it. Better the machine's dead but precise eyes than a flustered junior clerk, working with one eye on the next coffee break.

It is humiliating to practice economy when it is a matter of necessity rather than policy.—Brandon Sun.

Peeved P.M. Proves Human Will Be Real Party Boss Now

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It is a little difficult to believe, but the frankly astounded word coming out of the Liberal caucus is that Prime Minister Pearson, taking a sudden "hard line," has laid down the party law, alike to Backbench and Cabinet.

The new "tough guy" image of the amiable prime minister cracks the old political mirror in which "MPs," as his adherents like calling this Parliamentary charm merchant, was reflected as everybody's nomination of a "nice guy."

Turns out, and not before time, either, that the Old Pipsmat can be a party boss, too.

And the party boss, he is a hard-shelled Machtenuls King, kindly, courteous but steel-willed Louis Laurent, driving, demanding Diefenbaker, can be a real 10-minute egg.

The Liberal party, both backbench privates and cabinet captains, had got used to th easy, affable Mike, pass-the-buck leader, lamb in the fine diplomatic art of using the soft answer to turn away wrath.

He was politically easy to live with.

Comfortable as an old shoe.

Few had ever seen him get mad.

Now, there had been times he flushed an annoyed red and spoke a few words of regret, chosen with care, and went on his way. But who had ever seen him blow his top?

THE RIOT ACT

Well, the other day, swear still astonished witnesses, he did just that. Minister, Mike, wig as a lifetime of carefully controlling his emotions would let him.

Up from his chair behind the Cabinet table at the Liberal caucus meeting, and announced to the gaping gallery of MPs and Senators that he was their prime minister, for better and that things from now on were going to be run his way.

And as he left them open mouthed, he got it across that if anybody had any better ideas they had better leave voluntarily and with dignity before the caucus met, unceremoniously out on their ear.

It must have been ironic to the 20 prime ministers he had been facing dissension in the ranks and troubles in the Cabinet, to see Mike Pearson free and easy discipline as captain of the Liberal craft.

How profound circumstances were compelling him to run what is known as a tight ship.

The party, backbenchers in the Commons, since their resounding defeat, have been living away, in public and private alike, about the Cabinet in general, and about the ministers in particular being out of touch with what they know as the "political facts of life."

In short, they were howling, loud enough for all Parliament Hill to hear, that the Cabinet had been going far too much its own sweetly simple way and paying far too little heed to the elected representatives of the taxpayers, the rank and file Liberal MPs had to say.

INSULATED

The Cabinet was so deeply buried in the Ivory Tower as to have forgotten or even become uncaring about the voters.

Then, too, the backbenchers were feuding among themselves as the jockeying for position reached up even into the Cabinet level — about bilingualism and biculturalism.

Ministers and MPs from Quebec were screaming that the prime minister was going too slow and not far enough in accommodating French-Canada.

And MPs and ministers from Ontario were complaining — and they were in evidence gathered in the Ontario provincial election — that the Federal government was going too far too fast.

The prime minister knew, from seeing his party reduced to Conservative Leader Diefenbaker just what damage disunity, disillusion and disaffection within the party could do.

So he had to move fast to stamp it out.

Too, he was in trouble, as far as Cabinet relations were concerned, for exactly the opposite reason that John Diefenbaker had got into difficulties.

Died had run a strictly disciplined "one man band" in Cabinet affairs. They had done it Died's way or not at all. And when the Cabinet reached an impasse last Fall and Winter, it did nothing, was accused of inaction, and finally paralysis, and ended up in revolt leading to defeat.

The new prime minister was doing exactly the reverse. With Mike, it was everybody's show in the Cabinet. And did that cause trouble!

CABINET IN COMMITTEE

As an old Civil Servant he liked delegating authority, "leaving it," as he has been heard to term it, "to the experts."

The Conservatives have another name for its "passing the buck."

The prime minister leaned heavily on his "experts," such planners as Finance Minister Gordon who, in turn, leaned disastrously on his Bay Street budget ghost writers.

The PM gave a free-wheeling hand to Jack Gel of all political trades) Pickerzgill.

He allowed Defence Minister Hellyer to run Navy-Army-Air headquarters pretty much as a private club.

And perhaps, as politically serious as anything, he let Health Minister Judy LaMarsh needle the provincial premiers on pensions.

Then there was Tom Kent, the Government's $20,000 "consultant on everything," who can brain-trust dreaming up bright political ideas, and wielding more real power and influence with the prime minister than almost any cabinet minister.

It sometimes seemed, as the new minority government stumbled from crisis to crisis in these past six months, that the "experts" and specialists and brain-trusters were acted first and then remembered to tell the prime minister about it later—usually, of course, it was usually too late.

Well, that day, the prime minister has served firm notice on all concerned, is done. From the moment he laid down the party law at the Liberal caucus, it was clear there would be only one Boss, the "new" nice-natured-guy Mike Pearson. Things now could be different. And better.

"Last stop of the day, Mac, and I'm anxious to get home, so I'd appreciate it if you won't haggle."

Far off fields may look green and by the same token lakes in the western parts of the country may be attractive from a fishing standpoint, but if results are wanted, just "go down the Bay." At least that is the conclusion will be observed by four Belleville fishermen who on Thursday afternoon "went down the Bay" and brought home 19 nice bass, the catch weighing upwards of fifty pounds and the largest individual specimens tipping the scales at three and one-half pounds. The foursome who now lay claim to be Isaak Waltons of no mean ability were Chirles Trevarton, local hotel proprietor, Bill Kemp, Warren Jones and Everett Wood.

Although 18 building permits were issued at the city hall during August, the construction in Belleville dropped to a level considerably below that of the previous month. This month's building permits included the construction of four dwellings, with one sizable alterational and repair project being planned with the balance of the permits being for small alterational jobs and for repairs to existing buildings. The month's total building permits amounted to $13,810.

Cause of Sjogrens Disease Unknown to Med. Doctors

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have Sjogrens disease, practically over my entire body. I can't understand much about it from my doctor's description. It's really all Greek to me now. — Mrs. E. M.

It may continue to be Greek, but perhaps I can give you at least some enlightenment.

We understand many diseases quite well. Others we don't, because they are less common, and sometimes because of their inherently baffling nature, are not so well understood.

In this regard, Sjogren's disease is neither the most nor the least understood. It is typical of the unusual problems which aren't frequent but are seen often enough to be recognized.

Sjogren's disease is a progressive (sometimes complete lack) of secretion of moisture by the body. Dryness of the eyeballs, a deficiency in tears, is usually the first symptom to be noted. Then gritty sensations of the mouth, and, possible eventually a decrease in sweating. Mucus glands as well as tear and sweat glands may be affected.

The cause, as is so often the case in this diseases that are comparatively rare, is not known. One theory is that, since women of menopausal age are the ones likely to be affected, a disturbance in the endocrine or hormonal gland may be involved. Another theory is that the body does not make proper use of Vitamin A.

The condition, obviously, is annoying to the patient, so providing comfort is important.

A special effort should be made to keep the eyes moist and I take it for granted that your doctor had you bathe yours, with an appropriate solution.

Hormones are usually indicated, and the relief they bring appears quite good in many cases.

Some good results have been reported with the large use of doses of Vitamin A — and that supports the other theory, in part anyway.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please send me a copy of "Lost Secret of Reducing." I enclose 10 cents in coin and a self-addressed envelope. I am a diabetic. Will this work for me? — M. C.

Certainly it will work for you — and with diabetes, weight reduction is extremely important if you are too heavy.

Dear Dr. Molner: A friend, in good health, takes a complete enema every week and sometimes oftener. She says it's a tonic for leaving the stomach, is waste, even poisonous, and it is only another way to cleanse naturally. Can it do me more harm than good, in the long run, to follow this "internal cleansing" practice? — E. D. N.

Yes, it can do you more harm than good.

Your friend is incorrect in saying that food is "waste" after leaving the stomach. Only a small part of the food value is extracted in the stomach. Essential purpose is not to absorb, but to reduce the food to liquid form, mixed with some digestive juices.

Other digestive juices are added in the small intestine and the greater portion of food-absorption takes place in the intestine. What is left in the lower colon is, to be sure, largely waste but it is not "poisonous." That is not the way Nature intended. When a sufficient amount has accumulated, it may reflex stimulate the bowels to "move."

Constant removal by enema prevents this reflex from occurring, and the body normal rhythm becomes disturbed. The membrane of the lower bowel may become irritated by such tampering.

Count your calories the easy way! To receive a copy of my pamphlet, "The Calorie Chart," write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 128, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents in coin to cover handling and printing.

Shirt Packers Waste Makers

Calgary Herald

A gentleman in the English town of Bishop's Stortford, Hertfordshire, has raised a lone voice against the manufacturers of men's dress shirts.

Although admitting that the shirt is an indispensable part of any civilized male's wardrobe, the gentleman maintains that the acquisition of a new shirt imposes unnecessary inconvenience and irritation on the embattled purchaser.

In a letter published recently in The Spectator, he argues that to buy a shirt, "inflicts on the purchaser an imposing and ridiculous array of waste."

His breakdown of this so-called "trivia" includes the following: one gold embossed cellophane and tissue bag, one strip of shaped cardboard, one instruction leaflet containing two illustrations and more than 350 words), one gold embossed price ticket (carrying a duplicate), one celluloid stud-retainer, two pergum cuff-retaining clips, two tummy cuff links and "five diminutive pins (inserted in a manner ensuring maximum time to make their removal more difficult.)"

North Americans can sympathize with their fellow-sufferers across the Atlantic. Males on this continent (or at least ones, their wives) suffer similarly.

Such inconvenience can be all the more maddening if it occurs two minutes before the boss and his wife are due to arrive for dinner.

The maligned shirt manufacturer should, of course, be absolved from any malicious intent: it is obviously not his purpose to frustrate the hapless customer into an obstacle race as a prerequisite of trying on a new shirt.

It is probable that it takes as long to pick such a shirt as to make it from its accompanying trivia.

All this is simply a symbol of the unnecessary complexities of Twentieth Century Western civilization.

Vance Packard, the well-known U. S. sociologist once wrote a book on this very subject. He called it The Waste Makers.

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

BIRDS' SENSES

Much has been written about migration, and for the last fifty years there have been many experiments made to discover how birds find their way. We now know where they fly and when they fly, and for this knowing has been most valuable. But as to how they navigate, we are not so very much nearer a solution than were our scientists of 1916.

That is not to say that there have not been several theories: instinct, a sixth sense, built in radar or electromagnetic compass for every bird. However, what we really do know is that birds have very acute eyesight, and keen hearing.

TRAVEL BY NIGHT

The eyeballs of birds are a great deal bigger than ours in proportion to the size of the head, and their eyes are extremely sensitive to light. Most of our small birds do their travelling by night. We have ample proof of this. Looking through a telescope at migration time when there is a full moon many flocks of birds may be seen passing across the bright disk. And it is quite common to wake up of a morning and find a whole flock of warblers or other small birds in every nearby bush, stopping to rest and feed by daylight.

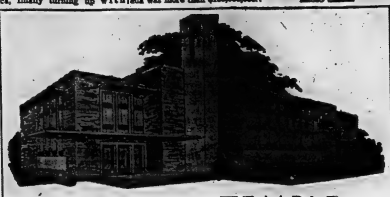
Daylight flies use their third, translucent eyelid, which can be drawn somewhat obliquely across the eye, to shield it from too brilliant a glare. The keen eyesight of an osprey or a gannet is demonstrated every time it drops from 75 or 100 feet down to the water, there to pounce on a small fish.

EXCELLENT HEARING

When the forest floor is covered with dead leaves the bird-watcher first of all must watch his step. The hearing of birds is as good as their sight. Any sudden movement is seen and any sudden noise is heard by them. It seems to be impossible to walk in dry leaves without making a crackling noise. Then off flies your bird.

Owls not only see well in semi-darkness but depend a great deal upon their hearing to locate their prey at night.

Though all this is true we are still greatly puzzled, and ask, "But how do young birds find their way from their birthplace to the winter holiday resort of the species?"



Golden plovers breed in the Arctic, and fly down our eastern seaboard to Argentina before the young are equipped for a long journey. Weeks later the immatures leave and migrate down the middle of North America, finally turning up with their relatives. We may well ask, "How do they find their way?" The answer must be, "We honestly do not know."

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

BIRDS' SENSES

Much has been written about migration, and for the last fifty years there have been many experiments made to discover how birds find their way. We now know where they fly and when they fly, and for this banding has been most valuable, but as to how they navigate, we are not so very much nearer a solution than were our scientists of 1914.

That is not to say that there have not been several theories: Instinct, a sixth sense, built in radar or electromagnetic compass for every bird. However, what we really do know is that birds have very acute eyesight, and keen hearing.

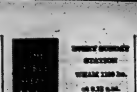
TRAVEL BY NIGHT

The eyeballs of birds are a great deal bigger than ours in proportion to the size of the head, and their eyes are extremely sensitive to light. Most of our small birds do their travelling by night. We have ample proof of this. Looking through a telescope at migration time when there is a full moon many flocks of birds may be seen passing across the bright disk. And it is quite common to wake up of a morning and find a whole flock of warblers or other small birds in every nearby bush, stopping to rest and feed by daylight.

Daylight fliers use their third, translucent eyelid, which can be drawn somewhat obliquely across the eye, to shield it from too brilliant a glare. The keen eyesight of an osprey or a gannet is demonstrated every time it drops from 75 or 100 feet down to the water, there to pounce on a small fish.

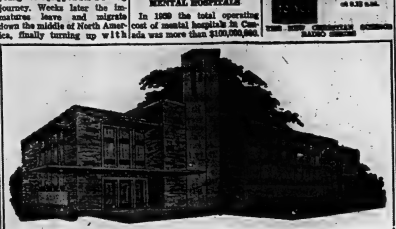
EXCELLENT HEARING

When the forest floor is covered with dead leaves the bird-watcher first of all must watch his step. The hearing of birds is as good as their sight. Any sudden movement is seen and any sudden noise is heard by them. It seems to be impossible to walk in dry leaves without making a crackling noise. Then off flies your bird.



Owls not only see well in semi-darkness but depend a great deal upon their hearing to locate their prey at night.

Though all this is true we are still greatly puzzled, and ask, "But how do young birds find their way from their birthplace to the winter holiday resort of their relatives. We may well ask, "How do they find their way?" The answer must be, "We honestly do not know."



Golden plovers breed in the Arctic, and fly down our eastern seaboard to Argentina before the young are equipped for a long journey. Weeks later the immatures leave and migrate down the middle of North America, finally turning up with the

Club Devoted To Collection Of Buttons

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — The worst thing you could tell a member of the Trillium Club is that she had lost her buttons. It would just about break her heart.

The club, formed in 1958 by Mrs. Pearl Lynch of Woodstock, is devoted to the collection of buttons.

Its members, from various Western Ontario communities, meet monthly to engage in button talk and learn more about their hobby.

"Some people think you have to be a bit odd to collect buttons," said one collector, "but actually it ranks second to stamps as a collecting hobby."

A number of the Trillium Club members—there are fewer than a dozen in all—have buttons dating back to the late 1700s and early 1800s. They're a variety of materials and depict such things as animals, fairytales, nursery rhymes, nativity scenes, wildlife and children.

The women, who travel to button exhibitions in nearby U.S. cities, make use of button reference books printed several years ago but no longer generally available.

Some have traced buttons back to what is believed to be the first button factory in Canada, a place in what was then Berlin, Ont., now Kitchener.

Some of the most precious buttons have been found on old charm strings that still turn up in family chests. These strings were worn by young girls in the 1880s. It was believed that each string could hold 999 buttons but if the 1,000th button got on the string by mistake the young girl was destined to become an old maid.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard McCambridge are pictured following their recent marriage in St. Charles Borromeo Church, Read. The bride is the former Elizabeth Jane Doran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Doran. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James McCambridge, Marysville.

McCAMBRIDGE — DORAN

A lovely wedding was solemnized recently in St. Charles Borromeo Church, Read, when Elizabeth Jane Doran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Doran, was united in marriage to Bernard McCambridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. James McCambridge, Marysville. Rev. J. Hamilton officiated at the double-ring ceremony before a background of palms and white gladioli and potted 'mums on the altar.

Rev. Gerald Bryne, cousin of the bride, said the Nuptial Mass with altar boys as servers. Peter and Paul Doran, the bride's brothers, and Rev. J. O'Neil in the sanctuary.

Mrs. Adrian Callaghan presided and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Clifford Hunt, in his rendition of "Ave Maria," "Mother at Thy Feet," and "Jesus, Jesus, Come to Me."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a bridal floor-length bell-shaped gown of white satin, covered with layers of net and lace. The bodice featured a scalloped neckline with long lace sleeves. Her shoulder length veil was held in place by a tiny scalloped crown of lace and pearls and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses with surrounding white feathery carnations and trailing ivy.

Miss Diane O'Ray, aunt of the bride, as maid of honor wore a knee length dress of rose nylon over taffeta with matching flower and veil as headdress and carried a colonial bouquet with white poms, centred by Azalea colored poms and white pet.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. R. B. Doran, Miss Mary Ellen McCambridge and Miss Charlene McCambridge were identical dresses of lime green nylon over taffeta. The bodices featured scoop neckline, short sleeves, pointed overlapping panels, full skirts, with matching flower and veil headdress. White poms centred with mint green poms and net and trailing ivy formed their crescent cascades.

The dainty little flower girls, Mary Ann and Jo Ann, sisters of the bride, wore short rose nylon dresses with matching headdresses and each carried a basket of azaleas and white poms.

Mr. Joseph McCambridge, was his brother's best man, while Mr. Benny Doran, Mr. Ambrose McCambridge, Mr. John Doran and Mr. Pat McCambridge were ushers.

The guests were welcomed to the reception by bride's mother in green brocade taffeta with white accessories, and corsage of white carnations, assisted by the bridegroom's mother in turquoise organza over taffeta in sheath style with scoop neckline and black accessories with corsage of white carnations.

Providing music for the dinner and entertainment in Read Parish Hall was Mr. John McGuinness and his orchestra.

Guests were present from Rochester, N.Y., Buffalo, N.Y., Boston, Mass., Kingston Toronto Chalk River, Marysville and Belleville.

For the wedding trip to Northern Ontario and Sault Ste. Marie the bride chose a turquoise woollen suit trimmed with mink, white accessories, and wore a gardenia corsage.

Previous to her marriage a presentation was made to the bride from her fellow employees at Northern Electric and a miscellaneous shower was given by Miss M. Farrell, Read.

Church Groups

ST. THOMAS W.A.

The regular business meeting of St. Thomas' W.A. was held in the parish house and Mrs. J. Watson presided in the absence of Mrs. H. Smith the president. The rector took the opening Prayers and Mrs. Watson's welcome was given Mrs. D. Mc-Dill and Mrs. W. VanTassell. Miss Austin, a lifelong member of St. George's Cathedral in Kingston is now residing in Belleville and she was given a special welcome.

Mrs. Watson thanked all who had assisted in any way with the rummage sale. The monthly Board letter was read; also several thank you notes, a letter from the John Milton Society was of considerable interest. This society provides books and records for the blind.

Mrs. Morton announced that the Little Helpers gathering is to be held in the chapel and parish house on October 30th. It is to be hoped that all members and their young children will attend.

The deanery meeting is being held in St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill, October 23rd.

President Mrs. H. Smith is sailing for England on October 16th.

Tea was served by the social convener.

A Lift for Living

Not Enough for Man to Feel He Must Act Upon Beliefs

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

Each year we in the United States celebrate Columbus Day on October 12th, for it was on that day in 1492 that Christopher Columbus discovered America. Other men before Columbus believed that the world must be round rather than flat and that the East might be reached by sailing westward. But Columbus was the first man known to act upon his belief. It was his action that we celebrate on Columbus Day and not his theory. The world always consecrates deeds rather than theories, for we intuitively know that all the idealistic beliefs heaped together are worth less than one courageous deed.

The bible warns against the substitutes we so easily make for good deeds. Good words, formulated creeds, charitable words, make convenient replacements for action. It is because we "talk a good line" than it is to live a good life. The First Epistle of John warns, "Little children, let us not love in word or speech but in deed. . ." Splendid deeds, rather than sweet words, make for real eloquence.

SORROW NOT ENOUGH

Good deeds bring worth, not sentimentalism easily becomes a substitute for shining deeds. We assume we have done something significant for people when we have merely felt sorry for them. G. B. Lewis, in his Screwtape Letters, pictures an old, experienced devil advising a young devil that he must let folks feel pity for others. That will give them a glow of good feeling. But the people from experiencing good feeling in good deeds, and soon they won't even entertain good feelings, so the crafty old devil advised. And it's devilishly true!

George Eliot, whose real name was Marian Evans Cross, was one of the most distinguished of English women novelists. She felt deeply about human misery and wrote about it, but she did nearly nothing to relieve the tragedy she saw around her. She let her talent in God diminished when she saw the world so full of heartache and hopelessness. George Eliot did little about it besides sitting at her desk and speculating on why evil should be allowed in the world. George MacDonald, the Scottish poet, novelist and clergyman, lived in Christ's day. He suffered more misery than George Eliot ever saw. Plagued by serious illness, at one time MacDonald could not speak or write for a period of three years. His son died. His parishioners boycotted him and would not pay his salary because his preaching was too simple and too direct for their taste. But he spent his days in compassionate helpfulness wherever he saw human need. George MacDonald declared, "Nothing makes one feel so strong as a call for help. MacDonald heard the calls. He answered.

In every community there are the George Eliots who see need, wax sentimental about it, and lament "Why is it permitted? Why doesn't somebody do something about it?" And nearly everywhere, thank Heaven, there is some George MacDonald who senses the same need and feels the same sentiment, and does something about it.

ANOTHER ADVANTAGE

Good deeds have another advantage over good feelings. Besides being more effectual in helping the world, our deeds can be controlled better than our emotions. There is hope here for those of us who regret our uncharitable feelings toward our neighbors. If our affections are less than we wish them to be, our deeds can be better than our emotions. Our feelings will not always comply with our commands, but our feet and hands and faces are more likely to follow orders. I cannot decide at 6:15 this evening I shall begin loving my neighbor as myself" and be certain that my emotions will obey my order. But at 6:15 my feet will obey my command to walk to my neighbor's house. My hand will do my bidding and knock at my neighbor's door. My lips will carry out my orders and form the words, "Hello, Charles! For some time I've been wanting to offer my help. . ."

And sooner or later, better feelings will follow in the wake of better behaviour. If the behaviour is persistent. Repeated kindly deeds will make for kindliness. Cheerful acts can lead to cheerfulness. "Love your enemies, for they turn which hate you." Jesus said. Love is the goal. Doing good is the way to reach it. By doing them good we come to love our neighbors.

When anyone puts a limit on what he will do he defines his limits what he can feel and what he can be. Act the way you would like to be and you will soon be the way you act.

By converting a belief into a deed, Christopher Columbus discovered a new world. By expressing our best thoughts and highest principles in helpful actions we can find a new life.

Women Not Getting Equal Break Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy was handed an 86-page report Friday crammed with statistics to argue that women still are not getting an equal break with men, despite laws saying they should.

"We'll try to do something about it," Kennedy promised the commission on the status of women.

The 13 women and 11 men—including five cabinet officers—who worked 23 months as the commission on the status of women said women especially are not getting a fair break with men in matters of jobs and equal pay.

They attributed this to foot-dragging by federal and state governments and failure of women to plug hard enough for full equality—and to vote.

The president said the report represented a legacy of the late Eleanor Roosevelt, who was the commission's first chairman. Friday was the 70th anniversary of Mrs. Roosevelt's birth.

The unanimous report contained 24 major recommendations and many minor ones, most of which were not new. Included was a recommendation that the federal tax deductions for child-care expenses of working mothers be increased.

Spoiled Darling Killed Love

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS — We've been married a year and have a tiny baby. And my husband doesn't love me. Simple, isn't it? But terrible, because I feel I can't live without his love.

It's all my fault. I'm spoiled. We fight, and I say terrible things I don't mean. Apologies are no good any more, as Vic has been so hurt by what I say that he remembers every mean thing. Even if he forgives and tries to forget, he reminds me that I'll only talk that way again. And I do.

He says I've always ridiculed his ideas. religion, everything. He says I've shown I don't need him for anything. I don't know what to do. I've never had to fight for his love before.

If I didn't remember how he used to look at me, and reach for me, it would be easier to accept this cold, indifferent stranger I'm living with now. God knows I do need him and love him with all my heart. — IN TURMOIL.

• • •

DEAR IN TURMOIL — You thought love couldn't be killed, didn't you? Well, now you know it can.

When your selfish love becomes a little more of the real thing — when the feelings of the person you love are more important than your own — you'll start cooking with gas.

You can change. But to make it in time will take plenty of discipline and determination. Real help in changing deep-set habits can be had by consulting a counsellor. Get in touch with the Children's Aid Society, 63 West Moira Street, Belleville, which counsels on family problems as well as when children are involved.

(The study of behavior and how to handle human situations is now a university course called social work. Let Doris, a graduate, help you!)

History, Beauty Along Rhine Make It Well Worth Seeing

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

ALONG THE RHINE, Germany — The history of the Rhine is almost the history of Western Europe, from the Romans to Managers Bridges. Every era has left its mark, and few tourists can escape the lure of the 12-hour cruise past sites and sights that for thousands of years have been fraught with significance.

Travel writers, unfortunately, do not always have 12 hours to spare, so we hopped aboard the Rhine Arrow of the German Federal Railroad for a kaleidoscopic version of the grand tour from Cologne to Mainz.

The German Federal Railroad, this is a good place to point out, offers a fine example, not only of how pleasant train travel can be in the jet age, but also how successful railroading can be.

The Rhine Arrow is only one of many crack trains on this and other routes throughout Germany, and is part of the remarkable Trans Europe Express system that brilliantly shows how countries can cooperate when they want to.

BEST OF THE LOT

Nearly all European railroads are fast, safe and comfortable (at least in first class) but the Germans are probably the best of the lot. They operate 34,000 — that's right, 34,000 — trains a day, one every three minutes, and carry 4,000,000 passengers. This is four times heavier than the traffic on all U. S. railroads combined, and West Germany is one-thirtieth the size of the United States.

First class amenities include the cozy six-seat compartments featured in all spy movies, but not always equipped with beautiful girls with long black hair. Equipment does, however, include ingeniously adjustable seats for stretching out, swing-away tables, reading lights, on the walls, and huge picture windows that actually open (there's a practical reason for these: it's the best way to get your bags in and out). Trains like the Rhine Arrow also have extensive wine "cellars" and a wine car (with wine barrels for bar stools) and fine dining facilities where a steak dinner costs only a little more than a sandwich on the Penny or Santa Fe.

But of all, the scenery along the Rhine is better than Cheerama, an ever-changing panorama of castles, vineyards and villages, each with its own story. Anyone who brings a good book on this run is wasting his fare.

BONN, THE CAPITAL

We boarded at Bonn, 20 miles downstream, because the tracks run inland from Cologne. Bonn is about as un-capitalike a capital as there is in a major country of the world. In Berlin last year we saw the wreckage of Hitler's coarse gray government buildings, shattered monuments to the vain glory that was Germany. Bonn gently shows the other side of the coin of German character. Government buildings are modern and simple, taking a modest back seat to the impressive medieval structures of the university and birthplace of Beethoven.

But it is the Rhine that strikes notes of awe in the sightseer. From Cologne to Mainz, the traffic is staggering: Barges and steamers with the standards of half the countries of Western Europe offer graphic evidence that the Rhine is still a major channel of commerce. Resorts like Bad Godesberg and Konigswinter dot the shores. Remagen, where the Germans failed to blow up a key bridge in World War II and thereby speeded their downfall. Strategic Koblenz, a Roman bastion in 9 B.C., and still so important a target in World War II that it was almost completely destroyed. Its fortified walls still stand.

Purple church towers with onion domes mark villages of half-timbered homes with ramshackle shingles, black slate roofs, and bright flower boxes. Steep terraced vineyards and fruit orchards slope to the banks each topped by its own chalet-farm house. Occasionally the massive chateau of a spa pokes out of the landscape. This time of year, the turning autumn leaves and bright sun paint the scenes in rainbows.

IMPRESSIVE CASTLES

Most impressive of all are the famed castles on the Rhine, anachronisms of crumbling stone that rise into view like flashbacks atop every odd peak and around each unexpected bend. Astride the most famous and treacherous bend of all is the Loreley of the seven echoes. This legend-haunted rock rises nearly 400 feet straight up from the water. The storied Nibelung en treasure is said to lie hidden here, and from the rock a siren was believed to lure sailors to their death.

Each castle is different and has its own story. The beautifully preserved turrets of Marksburg castle today house a fine collection of old weapons. Near Kamp, the "Enemy Brother" castles face each other. At Pfalz the 600-year-old towers of what may have been the world's first river toll station rise menacingly from the river. Dominating the seven hills of Das Siebengebirge is the ruin of Drachenfels, source of the Siegfried Saga.

Complaint From Lousy Loser Calls for Blast From Ann

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I would like to comment on the problem of class elections. Recently we had an election at our high school. Petitions were circulated for signatures. Then the students of each class voted for president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, student council representatives, and members of the executive committee.

Who was elected. The same bunch as last year — the cutest girls, the best looking fellows, the sharpest dressers and the kids from the richest families.

These kids always win the elections and don't deserve it. I know because I've tried to work with them (decorating the halls for dances and stuff like that) and they are the biggest goof-offs of all.

Please print my letter for the benefit of kids who elect leaders who have no leadership qualifications. — NOT ELECTED.

DEAR NOT — Your letter sounds like a bleat from a lousy loser.

I've met a good many high school office holders these past several years and they didn't look like goof-offs to me. Almost invariably they were attractive, but they were also excellent students, and extremely well-mannered. (If I'm wrong kids, please tell me.)

DEAR ANN — I am a young woman, 29, married and have four children. We all get along fine.

Recently my mother's youngest brother passed away. Mom was very close to this brother and she is shattered with grief over his death. In a week mom will be visiting us for several days. She feels a change of scenery might do her good.

How shall we treat her? Should be encourage her to talk about her brother? Or would it be best if we changed the subject and tried to turn the conversation to more cheerful things? I hope you don't think this question is too silly to print. Thank you. — MRS. U. N. C.

DEAR U. N. C. — There is no rigid rule for dealing with people who are suffering from grief. It's best to play it by ear.

If your mother wants to talk about her brother, listen. Your conversation however, should be steered along generally cheerful lines.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Canada Intends

are reached which will start large-scale new orders rolling to the U.S. He said the first major orders are unlikely to be placed before 1964.

Hellyer said he and McNamara touched briefly on world trouble spots, including the current situation in Berlin which the Canadian minister described as "tricky and difficult." Generally, he found that Canada-U.S. differences on defence matters, which had grown to critical proportions under the previous Canadian administration, now had largely disappeared.

NEED NEW PLANES

Asked what new Canadian orders might be placed in the U.S. the minister noted that Canada's present interceptor planes eventually will have to be replaced, possibly by a more flexible type of aircraft that could be used for a variety of purposes.

He noted that the U.S. is proceeding with development of the high-speed TFX experimental fighter and said this is the kind of plane Canada may want to acquire.

As for the Canadian Caribou program, Hellyer noted that U.S. opposition to this program comes mainly from Senator Richard Russell, a Democrat from Georgia, home of Lockheed C-130 aircraft production. Russell wants the Pentagon to buy more C-130 planes instead of the Caribou but Hellyer indicated this could work both ways.

Canada has purchased Lockheed planes in the past and may need more in the future. He hinted that Russell's opposition to Canadian aircraft might outlaff Canada's purchases of Lockheed planes.

GIVES SUMMARY

On other points, Hellyer said:

1. The Canadian government has already made clear it will not participate in the proposed North Atlantic sea-borne nuclear force.

2. There are no nuclear warheads in Canada at the present time, either at Canadian or American bases north of the border. But it would not be long before some are shipped into Canada.

3. No decision has yet been reached to make the semi-automatic ground environment station at North Bay an alternative to the main North American air defence headquarters at Colorado Springs, Colo.

4. The question of whether Canada will obtain nuclear submarines is still in the hypothetical stage. Canada now is studying its possible future role in anti-submarine defence.

to State Secretary Dean Rusk and to the White House, setting the stage for today's telephone call to Mr. Kennedy.

In the Commons Mr. Pearson appealed for responsible action in Canada and the United States to resolve quickly the "serious difficulties that have persisted for much too long in the Canadian maratime industry."

Opposition Leader Deifenbaker said Canadians are indignant at the "unwarranted affront" to Parliament by the U.S. statements.

The Commons went into a rare Friday night sitting to continue debate on details of the trusteeship measure, based on the recommendations of Mr. Justice T. G. Norris who blamed the SIU and Mr. Banks, the American-born president, for violence, terror and strife in the marine industry.

TERM REDUCED

As the trusteeship bill went through the Commons' mill the government, in response to opposition pressure, amended the term of the proposed trusteeship to three years from five years, with the proviso that Parliament could extend it if necessary.

Labor Minister MacEachern said the measure has teet-fines of $10,000 or two-year jail terms —to deal with any ship-owner convicted of impeding the work of the trustees.

He was replying to T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, who wanted assurance that shipowners would not be allowed to connive with the SIU or break the law—as, he said, they had not done in the past.

Several NDP members said the government should have cracked down on shipping companies, especially Canada Steamship Lines, for their support of the SIU in flouting the law.

Mr. MacEachen replied that the Norris report criticized some shipping companies, particularly CSL, biggest Canadian line on the Great Lakes, but made no proposals for actions against them.

Despite the collusion uncovered by the judge, Mr. MacEachen said, he assumed that Mr. Justice Norris concluded that the heart of the problem was the SIU.

The departmental supply ship Gannet, escorted by the MacDonald, was badly damaged by ice and its cargo had to be transferred to another ship.

The depot ship Nanook, part of a convoy headed for Resolute on Cornwallis Island, became stuck in the ice in Lancaster Sound between Baffin and Devon islands.

The Nanook, which was towed to Resolute by the McLean, had lost her propellers and rudder and had sprung a number of leaks in her plates.

During the supply mission along the east coast of Baffin Island the C. D. Howe was stuck in the ice for five days. This ship still is attempting to complete its mission along this coast and is not expected to return to Quebec City until late this month. Usually the C. D. The supply ship, Elder ran aground in a gale on the west coast of Hudson Bay after delivering oil to Whale Cove. The vessel was towed to Churchill by the icebreakers McLean and Simon Fraser for repairs. It now is being towed to Quebec for further repairs.

The Golden Years

Amount of 'Retirement Riches' May Come as Surprise to You

By THOMAS COLLINS

A man who has been making around $150 a week is coming up for retirement January 1st, and his wife has been driving him crazy.

They will get a pension of $357 a month, she has been telling him. And on this pittance, which is about a fourth of what they have been getting, they will surely starve.

The wife became so exercised about the matter that she wrote her husband's company asking how it dared to force a faithful employee into retirement without enough money to live on.

Corporations are a little sensitive about this sort of thing. So a V. P. in her husband's company told a bright boy in the accounting department to look into the case. And this is what he found (which you may use as a pattern before your wife writes the boss a nasty letter):

Mr. Nest-Feather was going into retirement with his home free of mortgage. The home was in good shape, and it was agreed that if he and his wife rented quarters as good they would pay $150 a month for them. So the Bright Boy put down $50 a month for upkeep, taxes, etc., and recorded $100 a month on the credit side of the couple's ledger.

He then recorded $15 a month for the health and hospital insurance the company gave all retiring employees, (not as good as some policies you can buy, but good).

COST OF WORKING

Next, with figures supplied by the husband and wife, he figured how much money it was costing the husband to work. He came up with $143.40 a month. This included $93 income tax, $30 for transportation and lunches, $20 for clothes, and the remainder for special tax, razor blades, haircuts, donations at the office, etc.

On the credit side he now had the couple up to an income — or what was equivalent to an income — of $227.40 a month.

He added the pensions for $357 more, or a total now of $314.40 a month.

The man had some long-time life insurance policies, now paid up and with a cash value of $7,000. It was suggested that the wife would get $130 a month for life in case her husband died — part of the pension her husband had set aside for her. She would not have an acute need for the insurance. So if the $7,000 cash were taken and placed in an insured savings and loan or bank at 4 percent interest it would produce another $23 a month. (The couple also could buy a monthly annuity with it.)

A final $30 a month could be had if the couple took their savings—$2,000 in bonds — and put them also in an insured account at 4 percent.

The grand total was now $557.40 per month. Or $6,688.80 a year. Or slightly better than $128 a week.

The wife was happy.

FAIRLY TYPICAL

These figures, which naturally vary with couples and with jobs, are fairly typical and are interesting because they emphasize a vital thing about retirement incomes that most people don't figure — that there is more to the income than the $1 bills you get your hands on. Particularly in the savings from the cost of holding a job and in the house that the job, over the years, has bought.

The low cash income that will be had in retirement continues to scare the daylights out of many 65-year-old men and 63-year-old wives. It wouldn't if more of them would take this bright boy's formula, a sharp pencil, and an hour around the dining room table some night figuring it out.

Many people are going into retirement now with almost as much real income as they had on the job.

5 Russian Agriculturalists Tour Cheese Plant in City, Entertained at Luncheon

No tests were banned, Thursday and yesterday, when a five man Russian meat and milk industry delegation came to Belleville. The Russians, who toured the Selby cheese factory north of Napanee, the Black Diamond plant in Belleville and the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board warehouse in Belleville, touched, tasted, smelled and otherwise tested everything they saw.

Included in yesterday's activities was a luncheon laid on by the Black Diamond people for the delegates and civic officials, and Black Diamond and Ontario Cheese Producers executives.

MOVE TO TORONTO

The five-man delegation included two industrial building experts, specialists in dairy and cheese factory buildings, one dairy expert and two meat experts. The group arrived in Montreal Oct. 2, and came to Belleville Thursday. Yesterday, they went on to Toronto, where they will stay about four days. The route from there will take them to Guelph, Kitchener, Ottawa and back to Montreal, about 700 miles.

Hanover Prepares for Good Holiday as Contract to End Long Strike Approved

HANOVER, Ont. (CP)—This community of 4,500 will celebrate one of its happiest Thanksgivings as a result of Friday night's union ratification of a 30-month work contract to end a 4½-month violence-marred strike at the Hanover Kitchens (Canada) Limited plant here.

The contract settlement, reached during union-management negotiations this week in Toronto, was approved by the plant's 65 striking employees at a closed meeting.

"It's one of the happiest Thanksgivings we've ever had," said Mayor Mrs. William Buegias. "Everything looks good. There's an entirely different feeling in the town."

"This contract gave me the best satisfaction I've had in 15 years," commented H. Landon Ladd, eastern Canadian director of the International Woodworkers of America. The strikers were certified Feb. 5 as an IWA local.

"I'm always glad when strikes are over," was the reaction of A. E. Starke, company vice-president and general manager.

The strike started May 21 when the employees walked off their jobs, complaining of a breakdown in negotiations for their first contract.

MARRED BY VIOLENCE

Tension grew over the months, bursting into violence about two weeks ago. Stones and tomatoes were hurled at cars; tires were slashed. Three non-union men on their way to work were ambushed and beaten. Arrests were made on charges of assault and, in other cases, of creating a disturbance and intimidation.

Up to 47 provincial police were patrolling the town, located 25 miles south of Owen Sound, at one point.

Mr. Ladd said the strikers would return to work at the plant Tuesday.

He did not say how many nor did he know what would happen to about 40 non-union men hired to replace workers when they struck.

However, Mr. Starke said "there's room enough for everyone" at the plant," indicating that the non-union men will keep their jobs.

INTRODUCE CHECKOFFS

Under the terms of the contract, compulsory checkoff dues will be introduced Oct. 10, 1964. This was one of the union demands management originally had balked at.

Other major terms agreed upon were:

1. An immediate across-the-board wage increase averaging 14 cents hourly, with another 10 per cent increase in hourly rates Oct. 10, 1964. The wage package will amount to 35 cents an hour more during the length of the contract.

2. A 40-hour work week effective immediately, dropping to 45 hours in one year. Mr Ladd said women have been working 45-50 hours weekly.

3. Two weeks vacation with pay after five years. Six statutory holidays with pay this year and eight the next year.

The contract also calls for 10-minute rest periods daily, as well as safety and health programs.

Start Probe Into Possible Funds Misuse

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Upper Thames River Conservation Authority has launched an investigation into the possible misuse of funds.

Authority Chairman Gordon Pittock of Ingersoll would only say Friday night that an investigation had been called and that it might take three weeks to complete.

Meanwhile, the Sydenham Valley Conservation Authority and the Lower Thames Valley Conservation Authority have called a joint emergency meeting of their executives.

It is expected the meeting, to be held Oct. 18 at Wardsville, will discuss the misuse of public funds.

Senior officials of these two authorities were not available for comment Friday night.

However, $19,000 was reported to be involved in the case of the Sydenham and Lower Thames authorities.

Bond Markets Active and Prices Higher

By The Canadian Press

Trading was active and prices were slightly higher on Canadian bond markets this week.

Long-term government issues showed gains of up to ⅝ point and short-term issues advanced in a 10-to20-cent range.

Day-to-day money was in good supply and closed Friday at 2¾ per cent compared with 3% per cent last week.

On the municipal market Metropolitan Toronto entered the market with an issue of about $31,000,000, most of which were 20-year 5¼ per cent debentures offered at $96 to yield 5.58 per cent. The issue was quickly subscribed and closed at a premium.

Provincial and corporate issues were also in demand with offerings becoming scarce, particularly in high coupon issues.

Fine Weather For Holiday Is Predicted

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario residents can expect warm sunny weather for a fihal fling at resort areas to close up summer outings during the Thanksgiving weekend.

The weather office predicted Friday that above-normal temperatures and clear skies will prevail throughout the province for the three days.

Ontario has enjoyed unusually warm temperatures during the last few weeks, and weathermen say there is no end in sight.

Slightly cooler air moved into southern Ontario Friday night to bring forecast high temperatures of about 68 degrees today, normal for the season.

By tonight, however, a warming trend is expected to bring temperatures in the mid-60's for Sunday and Monday. Highs of about 65 degrees are forecast for all three days in Northern Ontario.

Dept. Takes Over Wildlife Management

GALT (CP)— The Grand River Conservation Commission has approved a 40-year agreement under which the Ontario lands and forests department will take over wildlife management on the 8,000-acre Luther marsh area in Wellington County.

The agreement was suggested several months ago by Lands and Forests Minister Roberts.

The commission plans to purchase an undisclosed amount of land surrounding the area, about four of which is open water at present.

The commission will continue to manage forested parts of the area and control Lake Luther water levels.

DELAY MEMORIAL

OTTAWA (CP) — Veterans Minister Teillet said Friday he has asked the cabinet to re-examine a decision to go ahead with a $1,500,000 veterans' memorial on Nepean Point overlooking the Ottawa River near the Parliament Buildings.

Disaster Area Sealed Off As District Sprayed With Epidemic Disinfectant

BELLUNO, Italy (AP) — The vast Valont dam disaster area was sealed off today as helicopters sprayed chlorine disinfectant to prevent the outbreak of epidemics.

Local officials warned of the possibilities of another massive landslide, similar to the one that plunged into the dam from Mount Toc last Wednesday and sent a cascade of water down the alpine valley, causing an estimated 3,000 deaths.

Since Wednesday, rocks and earth have tumbled down Mount Toc in small landslides, keeping fears of new major avalanches alive.

Rescue workers continued digging mass graves for the 1,700 bodies recovered in what has been recorded as modern Italy's worst natural disaster.

Another 1,300 persons are believed to be buried under the sea of mud that marks an area once dotted by picturesque villages.

While thousands of Italian army troops and volunteers dug feverishly, legislators and survivors charged that authorities had failed to heed warnings that landslides could unleash a catastrophic flood from the artificial lake.

The government ordered an investigation and there was a clamor for a parliamentary investigation that likely would have repercussions in Italy's next government, expected to be launched next month.

Mass graves were dug hurriedly three miles from Langarone to head off the possibilities of an epidemic. All persons in the area were ordered inoculated.

Squads armed with flame throwers moved through the desolated Alpine valley, destroying carcasses of farm animals.

Adding to the urgency was the fear among Belluno officials that another landslide could occur and send another wall of water over the 873-foot dam, the third highest in the world. The dam was slightly damaged in last Wednesday's tragedy and millions of tons of water still remain in it.

NATION MOURNS

The nation was in deep mourning but expressions of anger over the catastrophe mounted throughout the country.

Mauro Scoccimarro, president of a Communist group in the Italian Senate, said there was evidence that engineers at the dam had telephoned national police to warn of trouble an hour before the disaster.

He noted that the Communist newspaper L'Unita in Rome had been taken to court two years ago on charges of publishing false news that the dam was in a geologically dangerous area. The newspaper was acquitted.

Giacomo Corona, a Christian Democrat leader, said the mayor of Erto, a stricken community on the hillside above the reservoir, had warned residents six days before the disaster against going near the lake because slides might cause dangerous waves.

The Belluno provincial council said its turn over to government investigators all local documents to help ascertain any blame.

Among the documents was a motion of two years ago reporting that a landslide at Mount Toc at that time had caused serious concern among the population."

S. A. Stands in Deeper Isolation in UN Following Debate on Racial Policies

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — South Africa stood in even deeper isolation in the United Nations today following two days of debate on her racial policies.

Not a single country came to South Africa's defence Thursday as the General Assembly voted overwhelmingly on a new censure motion.

But Western delegates were clearly unhappy about some implications of the resolution—and also with the way the measure was handled by its 55 Afro-Asian sponsors.

Most of the Western bloc, Canada included abstained when the resolution cleared the assembly's special political committee Friday, only a few hours after it was circulated.

But the same countries gave it their support Friday as a vote of 106 to 1 was recorded—the biggest margin in a long series of resolutions on South Africa.

PORTUGAL ABSENT

Portugal, normally the stoutest defender of South Africa, stayed away. Spain, Honduras and Paraguay also were absent.

The resolution condemned South Africa for ignoring "repeated resolutions . . . calling for an end to the repression of persons practising apartheid."

It also called for South Africa to "abandon the arbitrary trials now in progress" and to free all persons imprisoned for opposing the race separation policy.

Canada did not join in the debate but External Affairs Minister Martin, in a statement issued after he left Ottawa, said Canada "cannot refrain" from joining in the condemnation of apartheid.

EXPLAINS STAND

He said Canada had abstained in the committee "because it was suddenly confronted by a resolution without sufficient time for due consideration and evaluation."

South Africa's Hildgaard Muller said the assembly was violating the charter by attempting to interfere with his country's judicial processes.

The assembly's budgetary committee meanwhile voted to appropriate $15,000,000 for the UN Congo force, thus assuring its continuation until the middle of next year.

The vote was 68 to 11 with 18 abstentions—enough to guarantee passage through the assembly early next week.

Canada voted for the resolution, with most of the Western group. The Soviet bloc was solidly against it, while a number of Arab and Latin American countries abstained.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The Belleville District Fish and Game Club is showing much concern and not a little alarm over consistent reports of damage to private property by gun-bend hunters who possess little sportsmanship and less concern for the rights and ownership of others.

An official of the F. and G. Club comes out flatly with the statement that "malicious, wilful damage to private property constitutes one of the most ugly reports of stupid inane acts come to our attention—and we are going to do something about it."

Never in the history of hunting are so few doing so much to ruin the sport for so many.

Those trigger-happy numbskulls who no doubt, in many cases aided and abetted by "Dutch courage," go around wilfully destroying fences and other handmade things, loosing bullets at cattle and horses, in one case "routed a cow," should, if apprehended, be deprived of hunting privileges for life, not to mention the heavy touch of the arm of the law.

The wonder of it is that during their depredations serious accidents to humans have not occurred. Perhaps if they shot up a few of their destruction-wacky confreres, it would bring them to their senses or falling that a realization of the foolhardiness of their actions.

With the popularity of hunting increasing yearly, particularly among the younger fellows, the nonsensical acts of these people are having a far-reaching effect on the sport.

Notices of townships being closed to hunting and local properties "posted" are becoming more frequent. It would appear the skilled-headed "sportsmen" are doing everything possible to bring about an end to the once happy state of hunting affairs in this district.

For the most part, a man may roam the fields at will without fear of angry outbursts from the owner concerned. But when brainless "triggers" start shooting and wielding knives and wrecking property what is he expected to do, invite them in for dinner and a drink before finishing their game?

As Fish and Game officials point out, unless something is done to forcibly prevent this wanton destruction from continuing, the privilege of hunting on private property is doomed.

And the Association intends to do something about it. With this in mind the club executive plans to ask the membership at the October meeting Tuesday night at Club Canada, to authorize the posting of a $100 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person found guilty of committing damage to private property while engaged in the act of hunting in the townships of Sidney, Thurlow, Tyendinaga and Ameliasburg.

It is believed that a lot of the depredations are being committed by out-of-town so-called hunters, and as one source of information put it "shoot up" cattle on a farm in Ameliasburg. On another occasion one received a bullet in the leg from the irate property owner. A few inches higher and it would have blown his brains out.

Charles Duesberry, one of Canada's outstanding woodcarvers (no relation) will be the special guest at the F. and G. meeting Tuesday night. There will be special films with the big prize a handsome Winchester carbine. Better be on hand.

Gets Three In Hornets Second Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lowell MacDonald is looking for a quick promotion to the National Hockey League.

The Thorburn, N.S., resident divided his time between Detroit Red Wings of the NHL and Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League last year.

He scored two goals and an assist in 26 games with the Wings and 30 goals and 18 assists in 41 games with Hornets.

In the two games Hornets have played this year, MacDonald has scored four goals and three assists.

Friday night, his three goals propelled Hornets to a 5-3 win over Springfield Indians.

In the other game Friday night, Pierre Brillant scored two third-period goals as Providence Reds defeated Quebec Aces 6-2.

MacDonald's last two goals against Springfield were the tying and winning markers. Hank Ciesla and Ed Joyal scored the other two.

Springfield scorers were Randy Miller, Gary Bergman and Jim Anderson.

At Providence, Reds took a 2-0 lead in the second period on goals by Norm Corcoran and Harry Ottenbrite, but Aces tied it on goals by Wayne Hicks and Ron Schiefort early in the third. Bob Beckett and Moe Bartoli were the other scorers for Providence.

Looks Like "Bad Man" Has Reformed ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Howie Young's Halo Still In Place

By MARVEN MOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Could it be that Howie Young has really reformed?

That's two games now and the National Hockey League officials have yet to catch Howie doing something he shouldn't be doing.

Last year Howie set an all-time NHL record of 272 minutes in penalties as a member of the defence corps of Detroit Red Wings.

That's more than 4½ full games of meditation time and at that Howie missed six games of the 70-game schedule.

In the off-season the crew-cut 26-year-old problem boy was shunted off to Chicago Black Hawks.

In his first two games Young has shown he is making a stab at rehabilitation. He also kept his nose clean through Chicago's exhibition schedule.

Young and his mates are idle along with the Red Wings tonight, while activity is centred in Toronto and Montreal.

WILL START GAME

Prime Minister Pearson, a baseball player in his youth, is to officiate at a ceremonial faceoff in Toronto when the Leafs open their schedule against Boston Bruins.

In Montreal, the Canadiens meet New York Rangers for the first time this season and they'll be watching the goalies, Montreal's Gump Worsley and Jacques Plante of New York.

They were the principals in a seven-player swap between the clubs last June.

The Rangers will be missing defenceman Doug Harvey, working himself into shape with St. Paul of the Central Professional League because business pressures kept him from the New York training camp.

Red Sullivan, the New York coach, said he expects to have Harvey back Wednesday night for the club's home opener against the Red Wings.

Two more games are on tap Sunday night, Toronto at Chicago and Boston in Detroit.

Galt Adds Kennedy To Roster

GALT (CP) — Galt Hornets added centre Bill Kennedy to their Ontario Hockey Association senior team roster as they completed their first week of training camp.

Kennedy, former Toronto Marlboro junior and University of Toronto player, was with Kitchener-Waterloo Tigers seniors part of last year. He scored 20 points, seven of them goals, in 21 games.

The first year seniors, George Bardwell from Waterloo Siskins and Ian Slater from Woodbridge Dodgers, also signed pacts. Galt has nine players under contract including goalie Dave Snyder, defenceman Ivan Tennant and forwards Joe Hogan, Jim Leclair, Bob Seager and Pete Kowalchuk.

Refused To Meet Chuvalo

Cassius Is Rapped On Knuckles

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Cassius Clay was rapped on the knuckles Friday for refusing to meet Toronto heavyweight George Chuvalo after signing a document of intent.

Clay also was told he must keep active in the ring if he is to retain his rating as the No. 1 challenger for Sonny Liston's heavyweight title.

The warning came from Arch Hindman, executive secretary of the World Boxing Association, who attended a hearing called by Kentucky boxing commissioner Bob Evans.

Evans acted after Louisville promoter Bill Ring complained that Clay declined to meet Chuvalo in a 10-round televised fight here on Nov. 4.

Clay signed the document of intent to fight the winner of the Chuvalo-Mike DeJohn bout here two weeks ago but changed his mind later. "Chuvalo butts and fights inside. I could get an eye injury. Chuvalo is a dirty fighter," Clay said.

SEES BREACH

Evans said: "There has been a breach of ethics on Clay's part and that he has a moral obligation to fight Chuvalo. I'm highly disappointed in Clay because of his refusal to go through with this bout because he had led me to believe that he wanted the people of Louisville and Kentucky to see him fight."

The commissioner said the Louisville heavyweight, for the good of his future, should keep active to be ready if and when he gets a chance at Liston. It is also important for Clay to keep active to hold on to his No. 1 rating."

Esks Face Hard Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Edmonton Eskimos' victories have been anything but plentiful this year and the traditional Thanksgiving Day weekend offers them little more to be thankful for.

The once-overpowering Western Football Conference club faces the top two clubs in the Eastern Football Conference in a pair of interlocking games.

Alfred Sleep in the WFC, tied with a 2-0 record, Eskimos meet Frank Clair's surprising Ottawa Rough Riders at the national capital today and then face Hamilton Tiger - Cats at Hamilton Monday.

Ottawa and Hamilton have identical 5-4 records and share first place in the EFC, two points in front of Montreal Alouettes.

In other action in the East, Toronto Argonauts face eliminition from the playoffs, meeting the Alouettes in Montreal Sunday. An Alouette win would seal Argonauts fourth-place finish for the second year in a row.

Will Try For Winter Olympics

TORONTO (CP) — Jim Worrall, chairman of Canada's Olympic Association, said Friday he will take the first steps next week toward landing the winter Olympic Games of 1968 for Banff, Alta.

He said he will be in Baden-Baden, Germany, when the International Olympic Committee listens to applications for the 1968 summer games from representatives of Detroit, Lyons, France, Buenos Aires, Argentina, and Mexico City, Mexico.

"Any talks next week about the 1968 winter games will be purely informal," Worrall said in an interview. "But any time the opportunity presents itself, I will make a pitch to bring the games to Banff."

The decision on the site of the winter games will not be made until the start of the 1964 winter games next February at Innsbruck, Austria.

Giants' Job, Stop Jimmy Brown

NEW YORK (AP) — Ho Lo Mo Ko sounds like a speeding locomotive, and that's just about what they're going to have to stop.

Ho Lo Mo Ko are the nicknames of the defensive front four of New York Giants—Andy Robustelli, John Lovetere, Dick Modzelewski and Jim Katcavage, who had to conform since "kat don't go." They're "t the toughest assignment on Sunday's pro football program: Stop Jimmy Brown.

The two forces will meet at Yankee Stadium, where Brown and Cleveland Browns will be trying to maintain their unbeaten record and move two games up on the defending champion Giants in the battle for the National Football League's Eastern Conference title.

Brown has rushed for 864 yards in four games—more than the entire Giants' backfield—and is ahead of his own record pace of 1958, when he amassed 1,527 yards. He also has moved to within 173 yards of Joe Perry's all-time NFL career mark of 8,296.

While Brown and the Browns are banging heads with Ho Lo Mo Ko and Co., the NFL's only other undefeated team, Chicago Bears will be at Los Angeles trying to hold onto their one-game Western Conference lead over league champion Green Bay Packers, who will be at Minnesota.

Pittsburgh is at St. Louis, Detroit at Dallas, Philadelphia at Washington and San Francisco at Baltimore on the full seven-game program.

The American League has a three - game Sunday schedule with the Eastern Division pacesetting New York Jets facing the Western Division leading San Diego Chargers on the west coast, Buffalo at Kansas City and Houston at Denver.

The AFL weekend program got under way Friday night with Boston's defence forcing two fumbles that led to scores and Babe Parilli passing for a pair of touchdowns in a 20-14 victory over Oakland.

Parilli's 15-yard touchdown pass to rookie Tom Neuman in the fourth quarter was the clincher. He also passed 56 yards to Jim Colclough for a touchdown.

Riders Name Jackson, Gaines

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders Friday nominated quarterback Russ Jackson and defensive halfback Gene Gaines for the 1963 Jeff Russel Memorial Trophy.

The trophy is awarded annually to the Eastern Conference Football player best combining clean play, sportsmanship, will to win and promotion of team spirit.

Americans Lead Ryder Cup Matches

Palmer Beaten

By MIKE BARRON

ATLANTA (AP) — "We're over the hump now," said a jubilant Arnold Palmer, captain of the United States team, as he led his team into the second phase of the Ryder Cup golf series cushioned by a fat 6-3 lead over the British.

Eight rounds of four - ball matches were scheduled today after the first day's alternate shot foursomes at East Lake Club.

"I'd rather play all the way by myself," Palmer said, when asked how he liked the alternate shot routine. The innovation was added to the matches for the first time this year.

British captain John Fallon naturally was disappointed at his team's afternoon showing Friday.

The Britons tied the Yanks 2-2 in the morning round, and startled the Americans by beating Palmer in the first match.

Palmer attributed his team's spotty morning showing to stage fright.

BENCHES PARTNER

Palmer benched his morning partner, 27-year-old Johnny Pott of Cape Girardeau, Mo., in the afternoon, pairing himself with Billy Casper of Apple Valley, Calif.

Palmer and Casper beat Brian Huggett and George Will 5 and 4.

It was a return match for Palmer against Huggett and Will. The young Britons beat Palmer and Pott in the morning round, 3 and 2.

Palmer paired with old friend Dow Finsterwald of Tequesta, Fla., in today's second morning match.

Casper teamed with Dave Regan Jr. to gain the Americans' only victory in the morning round. They beat Peter Alliss of Dorset, England, and Irishman Christy O'Connor one up.

TEAMS WITH LITTLER

Finsterwald was teamed with Gene Littler of San Diego, Calif. in both matches Friday. The two halved their morning match with Dave Thomas of Berkshire and Harry Weetman of Surrey, and then beat Neil Coles of Surrey and Geoffrey Hunt in the afternoon 2 and 1.

The day's most exciting match was the closing contest between U.S. Open champion Ulilus Boros and Tony Lema against Tom Haliburton and Hunt's brother, Bernard. One down with two to play, Boros and Lema won the 17th with a par and then took the 18th on a par after a good chip by Boros.

Boros and Lema halved their match with Coles and Bernard Hunt in the morning.

The pace of the afternoon rout was set by Billy Maxwell of Las Vegas and Bob Goalby of Belleville, Ill. They defeated Thomas and Weetman 4 and 3.

League Upped to 8 Teams

Junior 'A' Opens Sunday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Ontario Hockey Association Junior A group opens its 1963-64 season Sunday with two new teams, one transplanted club and four new coaches.

Increasing the league membership to eight teams from six last year are Oshawa Generals and Toronto Marlboros, both moving in from the now defunct Metro Toronto Junior A group.

Kitchener Rangers are the league's other new entry, having moved from Guelph. New York Rangers of the National Hockey League switched the franchise after poor support in Guelph last year.

Returning from 1962-63 are the defending Eastern Canada champion Niagara Falls Flyers, St. Catharines Black Hawks, Hamilton Red Wings, Montreal Junior Canadiens and Peterborough Petes.

START ACTION SUNDAY

Four of the teams are in action Sunday. Hamilton will play host to Peterborough, and the Marlboros will visit St. Catharines.

Montreal and Oshawa will open their season at Bowmanville next Tuesday, and Kitchener will open the same night, playing the Black Hawks at home.

The Flyers begin play next Friday night, a outing the Red Wings in Niagara Falls.

Although listed as new teams, both the Marlboros and the Generals are well-known in Canadian junior hockey.

The Generals were for years one of the most feared units in the country. But they had to secede when the old Oshawa rink burned down 12 years ago.

A new arena is planned for Oshawa, but it won't be ready until next season. This year the Generals will play most of their games in Bowmanville, with four contests scheduled for Trenton.

Toronto will start its home season in London against Peterborough Friday, Oct. 18. Their remaining 27 home games are slated for Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto.

CFL Executives

Want League H. Q. In Toronto

MONTREAL (CP)—The Gazette says executives of the nine Canadian Football League clubs will be asked this winter to shift the league's headquarters to Toronto from Winnipeg.

The newspaper says in a story by sports director Vern DeGeer that the recommendation will be made when the CFL executive meets in Toronto next February.

No source for the recommendation was given.

But the story says the move "is said to have the support of all nine clubs" and if CFL commissioner Sydney Halter declines to make the transfer "it would mean the appointment of a new CFL head."

Halter conducts a legal practice in Winnipeg.

The Gazette says the move is designed to provide a more central office for the league for dealing with radio, television and advertising clients as well as conducting business with the National and American Football Leagues.

An unidentified Eastern Football Conference executive is quoted as saying the shift "is in no way to be construed as censorship of commissioner Halter."

"It's simply a matter of convenience and easier direction of CFL business. He (Halter) has been informed of the situation. There have been several informal talks.

"Naturally he is hesitant to sever his law connections and other Winnipeg ties. But I believe all the clubs feel the headquarters move is in the best interest of the league."

McGill at Varsity

Queen's Tackle Western

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two separate battles—one for first place and the other to stay out of last place—will feature Intercollegiate Senior Football League action on two fronts today.

Queen's University Golden Gaels and University of Western Ontario Mustangs, both winners in season-opening games last week, will battle for the lead in London.

In Toronto, McGill University Redmen, 16-13 losers to Western in Montreal last week, tackle University of Toronto Blues, who dropped a 21-14 decision to the Gaels in Kingston. The loser will slide into the league cellar.

Queen's behind quarterback Cal Conner, isn't expected to have much trouble with a young Mustang crew. All-star fullback Jim Young will bolster the Gaels' attack after missing last week's game with an injury.

Rookie quarterback Glen St. John is expected to be ready to play for McGill. He missed last week's encounter through illness. Jim Israel, poked in the eye at Kingston last week, is expected to start at quarterback for the Blues.

Despite his team's strong showing against the highly-favored Gaels last week, Toronto coach Dalt White isn't taking the weakened Redmen lightly.

Although McGill lost several outstanding players from last year's title-winning outfit, including ace quarterback Tom Skypeck, White feels they still have a strong nucleus.

In addition to swift halfback Willie Lambert, the Redmen have such strong, experienced college players as ends Don Taylor and Dick Feidler, tackle John Bowler, guard Brian Marshall and all-star end Al McKenzie.

TV Series Turning Point In Career of Gary Crosby

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I could be so nice. IN NINE SHOWS wouldn't kid you—the last few years have been tough," said Gary Crosby. "But I think this may be the turning point."

The eldest son of Bing Crosby was slim, trim and optimistic. The reason for his sunny outlook was his role on Sunday night's Bill Dana Show.

It is Gary's first venture into television series, though not the first time he has been asked.

"You get all kinds or proposals," he explained, "but you never see anything on paper.

"When the Dana Show came along, it sounded good to me. I knew that Bill would be easy to work with and that he had a good comedy sense (he was once a Steve Allen writer). I must say that my hopes have been exceeded. I had forgotten that people in show business

"My contract says I'm supposed to be in seven out of 13 shows. So far I've been in nine, and I'd like to be in all of them."

The Dana Show has the star portraying his character Jess Jiminez as a bellhop. Gary plays another bellhop, a wise acre who gets Jose into trouble.

Now 30, Gary was asked if he had any advice for youngsters trying to follow the footsteps of famous parents.

"I wouldn't presume to give anyone advice," said Gary, "everyone has to make his own mistakes. It's twice as hard to make it to the top as the child of a star, because you have to keep proving yourself.

"You're always being compared to your parents, but that never bothered me. I'd much rather be compared to the best.

"The main thing is not to feel sorry for yourself and start wallowing in self-pity. That can be a trap."

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Lunar position highlights friends, aspirations . . . your ability to "make something of yourself." Important that you communicate, stress creative activities. Avoid usual routine.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Being industrious is fine but this should be day for joy, especially in connection with family members. Open up! Make and have fun. You can work tomorrow!

'Old One' Serves His Final Day As Chancellor

Adenauer's Heart Heavy As He Finally Retires

BON N(AP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer moved today through his final 24 hours in office before turning over the West German government to Ludwig Erhard.

President Heinrich Luebke was to notify Adenauer this afternoon that he accepted the resignation submitted by the chancellor last Friday. Adenauer was to continue as acting chancellor until the Bundestag, West Germany's lower house, elects Erhard to succeed him Wednesday morning.

The aged, 87 - year - old chancellor said he was stepping down with a heavy heart, evidently fearful that a major goal —reunification of Germany — had been pushed further from realization by warming relations between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Adenauer expressed the uneasiness in the last week because the United States did not make removal of the Berlin Wall the price for American wheat the Russians want to buy.

Adenauer could look back on his 14 years as Germany's first and only post-war chancellor as an old man who came many from the ruins of Second World War II a democratic nation of prosperity and military might allied with the West.

Erhard, 66 (The Old One), as Adenauer is called by Germans, gave up the chancellorship reluctantly under the pressure of his Christian Democratic party and the Free Democrats, junior partners in the government coalition. But he is staying on as party chairman and a member of the Bundestag.

Adenauer thinks the 65-year-old Erhard, his economics minister and vice-chancellor, lacks political acumen despite 14 years in Adenauer's shadow.

SHREWD REALIST

Adenauer, poker-faced and stoicism, is a shrewd political realist who has had the last word in decisions, often without consulting his cabinet. The jovial, cigar-smoking Erhard is an economist who plans to rely more on the judgment of his ministers in Newcastle, Edmundston, Moncton.

Farmers Will Be Helped

OTTAWA (CP)—In the blunt, earthy language that has characterized him, Hon. Harry Hays delivered part of the new federal gospel on agriculture Monday.

The Calgary cattleman made these points in his first major policy speech since Prime Minister Pearson gave him the agriculture portfolio after the April 8 election:

1. Top problem in Canadian farming is the high cost of machinery. "... If we are going to have the family farm we must have some, sort of rental deal whereby the farmer will be able to rent the machinery he needs when he has good crops."

2. Good credit was needed to make farm units economic. The Farm Credit Corporation was good—but not good enough.

3. "Our third big problem is crop disasters and taking care of them. Because they are hailed out, dried out, blown out or frozen out."

HELP NEEDED

4. "The dairy farmer needs help and we must give it to him. The sooner we do it the better, but how can we do it when we waste so much time in this House? ... We have never seen such a waste of time. It is just fantastic."

With that, and a bit more, Mr. Hays had delivered an hour-long, statistically-loaded attack by his Conservative predecessor, Alvin Hamilton, who blames alleged failure of the Liberal government to help with the problems of the Eastern farmer.

Mr. Hamilton moved a non-confidence motion along that line. It will come to a vote tonight.

Social Credit Leader Thompson, saying Mr. Hamilton's motion put the Socreds and New Democrats in a difficult position, so over the amendment placing the blame for the Eastern farmer's plight on a combination of "the completely inadequate policies of the immediately previous government."

NO SUPPORT

Obviously, the Conservatives won't vote for that. And Mr. Thompson says it is plain that his group won't vote for Mr. Hamilton's motion, which he described as "political manoeuvring."

Arnold Peters (NDP—Temiskaming), who led off for his party in the two-day supply debate, didn't indicate which way he would vote but he said it is time for "politicians to quit playing games with agriculture and to start doing something for the agriculturalists."

Mr. Hamilton made these among other points:

1. Canada has 100,000 farm families—mostly in Eastern Ontario and Quebec—in the MacEachen — living at levels that would be considered shams if they existed in the big cities.

2. The Commons and the press "do not really care about these 100,000 families."

3. ". . . It is not right that these people should be doomed

Alvin Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle, Sask.) moved a non-confidence motion charging government neglect of the Eastern Canadian farmer.

Robert Thompson, Social Credit leader, moved an amendment which put blame for the farm situation on the former Conservative government.

Agriculture Minister Hays said Mr. Hamilton was talking "a lot of bilge" with his speech about the neglect of Eastern farmers.

Labor Minister MacEachen named another 31 labor matters which qualify for special winter employment assistance.

96 Fatalities, Record High For Thanksgiving Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The accidental death toll across Canada reached an all-time high for Thanksgiving weekend.

A survey by The Canadian Press reported 96 persons killed between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Monday local times, surpassing by four the record set in 1960. Last year's total was 86.

The all-time record for any weekend is 172 recorded on the Dominion Day holiday this year.

The national totals for Thanksgiving were 60 highway deaths, 18 drownings, four by fire, three hunting and 11 through a variety of unclassified causes.

Ontario led with 38 deaths, the highest in 10 years for the province. Nineteen were in traffic, nine were drowned, three in fires, three while hunting and four unclassified.

Quebec had 24, which included 16 traffic, four drownings, one fire and three unclassified.

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia each reported seven. Manitoba had four traffic, one drowning and two unclassified; Saskatchewan five traffic, one drowning and one unclassified; B.C. three traffic, three drownings and one unclassified.

Alberta had five, all traffic. Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick each had two deaths, all traffic. Newfoundland and the Yukon each had a traffic death.

The survey does not include industrial deaths, slayings or known suicides.

Start Clearing Backlog

MONTREAL (CP)—The St. Lawrence River's three greatest ports are humming again with the conclusion of the 10-day longshoremen's strike.

The 3,800 members of the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC) went back to work Monday at 8 a.m., 10 cents an hour richer, and prepared for a concentrated burst of overtime work to clear the cargo held up by their strike.

Perhaps the best indication of a return-to-normal was the arrival late Monday of the Polish passenger liner Batory in Montreal, the first passenger ship to make it here since before the strike.

Two other liners, the Empress of Canada and the Arkadia, tried to dock at Quebec City to leave up highly-charged fear of violence during the strike and ended up going to Halifax.

URGENT TASK

The most urgent task for the three ports is the movement of some 60,000,000 bushels of wheat and flour for Russia, part of the 228,000,000 bushels Canada has agreed to deliver by July 31, 1964.

Capt. R. J. Ligtermoet, Montreal's harbormaster, said the entire National Harbors Board staff in Montreal will work as much overtime as necessary until all held-back cargo and grain is cleared. So will the longshoremen.

Capt. Ligtermoet expected it would take a week to 10 days to get the port back on a normal schedule.

Morocco's War Against Algeria May Be Halted

Peace Moves Stepped Up In Sahara Desert Clash

ALGIERS, Algeria (Reuters)—Peace moves shaped up today between Algeria and Morocco following reports of heavy fighting on their ill-defined Sahara Desert border.

Morocco claimed Monday night that the troops of King Hassan II occupied the frontier posts of Hassi Beida and Tinjoub. But this was denied by the Algerian information ministry.

Algerian Foreign Minister Abel Aziz Bouteflika, however, said "many thousands" of Moroccans had penetrated between 30 and 60 miles inside Algeria. The clash occurred in an area 300 miles across the Atlas Mountains from Marakech, Morocco, where Mrs. John F. Kennedy is visiting this week. U.S. Ambassador John H. Ferguson Indicated in Marrakech the border clash would not curtail Mrs. Kennedy's stay, which is to last until Wednesday or Thursday.

Algeria prepared to take the border dispute before the Organization of African States at a special session.

Erhard Gets Tough Job This Week

BONN (AP) — Ludwig Erhard, after patiently waiting in the wings for years, becomes West Germany's new chancellor this week.

Konrad Adenauer, the retiring chancellor, did not want Erhard, his political economics minister, to succeed him. Adenauer delayed his retirement because he believed Erhard did not have the political talent to follow him.

Erhard built up his following until he became the only choice of the Christian Democratic party and its coalition ally, the Free Democratic party. Together they control the majority in Parliament needed to elect him.

Erhard, fat, jovial and 66, is taking over out of the toughest political assignments in the world. He has to govern with a coalition. He has to run a country with politically explosive problems. He has to triumph over a Social Democratic opposition gaining more and more favor with the voters.

HAS EXPERIENCE

Erhard brings to the chancellorship 14 years of experience as a cabinet member and great personal popularity as the "father of the economic miracle" of post-war recovery. He opposes the government's mixing in business and backs U.S.-favored policies on Europe and the Atlantic alliance.

Erhard is inheriting a stable, prosperous country but also many problems that could blow his coalition apart in the next two years. That is all the time left before the next election, in which he must lead the party to a strong showing if he hopes to be re-elected chancellor.

Erhard has promised to continue the main lines of Adenauer's policies, but indicates there will be difference in emphasis and details.

Unlike Adenauer, who has run things his own way with an iron will, Erhard will not impose his policies on the new government but seek to put them over on the merits. He is planning to handle the cabinet like a team. This carries the risk that he will be forced to settle for compromises and may fail to carry through a program that would impress the voters.

31 Areas Named For More Relief

OTTAWA (CP) — In a new drive to chip away at chronic winter unemployment, the government has singled out another 31 areas of Canada in line for employment - producing incentives.

A new program for these areas, announced in the Commons Monday by Labor Minister MacEachen, will be dovetailed with the earlier program—slightly more elaborate—that applies to 35 "designated development areas."

The new areas named Monday will get two kinds of assistance—an increase to 60 per cent from 50 in the government's share of payroll costs under the municipal winter works program, and part of the $1,000,000 being brought forward from next year for federal public works construction projects.

HAVE TAX HOLIDAY

The 35 designated areas announced earlier will get both these benefits in addition to the three-year tax holiday for new industries.

While the designated areas were selected on the basis of year-round employment figures —places with chronic unemployment—the additional areas were selected on the basis of high winter unemployment only.

To qualify under the program announced Monday, an area will have at least 25 per cent of its workers unemployed in the months of January, February and March during the years 1961, 1962 and 1963.

New centres meeting these requirements were:

Newfoundland — Grand Falls, St. John's.

Nova Scotia — Yarmouth, Bridgewater.

Prince Edward Island—Summerside, Charlottetown.

New Brunswick — Bathurst, Newcastle, Edmundston, Moncton.

Quebec — Gaspe, New Richmond, Chandler, Manitwaki, Ri-

Fresh Approach Suggested To South African Problem

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A plea for a fresh approach to the South African issue was heard at the United Nations Monday by African nations pressing their drive to eliminate white rule from the continent.

Demanding a Foreign Minister Per Kaekkerup met with apartheid Afro-Asian bloc and put before it a German plan for what he termed a more constructive policy on the South African race issues.

At a press conference afterward he warned that the present "sterile" tactics of criticizing increasing pressure on the white regime could lead to "disaster, catastrophe and bloodshed" that could endanger world peace.

He suggested instead that the Afro-Asians work with South Africa's big trading partners to urge that country to move towards a multi - racial society, with guarantees for all, including the white minority.

Haekkerup, acting for a five-country group also including Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden, admitted that opponents of the plan had called it "naive and childish."

This might be so, he said, but he could see no better alternative. He said the present approach was leading only into a blind alley.

Also spoke, the General Assembly was voting overwhelmingly for a resolution urging Britain not to give independence to Southern Rhodesia while the white minority retains political control.

The count was 90 to 2 with 13 abstentions. Britain refused to participate. Portugal and South Africa cast the only negative votes. Canada, the U.S., France and other NATO powers were among the abstainers.

The Rhodesian vote, following a 106-to-1 censure of South Africa voted by the assembly Friday, provided another display of strength by the independent African nations.

In the assembly's special political committee Monday, Tanganyika's minister of justice made a strong bid for South Af

Deputy Premier Butler Favored to Succeed Mac

LONDON (CP)—British ministers held a cabinet meeting at 10 Downing Street today in an atmosphere of continuing drama and suspense.

The 20 ministers assembled in the dead-end street off Whitehall, the notable absentee was Prime Minister Macmillan whose decision to give up the premiership has set off a conservative party without a clear choice of successor.

R. A. Butler, the deputy prime minister and still favorite for the succession despite a hard core of opposition, visited Macmillan in hospital this morning before the cabinet meeting.

Macmillan underwent an operation last week for removal of the prostate gland and will probably remain in hospital until late next week.

Partly by choice and partly by tradition, the Tories have no formal "mechanics" for choosing a new leader. With no clear cut successor immediately acceptable to all, the vacancy at the top already has stirred unusual excitement in a party that prides itself on an august approach to politics.

Last week's Conservative conference in Blackpool was marked by some of the most bitter infighting the party has known as candidates jockeyed for position and personal propaganda was flooded with every edition of the newspapers.

Learned arguments raged about the Queen's "prerogative" in choosing the new prime minister, though most agreed in private that the Queen would be little but confirm the choice of the party elders.

In continuing speculation, Butler appeared to hold the inside track, despite reported opposi-

Diefenbaker Said Ready to Meet Critics

RED DEER (CP)—Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker said Saturday night he refuses to be dictated to by any group within the Progressive Conservative party.

He told the party's Alberta association convention the question of his leadership will be decided by rank-and-file members of the party.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the test of his leadership will come at the national Conservative convention in January.

He said in an interview later "it is my intention as in the past . . . to have a vote of confidence placed before the national meeting, representative as it will be, of the grass roots of this country."

The former prime minister was given a three-minute standing ovation when he asked for the support of the 200 Alberta convention delegates.

Earlier at an Edmonton press conference, Mr. Diefenbaker said Canadian-American relations have reached an all-time low.

"There was never a period when I was prime minister when relations between Canada and the United States dipped to such a low ebb," he said.

A Halloway resident has drawn a ticket in the Hibernian Irish Sweepstakes running of the Canadepreakness.

The holders, still anonymous up to press time, will be identified only with the number plame "A".

The ticket, NAE 61547, is drawn from Halloway.

One Halloway resident who believes he may hold a ticket on the race is Mrs. Dorothy Mc-local executive of American Optical Company in Belleville. Mr. Hewitt, however, could not immediately verify whether the ticket he held was the same.

Ideal Fall Weather Coaxed Canadians by Droves to Country

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ideal fall weather coaxed Canadians by the droves into the country's parks and on to rural roads during the last long weekend before winter's onslaught.

Only in British Columbia was the Thanksgiving weather unkind. While the rest of the country basked beneath a warm sun, B.C. endured alternating cloudy skies and cool rain for most of the weekend.

Weather offices throughout Canada reported daytime temperatures ranging generally from the high 50s to the mid 70s, often 10 to 15 degrees above normal for this time of year. And the weather became milder as the weekend progressed.

Highways leading to Canada's parks and resort areas were frequently jammed as on a holiday reminiscent of mid - summer weekends. City parks were overrun with strollers, and outdoor sports events took on some of the best crowds of the season.

With the heavy traffic, there was also a heavy toll of accidents. At least 60 people lost their lives in traffic mishaps during the weekend — slightly less than the 63 which the Canadian Highway Safety Council had predicted.

Hunters also invaded the woods by the thousands, and fishing addicts got in a late line. Almost inevitably, three hunters in Ontario were shot to death and boating accidents involving hunters or fishermen helped swell the annual casualty toll.

In all, at least 96 people died accidentally during the three days — the highest total for the Thanksgiving weekend.

Newfoundland was the only province to set a mark Monday as a holiday. In that province, streets and schools were closed during the day.

While opposition leader John Diefenbaker spoke to a crowd in his home constituency of Prince Albert, Sask., other members of Parliament sat through a busy session. Thousands of visitors thronged the corridors of the Commons or lounged on the lawns of Parliament Hill.

Algonquin Park in Ontario reported 10,000 visitors during the weekend, a Thanksgiving record, and nearby resorts were overflowing with tourists.

Vatican Council Approves Using Local Languages for Sacraments

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican ecumenical council voted overwhelmingly today to extend the use of local languages to the sacraments, as well as the mass.

Earlier at an Edmonton press conference, Mr. Diefenbaker said Canadian-American relations have reached an all-time low.

Helicopter Crash Kills 6

NEW YORK (AP)—A 10-ton helicopter shuttling between metropolitan airports, crashed and burned Monday on the Pan Am Building roof. All six persons aboard were killed.

The New York Airways craft was only lightly loaded with three passengers and three crew members, including a stewardess. It could carry as many as 28 persons.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican ecumenical council voted overwhelmingly today to extend the use of local languages to the sacraments, as well as the mass.

The vote for changing the name from Latin to modern languages was 2,143 to 35.

The amendment also permits the giving of the sacrament more than once in a serious illness and permits it to be given early in the illness. The anointing now is allowed only once for the same illness and is usually given only with death imminent.

Today's amendment voting does not make the changes final. The scheme as a whole must be approved by the official and by Pope Paul before it becomes effective.

Stephen-Adamson Workers Get New Agreement

After several months negotiations, all of which have been in a most amicable basis, the Stephens-Adamson Mfg. Co. of Canada Limited signed a labor agreement last week with the United Mine Workers of America, District 50, which provides for wage increases as well as improvement in vacations and other fringe benefits. The cost to the company in wages increases is approximately 21½c per hour.

The new contract, effective September 30, expires three years from that date, according to agreement with the SACO Coldwater Bargaining Union, which expired on April 30.

Negotiating the contract for the company were: G. A. Freeman, president; W. A. Lewis, executive vice-president; L. R. Truman, personnel manager; Ralph Hamilton, secretary, and Mrs. D. FATHER AND SON HAVE COMMON PROBLEM

Forty years separate them, yet they have a common problem.

Father is old, still healthy, but too old to hold down a job. His son, young, ambitious, married with a family, has a good job, is paying for a home. When the son dies suddenly, his family is provided for, his father can't help. He just gets by on his Old-Age Security plus what he can make from odd jobs here and there.

Their common problem is money! In one case to provide an income to bring up a growing family — in the other to provide happy retirement in old age.

Only permanent personal life policies and health insurance can cover both problems at once—the hazards of dying too soon or living too long. Bert Curtis Has Long Been Lover of Art

TRENTON — Bert Curtis of 504 Front St., Trenton has always been interested in art. As a schoolboy in England, he spent his allowance on oil paints and he has continued to teach himself, by trial and error, the rudiments of painting. He prefers to "mess around" with paint and in civilian life he finds painting an absorbing and rewarding hobby.

Bert has had a certain amount of success from a strictly monetary standpoint and has sold a number of oils. One was bought to hang in the Officers' Mess at Rockcliffe.

Recently, Bert met a well-known artist, Rev. Brown Squires of Connecticut and has now started to study art seriously under Mr. Squires' guidance.

"I didn't realize how much of an amateur I was until I started to study under Mr. Squires," Bert says.

The Curtis family, which consists of Mrs. Curtis, three boys and a daughter, Dawn, have painting friends and neighbors make Bert's studio the focal point of the house. Most people drop in for criticisms.

"I listen to the criticism," says Bert, "especially by the children. Often a child can see below the surface."

Dawn is the only member of the family showing promise to be bent on following in her father's footsteps and she keeps her easel right beside Dad's in the studio. Dawn hopes to take art lessons when she's older — and somewhere, she's taking advice from Daddy.

Boy Falls Into Unused Storm Sewer

TRENTON — Nine - year - old Donny Anderson of Oshawa, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Anderson and the grandson of Trenton's building inspector, William Anderson and Mrs. Anderson, spent a tearful 20 minutes at the bottom of a unused storm sewer Saturday afternoon until he was rescued by Cpt. Gerald Lewis of the Trenton Fire Department.

Donny and other children with whom he was playing, removed the iron cover over the sewer and Donny crawled in. Once at the bottom, he became frightened and could not manage to get to the top again. The other children ran to tell his grandmother and Mrs. Anderson called the department.

Cpt. Lewis talked to the boy from the top of the sewer and after he had calmed him, managed to get Donny out feet first to safety. Donny was reported to be shaken, but unharmed.

HEATER FLARES UP

Trenton firemen were called out Saturday afternoon to Kingdon Hall on Wragge St. where the oil heater had flared up. The fire was quickly extinguished and only minor smoke damage to the church was reported.

Scholarships, Diplomas, Awards Given at Albert College Fall Convocation Monday

By GLADYS WARD

Fall convocation at Albert College Memorial chapel was carried out on Monday afternoon with less formality than the June ceremonies, instead the long graduation dresses and nosegays of summer the girls wore navy blazers with the school crests and grey skirts, while the young men wore blazers, school ties and grey flannels.

Bouquets of bronze and yellow blooms, in memory of the late Harry Ackerman and his son Jack Ackerman were placed on the trophy table by the grandchildren.

The academic procession entered with Mr. Argus MacLeod, A.T.C.L., L.R.A.M., at the organ and the prayer of invocation was given by Rev. J. M. D. McLeod, B.A., chairman of Belleville Presbytery.

Principal and Headmaster Rev. J. A. Haig, B.P.H.E., B.A., B.D., S.T.M., warmly greeted the guests especially the alumni, some of whom had come from a great distance. The Principal stated that there seemed to be a spirit of dedication in the school as they were expecting good results particularly in the senior students. The history of Albert College affirmed that a sound academic record as well as a religious education was planned, and the teachers were dedicated to that idea.

A gift of collection plates was given from the Junior graduating class by president Alexander Sanderson and from the Senior class a stained glass window for the chapel was presented by president Miss Vaughn Brown to Principal Haig.

Mr. Newton Thompson brought greetings from the Board of Governors with the hope that their efforts would be crowned with success.

Editor of the year book Allis, Ted Gil read the dedication of this year's edition to Mr. Murray Irwin, a former teacher at the school, reviewing Mr. Irwin's history and his attributes as a teacher. In accepting the honor Mr. Irwin said that he had gained tremendously from his association with Albert College.

Valedictorian was Garth Jackson, a young man who is studying for the ministry. He chose for his address "Ready for Conversation... than Thanksgiving," said Mr. Jackson, "We are free and grateful to Albert College. Our graduation dispels the symbolic of a degree of education. But we must not use a diploma as a mask to hide behind. Albert College demands infinitely more. There is the dedication, the finest type of loyalty of many men who have taught here. There are the sacrifices of parents who have made it possible for their child, to be educated here with a sound academic background.

The purpose of Secondary schools is to teach the students the required academic courses, and the purpose of Albert College is to send men and women into the world with dedication and love to lead men to the truth with a depth of sincerity that God bless you, Albert College."

SPECIAL SPEAKER

Vice-principal Bert Simpson introduced the speaker for the occasion, Rev. Gordon C. Hunter, B.A., R.D., of Ashbury and West United Church, Toronto noting his service as a missionary on the Caribou trail, his importance in the councils of the United Church, as a member of the Board for the recruiting for the ministry of the church, and as chairman of the educational committee of the United Church where he will co-ordinate that field of the church's work with the Canadian plans for that field.

"I dare you to do four things," said Mr. Hunter. "Our lives have become tied in with a great event, the cosmic good of mankind and the central fact ever to reach our planet, the Christian faith. I dare you to look at the world as it is down to fundamentals, of understanding what you are and what you can do with it. The only thing that gives life any meaning is God's redemptive plan. The world is going to be either a mess or a message. You can be a thermometer or a thermostat. The first merely registers the temperature, but a thermostat is a determining instrument. You must stand for your convictions.

"I dare you to fall in love, to have a great passion for life. Life should be exciting And challenging, but with a worthy objective. You can take the venture, danger and risk in a life which centers a plan with Christ as leader.

"I dare you to get into work, for a world launching its drive around a centre of gravity indefinitely. With a Christian vocation, everything revolves around a central magnetic force, and becomes our expression of devotion."

OUTDOOR TEA

The Headmaster voiced the sincere thanks of the audience to Mr. Hunter. Everyone invited to enjoy refreshments after the impressive hour of prayer. This year the tea was served outdoors on the quadrangle of the west cloister where the crispy cool October atmosphere, green lawns, flower beds, and the west cloister made an attractive setting.

Albert College has a fine well balanced curriculum which contributed a selection to add to the musical part of the program.

Service Above Self

Down through the ages helping others has been one of the most rewarding activities of man. And nothing has been more truly said than the motto of a well-known service club, "He profits most who serves best."

The true meaning of service cannot be found until we have offered a helping hand to others and without service to others life can become a drab existence. It is in this spirit of lending a helping hand to the less fortunate that citizens of Belleville are being asked to donate the United Way. The goal is $85,000 and that amount must be provided if the various agencies under the wing of the United Appeal are to be able to carry out their work for others on your behalf.

Giving money is one of the easiest ways to share in the life of others, to help them in time of need. We are not all equipped to render personal service, but all can share in the work being done within the area by the agencies of the United Appeal.

By donating to the United Appeal you will give assistance to do a task which needs to be accomplished. As a result you will find a warm glow in your heart, the feeling that you have not passed by on the other side but have stopped to render aid to your fellowmen. And the more generous you are, the greater will be your return for service pays unexpected dividends to the willing donor.

Let your contribution to the United Appeal come from the heart. Let it be service above self. Sympathy is a noble and intangible trait. Sympathy in sense is appreciated but sympathy expressed in dollars has far greater results both to the less fortunate and the donor.

School Radio

Built with federal-provincial vocational grants, Champlain Secondary School in Pembroke cost the taxpayers a total of about two million dollars. As secondary schools go, it was well built and well equipped, by the public.

Two private firms, though, have provided, as a gift, what may be the most important equipment in the building, a complete FM radio station. Pembroke Shook Mills Ltd. and Canadian Splint and Lumber Corp. shared the cost of the gift. The station is not yet on the air, but when B.R.C. approval is granted, it may operate for three hours every two weeks. The benefit to the school 500 though will be out of proportion to the time spent broadcasting.

Plans call for the electronics students to learn electronics on the equipment, while the English students work on scripts and programming. Possibilities are for students in other lines of study to provide music, discussion of current events, possibly foreign-language programs. Ryerson Institute, in Toronto, has for several years run a comparable operation.

It is interesting to note that neither of the two companies providing the gift is likely to have much call for the talents the students are most likely to develop through it. The motivation must be, one assumes, a distinterested interest in the welfare of the school's students.

The English are becoming neither better nor worse; they are just going on being themselves as they frankly were disclosed to the world long ago by Chaucer's Canterbury Pilgrims, by Christopher Marlowe's dark drama of the leaping verse and by the universal nature inherent in the human race as revealed by Shakespeare.—Cape Breton Post.

Surely it is not beyond the genius of modern science to invent such a weapon (a noisy, mushroom-forming, huge smoke bomb) which would permit the fun and excitement of nuclear war without getting killed.—Senator William Fulbright of the U.S.A.

Not since the Pharoahs built the Pyramids has a society devoted such gigantic sums to a purpose which has almost nothing to do with security or welfare.—Walter Lippmann, American journalist on the moon race.

Permitting the indiscriminate diffusion of the Bomb in all countries that want it is like giving the key to the poison cupboard to all patients of a hospital.—M. Georges Bidault, French Minister of the Interior.

Send your son to Moscow, and he will return as an anti-communist; send him to the Sorbonne, and he will return as a communist. —M. Félix Houphouet-Boigny, President of the Ivory Coast.

M.P.'s Accept Salary Increase Hang on to Old Habits

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — By both formal interview and casual conversation, the Honorable Members of the Commons continue working hard at trying to convince all concerned . . . including, probably, even themselves . . . that nobody really minded that $8,000 Parliamentary pay raise.

To hear them tell it, the happy fact is that the electorate was tolerant and even understanding. If not actually enthusiastic, about them voting themselves that intoxicatingly heady increase from $10,000 to $18,000 plus some still not-clearly-defined but generous open-ended expenses.

By now, pretty well all of them have returned to the Capital and work - - some taking the first week of the new Session to make it back here - - and still show signs of self-consciousness about being the country's biggest single collection of $20,000-a-year-men.

Not even Detroit's Big Three Motors, widely regarded as the nation's biggest and most brazen corporation, has as many high-priced executives . . . 263 men and women at a "basic" $18,000 plus and running up the salary scale at a $48,000 top.

Perhaps in self-defence, and to cover the embarrassment that some of them still obviously feel, they have adopted an "Aw shucks" attitude, insisting that in the two months in their constituencies since the June election, only those who weren't junketing to Faraway Places at public expense) the matter ever came up. It was a little good-natured "kidding" as they like to describe it.

"IMAGINATION:"

But it was all in good fun, they insist with nothing malicious, nothing resentful, nothing really unpleasant in any of their encounters with the taxpayers, previous few of whom ever income Tax statistics show, found anything remotely like $18,000.

Many of the MPs have referred with a touch of self-mocking intelligence that the "proposed" hue and cry over the pay raise has been little more than "imaginative newspaper reporting."

Perhaps they were too busy to read a little further and get to that rash of angry letters-to-the-editor that broke out on a lot of newspaper editorial pages.

And then maybe they're counting on the voters having short memories and lacking the will to remember that even if by some ten years ago the MPs were making just $6,000, that was in the order, not of 80, but of 300 percent.

Could be that a truer indication of the way some of them really feel about it was the annoyance they have displayed over the announced decisions of New Brunswick Barry Mather of New Westminister to give his $8,000 raise to charity, and of Conservative Jack Reid of North Waterloo to use his $4,000 of his buying wheel chairs for Crippled Children, Post and hospitals, and sports equipment for service club playgrounds.

The MPs have had a great deal to say about what they insist was the value of their pay hike—but oddly, they have almost nothing to say about how they might propose to earn that $18,000.

"FULL-TIME JOB"

It was on the afternoon of July 30, when putting through the Parliamentary pay raise legislation, Prime Minister Pearson was quoted, on page 3726 of Hansard:

"Members of the Commons, to all intents and purposes now have a full-time occupation. . . ."

At $18,000-plus, there would be no time for extra-curricular "moonlighting." There would be time only for the business of Parliament.

But there have been no declarations from any of the lawyer MPs of retirement, even temporarily, from law practices. . . or even of the abandonment of the abuse of their privilege of using their Commons offices and secretaries for private business affairs.

There has been no indication from any of the prosperous Prairie wheaters that they will rent or lease their fat farms and attend strictly to Parliamentary business.

There have not even been promises from the Ontario and Quebec MPs that they will give up those notorious Thursday-to-Tuesday weekends at home.

There has been only silence.

A silence not only about earning that $18,000, but an even deeper silence on the part of many . . . the utter silence of continued absenteeism.

In the first three Divisions of this Session, 212 MPs were not in the House to cast their votes. Some of those absentees missed all three. Some didn't bother to return to Parliament for the opening week of the Session to make it back here - - and still show signs of self-consciousness about being the country's biggest single collection of $20,000-a-year-men.

Not even Detroit's Big Three Motors, widely regarded as the nation's biggest and most brazen corporation, has as many high-priced executives . . . 263 men and women at a "basic" $18,000 plus and running up the salary scale at a $48,000 top.

Perhaps in self-defence, and to cover the embarrassment that some of them still obviously feel, they have adopted an "Aw shucks" attitude, insisting that in the two months in their constituencies since the June election, only those who weren't junketing to Faraway Places at public expense) the matter ever came up. It was a little good-natured "kidding" as they like to describe it.

"IMAGINATION:"

But it was all in good fun, they insist with nothing malicious, nothing resentful, nothing really unpleasant in any of their encounters with the taxpayers, previous few of whom ever income Tax statistics show, found anything remotely like $18,000.

Many of the MPs have referred with a touch of self-mocking intelligence that the "proposed" hue and cry over the pay raise has been little more than "imaginative newspaper reporting."

Perhaps they were too busy to read a little further and get to that rash of angry letters-to-the-editor that broke out on a lot of newspaper editorial pages.

And then maybe they're counting on the voters having short memories and lacking the will to remember that even if by some ten years ago the MPs were making just $6,000, that was in the order, not of 80, but of 300 percent.

Could be that a truer indication of the way some of them really feel about it was the annoyance they have displayed over the announced decisions of New Brunswick Barry Mather of New Westminister to give his $8,000 raise to charity, and of Conservative Jack Reid of North Waterloo to use his $4,000 of his buying wheel chairs for Crippled Children, Post and hospitals, and sports equipment for service club playgrounds.

The MPs have had a great deal to say about what they insist was the value of their pay hike—but oddly, they have almost nothing to say about how they might propose to earn that $18,000.

The Prostitution Of English

Christian Science Monitor

To read or listen to many advertisements today, one would gain the impression that the American people is a race of semi-illiterates, that it neither speaks correct English nor is interested in seeing it preserved. For some unexplained reason, the young and, believe it or not, college graduates employed as writers of Madison Avenue have persuaded themselves that bad grammar sells well.

In this self-imposed world of illiteracy even the adverb has disappeared, and we hear such phrases as "the engine runs good," "the car drives nice," "he walked quick to the office." And we are all familiar with that ineffable monstrosity of Madison Avenue, the substitution of "like" for "as," "as if," and "as though." We are now told that a certain type of fried is baked "just like mother baked it" and that "this kind of motor oil works like it should."

On top of this these same writers seem to believe that the American people are happier when "right" appears as "rite," "through" as "thru" and "although" as "altho," however cheap and childish this spelling may be. To this can also be added the intentional dropping the apostrophe with the genitive case and coming up with such examples as "Johns house" and "Boston's traffic problems.

It is a fact long noted by Europeans, and to which Mr. Bernard Darby, a former Minister of New Westminister to give his $8,000 raise to charity, and of Conservative Jack Reid of North Waterloo to use his $4,000 of his buying wheel chairs for Crippled Children, Post and hospitals, and sports equipment for service club playgrounds.

The MPs have had a great deal to say about what they insist was the value of their pay hike—but oddly, they have almost nothing to say about how they might propose to earn that $18,000.

Neuroses

Milwaukee Journal

Mankind, it seems, no longer has a monopoly of the world's neuroses. Witness the recent complaint of British dairymen that sonic booms were reducing their cows to quivering bovine messes and ruining the milk and milk production.

Now comes the University of Illinois school of agriculture with even more distressing news: pigs are developing ulcers. According to Indiana Newsletter, modern hogs live closely enough to their confroundings, gobble specialized new feeds—and develop ulcers. In a study of the ailment, researchers found twice as many cases of porcine ulcers as in the relaxed old days of mud wallows and hog-calling contests.

There is one bright note in all of this. Psycotic creatures, unlike people, cannot back you into a corner and spend the better part of an hour describing their latest symptoms.

Don't Forget The Small Businessman

Ottawa Journal

The Department of Industry was established by Parliament only a few months ago. It is still too early to pass judgment whether it is so much window-dressing or a means of real assistance to Canadian industry. If it is only half as effective as its supporters have managed, it will justify its organizational upheaval made by the shifting of a number of specific departments of government.

But it is not too early to ask what plans the Government is making to maintain a close watch over the interests of the businessman, especially the small businessman, who is not a manufacturer. The Department of Industry is specifically limited to assisting those who make a product.

Yet 40 per cent of the total labor force is employed in tertiary industries, mainly in the distribution of goods and in service occupations. Is a Government which doesn't hesitate to stand-by industries as many facets of life forgetting the small retailer and his special problems?

The functions of the Small Business Branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce should be carried on.

We hear the good news of great wheat deals, booming automobile sales and rising optimism about the Canadian economy.

We don't hear much about the health of small businesses or of how they will share in the prosperity some economists are predicting.

The small businessman, whether he turns out a product or not, is still a bulwark of the Canadian economy.

He shouldn't be forgotten.

Anesthesiology Has Now Become Intricate Science

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please write a column on anesthesia. Some of my friends and I fear it so much we refuse to have necessary surgery. I do not worry about anything I understand, but the patient rarely sees the anesthetist. I had surgery recently, and was not prepared for the anesthetist and its effect. Unless I understand it, I would never again consent to surgery. Here are my specific questions . . Mrs. E. W. H.

It will take three columns to answer your numerous questions. Anesthesiology, once just a matter of "giving ether," has become an intricate science. Many anesthetists, and as many drugs in conjunction with them, are now used, with the amounts and proportions modified to fit each case.

In many hospitals the usual practice is for the surgeon and the anesthesiologist to discuss the patient and operation in advance and the type of anesthesia.

The anesthesiologist, particularly in a major operation, visits the patient the day before and before the operation. He studies the medical chart and tries to assure the patient.

This, I am sure, is a good thing to do. I don't say that it would be wise for the anesthesiologist (nor economical for the patient) to spend a great deal of time explaining all the possibilities. But a general outline of what is to be done is helpful to the patient.

And now I'll start with your list of questions — and my answers:

Q. Why is an enema given as part of the preparation for and when, as in my case, the operation is not internal? Mine was for orthopedic surgery on the lower extremities.

A. It's a good idea to clean out the colon, since loss of control of the bowel can occur under anesthesia. It's not just a matter of convenience for doctors and nurses. It is to save the patient the ordeal of having to be cleaned up afterward, right after the stress of surgery.

Q. What is the pre-surgery "hypo" supposed to do and why did it not cause drowsiness, but only dizziness when I was lying flat?

A. This is to lessen the patient's anxiety on the way to the operating room and to reduce the autonomic phase which is normal in the early stages of anesthesia. I like nearly all drugs this can have slightly different effects on different people according for the dizziness in your case. It doesn't usually cause that.

Q. What is the "relaxant" that is given intravenously, and is it in itself an anesthetic?

A. No, it isn't an anesthetic. It relaxes the muscles and reduces the possibility of giving a deep anesthetic. Several types of relaxants are used. They relax tension and this is necessary for successful surgery.

More of Mrs. E. W. H.'s questions tomorrow.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it all right to eat a chunk of lettuce without washing it? — Mrs. H. W.

Always wash fruits and vegetables if you eat them raw. In fact, wash them first even if you cook them. This will give you added safety. Never run up a chance of being safe. Don't you agree?

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Would asbestos be considered barbiturates? Is asbestos poisonous for purpura? — Mrs. M. S.

Asphalt is not a barbiturate. It is a salicylate. Purpura is common purpura in susceptible individuals.

Danger Lurks On Being a Reverse Square

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A man I know who prides himself on being "hip" was having coffee with me when another man entered the restaurant and nodded at my companion. The man I was with barely acknowledged his greeting.

"What's the matter, don't you like him?" I asked. The man shrugged. "I hardly know him," he said, "but he looks awfully square to me — the way he dresses and parts his hair and those rimless eyeglasses. Man."

"That's a strange attitude for you to take," I commented. "It seems to me that you're behaving just like the squares you hate."

"What do you mean?" he looked at me uncomfortably.

"I mean that you are one person dressed a certain way, he allows that surface impression to influence his opinion and attitude, and doesn't even try to know what the individual himself is like. Right against?"

"Check," he said. "And so what?"

"And so this," I continued. "You're doing the very same thing with a reversed image. You see a man dressed in a certain way and you immediately think of him as a "bottom-down Jerk." You think in broad categories, not rather than in terms of individuals. If you, anybody is a square who doesn't resemble you in dress, habits and mannerisms — even though such people may be only superficially conformists.

"That's bad enough, isn't it?" he asked.

"I don't think so," I said. "Some people don't want to waste their energy in rebelling about non-essentials. But if you get to know them, you may find that their minds are sharp and their characters well developed. The whole point is — you can't really tell what anyone is like until you give him a chance, and you can't do that know him."

"But the percentage is against it," he muttered.

"The percentage is always against single minds and developed characters," I suggested. "This is true in any group, including the hip hipsters, many of whom reject conventional society for weak, childish and neurotic reasons."

"I'll give you that," he conceded.

"Give me more," I asked. "Don't let yourself become a square-in-reverse. Keep open forard people, or you've no better than he is."

Reporter Kidnaps Russians, Gets Exclusive Interview During Drive to Toronto

An Ontario Intelligencer reporter found himself acting as chauffeur and guide, Friday night, to two Russian technicians. Assigned to cover the visit of the Soviet Meat and Milk Industry delegation to Belleville, the reporter followed the group through half a day of looking at local cheese factories and warehouses. Hoping for a chance to talk to them personally, the reporter made plans to hitch a ride to Toronto with the group.

Sam Kaporovsky, research director for Black Diamond in Toronto and guardian angel to the Russians during the Quinte area travels, was sympathetic. There was no room for an extra passenger though, in his car. Finally, the problem was settled when two of the Russians agreed to ride in the reporter's car to Toronto.

Eugeni Volkov, interpreter for the group and Superintendent Engineer of the State Committee on Building Affairs for the U.S.S.R. and Nicolas Mylnikov, chief engineer of the State Design Institute on the Milk Industry, drew the short straws among the Russians. Together with their baggage they climbed into the reporter's small scuttleboy and watched wistfully as the other three pulled away in Sam's super-luxury Detroit car.

Their first question was about the speed of the scuttleboy, and they were worried to hear it could make only about 75 mph. They knew Sam's car could do 100 mph and more, and they were sure Sam would cruise at that speed en route to Toronto. They were impressed, the reporter thought, that a young man in Canada could own a car in good condition, but they hastened to say that Russians, too, consider private cars normal. They were curious about, and impressed by, the idea of a capitalist employer helping pay, through mileage allowances, for a worker's car.

HIGHWAY IMPRESSES

Highway 401 impressed the Russians at first. Volkov, the interpreter, took about a dozen photographs of it along the route, in fact.

He was using a 35 mm "Kiev" camera, which bore a remarkable resemblance to one expensive prewar German camera. The company which made the German camera was in the Russian conquered part of Germany.

He hastened to assure the reporter that there were similar roads all over Russia — and said he had taken a vacation trip with his wife, by motorcycle, from Moscow to the Caucasus last year, and had a road equal to the 401 for the whole of the 2,000 mile trip. He took a lot of pictures, but was apparently not impressed, at the service centre when the reporter stopped for gas, Both the Russians were amazed though, that the oil companies provide free road maps.

Long distance travel by road is common in Russia, Volkov said, but apparently the trend has not, as it has in so many industries, harmed the railroads. Russian passenger trains, Volkov said, are faster, more comfortable, smoother running and not require that cars be kept in presentable condition.

Seeing an accident scene in the fast lane, the Russians spotted the police cars and the traffic jam first, and assumed it was a police spot check. They changed their minds when they saw the wrecked cars, but the incident touched off a string of questions about Canadian police.

They were amused by the Ontario drivers' licence, and the drivers' physical description written on it. In Russia, they said, drivers' licences carry a photograph of the driver, and no description.

They were interested, if doubtful, in the reporter's statement that Canadians need not carry passports when they travel within Canada. They burst out laughing when the reporter told them a hotel would not refuse a room to a man travelling without identification — but would probably demand payment in advance.

Hotels interested the Russians, and for good reason. It seems they would be asked for an explanation, on their return, if they spent more than $5 per man per night for hotel rooms — but the Russian Embassy, either didn't know or didn't care about this. Reservations had been made for them, in advance by the Embassy, and the Toronto reservations were in one of the most expensive hotels in the city. The delegates and the room clerk haggled for about fifteen minutes before they settled on two of the hotel's cheapest rooms for the five Russians, at a price the Russians approved of.

The argument embarrassed the Russians not at all; they seemed to consider it quite normal procedure. The hotel clerk handled the affair with the calculated servility that is the trademark of room clerks in exclusive Toronto hotels, but the effect was lost on the delegates.

The Russians throughout the day had been polite and considerate, interested and interesting. They avoided politics — the world crisis — except a few questions and comments on the Moscow (test ban) pact. They consider the underground testing provision destroys the pact's effectiveness, and shows the U.S. plans to continue the arms race.

They showed no reluctance to ask or answer questions about the average man's life in Canada or Russia, but the script might have been written beforehand.

The Russians never said they did not believe what the reporter said, but they never said they did, either.

Their own descriptions of life in Russia might have been a bit rosy - but not so rosy they could not believe themselves. The reporter's impression was that they described Russia as a child might describe the house in which he lives - to a schoolmate he hopes to impress.

The Russians, of course, might have got the same impression of the reporter's comments.

Windsor Man On Probation Gets 2 Months

A 21-year-old Windsor man was sentenced to two months in Belleville this morning for breach of probation.

Roger Bouffard was originally given an 18-month suspended sentence and put on probation when Judge J. C. Anderson last January convicted him of a service station break-in. He was charged along with his brother and another man with burglary November 22nd of Mulroney's service station on East Dundas Street.

Two weeks ago, while still on probation, he was sent to jail in Windsor for assaulting a police officer. Probationary authorities ordered him returned to Belleville after his release to answer for his conduct before Judge Anderson.

Imposing sentence this morning the Judge told Bouffard he had been given every opportunity by the courts to rehabilitate himself but had failed to conduct himself accordingly.

You don't have to float a Volkswagen to prove it's watertight

There's an easier way.

Get in any Volkswagen (even an old one) and try shutting the door with the windows closed.

It won't be easy because the VW is practically airtight.

Try it again, with the window open a little, and the door will close easily, with a satisfying ka-chunk. (Or whatever a solid door says.)

What makes the Volkswagen airtight?

Our factory.

They seal the underside of the car with a sheet of metal. (All the wires and rods you'd expect to find are inside, protected against water and flying stones.) They make doors that fit doorways and tops that fit bottoms. Exactly. And then every weld and bolt is checked and re-checked so that nothing comes loose. Ever.

But don't take our word for it. Visit your nearest VW showroom and try the famous Volkswagen door test.

to continuing declining income because a government fails to realize that these people are Canadians and need equal treatment with farmers in other parts of Canada."

TORIES THROWN OUT

The former Conservative government had tried to grapple with the problem when it was "thrown out of office by the big city vote."

Now the Liberal government "stands petrified before the prospect of doing anything."

While the government gave fixed prices to the Red Chinese and Russians on wheat, Eastern farmers were unable to get fixed prices on feed grain. Prices were going up right now: "wait until the ice comes and (you) will see what happens to the price."

Citing his own experience in both Western and Eastern agriculture—he and a brother once owned five Ontario farms—Mr. Hays stacked it against Mr. Hamilton's.

"... He cannot even milk a cow. Nor would he know how deep to put in a drill to sow an acre of wheat. Nor would he be able to plow a straight furrow."

MORE IN STOCK

As for feed grain, the government now has had more of it in stock at the Lakehead than a year earlier. "Do you can see we are sitting on top of this problem."

As for regional farm problems: "We are taking a good look at the problems of the Eastern farmers."

"... Our agriculture policy has been put together spot by spot ever since 1935. If things went wrong in the Maritimes, we dumped some money over there—and that was the pattern all across Canada.

"We have to take a long look at our agricultural policy from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic coast."

Later, Rene Tremblay — the man already picked for the second agriculture portfolio—provided another dash of policy.

Mr. Tremblay, minister without portfolio, said the government soon will announce changes in its transportation subsidies for Eastern feed grains.

A new structure of subsidies would be introduced to increase competition between water, railway and highway transportation systems. This would cut feed grain prices in Eastern Canada and help Eastern farmers reduce their production costs.

rica's expulsion from the UN.

The minister, Sheikh Kalnta Amri Abedi, said it was "incredible" that the UN should lack the ability or the courage to throw out South Africa, which was unleashing "Hitlerian tortures upon its political victims."

Portugal, another main target of the anti - colonialists, also came under attack on two fronts.

Premier Cyrille Adoula of The Congo charged in a press statement that Portugal is threatening to sezitle large ships at the mouth of the Congo River, thus denying his country access to the sea.

He said the action would "have for pretext" the assistance The Congo is giving to rebels in neighboring Portuguese Angola.

In the assembly itself, President Moktar Moktar Ould Dadah of Mauritania promised that his country would spare no effort in aiding liberation movements in Angola and other Portuguese territories in Africa.

manager for the Canadian wheat board, said he expected the St. Lawrence ports will meet their designated shipping target before the winter freeze.

About half the 90 ships in Montreal harbor Monday were either bringing wheat to the elevators or taking it out. Normally, wheat ships form about a quarter of the fall fleet.

LIFT EMBARGO

Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways Monday lifted their embargo on cargo shipments destined through the St. Lawrence ports.

The ILA strike, the first in Montreal since 1936, surprised both shippers and some longshoremen. It was ended Saturday when the largest of Montreal's three longshoremen's locals voted overwhelmingly to accept the proposals of federal mediator Judge Rene Lippe.

Even then, the small checkers local—checkers are the supervisors—held up loading of cargo—held out for a few extra cents for their own members before deciding to join other locals in ending the strike.

Judge Lippe's proposals were for a three-year contract giving the longshoremen a 10 - cent hourly raise in each year, plus changes in overtime rules and vacation pay plans, and a promise of a federal government inquiry into the longshoremen's pension plan.

The checkers got a 12-cent raise for this year and 11 cents in each of the two following years.

Thomas (Teddy) Gleason, the ILA's international president, flew from New York to sit in on the final negotiations and he called the contract one of the most lucrative package deals ever negotiated in Canada.

The Shipping Federation of Canada, representing the 30 lines that employ the longshoremen, agreed. Their chief negotiator, Edward H. Strang, said "this is the most expensive settlement we have ever signed."

He estimated it will cost the federation 56 cents an hour for each man by the time the contract ends in December, 1965.

Longshoremen earned $2.33 an hour under their last contract, which expired Dec. 31, 1962, and had 29 cents an hour extra in fringe benefits.

They originally demanded an hourly raise of 35 cents, plus a 10-cent boost in fringe benefits.

Canadian Guards in Full Dress to Troop Color

CAPT PICTON — Scarlet tunics, white belts, bearskin headdress and blue trousers, a full dress uniform of The Canadian Guards will brighten the scene for the Trooping of the Color of their 1st Battalion at Camp Picton, Ont., on Oct. 19.

Although it is the Regimental Color of the 1st Battalion which is being trooped, it will be a Regimental family affair with members of the 2nd Battalion, their Pipes and Drums, and the Regimental Band, from Camp Petawawa, Ont., also taking part.

Lieutenant - Colonel H. W. Mulherin, Commanding Officer of the 1st Battalion, will command the parade for the troopist.

It will be the first time that a Trooping the Color will be performed in Prince Edward County by troops of the Regular Army wearing full dress uniforms.

In this ancient ceremony the Color, carried by the Junior Ensign (Pro Lieutenant), is paraded in slow time along the front of three "Guards" of the battalion, escorted by No. 1 "Guard" marching through their ranks.

Following this the troops will march past the reviewing officer, first in slow time, then in quick time.

The Regimental Color of the 1st Battalion is the Union Jack with the badge of No. 1 Company (a sprig of gold maple leaves and the crown) in the centre. It was presented to the unit on October 5, 1957, by the Right Honorable Vincent Massey, then Governor-General of Canada.

BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

The trooping is in honor of the birthday of The Regiment of Canadian Guards and is taking place on the Saturday closest to the actual birthdate of Oct. 16 which will be their 10th anniversary.

It is the only occasion on which the Regimental - Sergeant - Major ever draws his sword in peace time. He does so to salute the Color when he receives and hands it over the Ensign.

Last year the Color was trooped by the 1st Battalion at Fort York, Scout, Germany, where they were serving with the Canadian NATO Brigade.

The regimental birthday celebrations include an all ranks Ball to be held in the Picton Armoury on the evening of Thursday, Oct. 17; private receptions following the trooping for official guests at the officers' mess, sergeants' mess and men's mess. On the evening of the 19th private balls for members and their guests will be held in both the officers' and sergeants' messes.

The Regiment of Canadian Guards was created on Oct. 16, 1953, with the redesignation of two battalions of infantry of the line and the activation of two new battalions.

The 1st Battalion was formed from a nucleous of officers and men of the 3rd Battalion, The Royal Canadian Regiment, while the 2nd Battalion was similarly formed from the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

5 DIFFERENT COMPANIES

The 3rd and 4th Battalions, The Canadian Guards were formed from the 1st and 2nd Canadian Infantry Battalions which had been raised in 1951 and '52 for service in Germany with the Canadian NATO Brigade. They were originally composed of five different companies representing the following militia infantry units: the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Les Fusiliers Mont Royal, the Carleton and York Regiment, the Algonquin Regiment, and the Loyal Edmonton Regiment.

Two old and famous Regiments of Foot Guards of the militia were incorporated into The Canadi . Guards in the 1954 reorganization of the Canadian Arr.y Militia. The Governor General's Foot Guards, Ottawa, became the 5th Battalion, and The Ca.adian Grenadier Guards, Montreal, became the 6th Battalion, The Canadian Guards.

The Regiment of Canadian Guards is linked with the five regiments of Foot Guards of the British Army and is a member of Her Majesty's Household Troops.

In the 1957 reorganization of the Regular Army the 3rd and 4th Battalions, The Canadian Guards were reduced to nil strength and their members allotted to the 1st and 2nd Battalions and other Canadian Army units.

The Regiment now has only two active battalions, the 1st in Camp Picton and the 2nd in Petawawa.

The 2..d Battalion served in Germany with Canada's NATO Brigade from 1957 to '59 being replaced by the 1st Battalion which served there until the fall of 1962. The 6th Battalion served with the United Nations Force in Cyprus from April to November 1964.

To Curl or Not to Curl

By DORIS CLARE

DORIS CLARE

DEAR DORIS — I read your column every week and find it very informative.

Some of my family insist that I curl in the High School Bonspiel and as I cannot find any more excuses, I guess that I will have to. I have only curled one game in my life before, so I would appreciate any information you could send me.—STUCK WITH IT.

DEAR STUCK — It's not a life sentence. Curling is for fun. Any sport improves on better acquaintance. Ask a friend who plays to tell you more about it.

If you Stick With It you'll probably get Stuck On It.

DEAR DORIS — I have a boy eight and a little girl five. A neighbor who is a very close friend has one son age 12 years. I didn't think I would have to warn my daughter about any boy in the neighborhood and especially him.

One day about two months ago he was looking after his little sister and my daughter. A few days after she remarked that Billie had put his hand on her body as if to feel her; he also wanted her to feel him. It seems this has happened more than once.

When I tried to explain that this wasn't right she then realized that I was upset (which I was almost sick to my stomach). She got upset and for the life of me I didn't know if I should tell her that it's bad of this boy to act this way or not.

How can I explain this to her, and that she must stay away from him? Should I talk to the boy and warn him that if he should ever bother her again I will inform his parents, or should I take a chance on losing a good friend and confront him with this in front of his mother? I can't sleep worrying about what he might do if he gets her alone. — VERY UPSET.

DEAR UPSET — Do neither. His mother is your friend. Talk to her, assuming that her boy is expressing a normal sex curiosity. If she admits she not been frank with him — thus driving his own enquiry underground, as it were — suggest she seek professional counsel.

In this day and age, parents have much to answer for when they allow their own embarrassment about sex to shortchange their children. Until the boy has been straightened out, quietly see that your daughter is in other, more mature hands, when she is not with you.

DEAR DORIS — I am plain; my hair is straight; my eyes pale. Figure not bad. You say everybody can be good looking. I say all but me. What do you suggest? — PLAIN JANE.

* * *

DEAR JANE — A new hairdo. Complexion care. Make-up which highlights your good features, tones down the not-so-perfect. I am sending you a leaflet by an expert — "Make-up Magic" — which suggests how you do this.

Note to Readers: I have more copies of this helpful leaflet. You may have one for ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR DORIS — Before we moved I attended a school to which I walked. I still attend the same school by taking the bus, even though I live near a different one.

My parents both want me to change schools to save on bus fare. Do you think it is selfish of me to stay at the same school, even though I have to take the bus? — SELFISH OR NOT.

DEAR SELFISH OR NOT — Has it occurred to you that a change of schools might mean a whole new set of adventures in friendship — even though our first impulse is to cling to the familiar?

Find out about the new school. More than the bus fare should be weighed in the balance. Other things being equal, I'd say it's being selfish to stay.

DEAR DORIS — I am 17. My problem is my mother. She won't let me date boys of any sort.

The other night I met a very nice boy and he asked to walk me home. I allowed him and he asked to see me again. I told my mother about it in the morning and she nearly had a fit. So I had to write to the boy and tell him I can't see him again. The same goes with every boy that I meet.

I have never been very close to my mother and I don't know how to talk to her about anything. I try a lot but it always ends the same, in a quarrel and with me crying.

I have never done anything wrong to lose my mother's trust and I don't want to start now. Please help me, Doris. — DESPERATE.

DEAR DESPERATE — Did you just pick up that "nice boy"? Believe me, your mother has your own good in mind when she issues orders. Probably feels as badly as you about the quarrels.

Keep trying. Ask her permission and help in having a small mixed party of young people you have met in a contact with she approves. It is tragic for the two of you to miss being chums in what could be wonderful years for both of you.

* * *

(Don't just muddle through. Ask Doris about a better way to handle your particular human problem.)

Stripes...

are very big this year

Stripes are definitely "in". But they can't be just any old stripes. They must have the big, bold, British look so much in the style news these days.

Here are two prime examples . . .

Above, narrow stripes in alternating colours set wide apart on white background. Colour combinations include maroon and grey, brown and black, blue and navy, black and grey.

Below, alternating stripes of white and colour. Stripes are a full 1/16 inch broader than last year's. Choose from vibrant tones of maroon, brown, blue, black and grey.

You can get these new stripes in several popular collar styles. Shown is the Tabber in 100% combed cotton, $6 suggested retail.

Caution: These stripes are probably bolder than anything you've worn before. Plan to wear them with solid colour ties, or ties featuring a minimum of design.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: When "At Home" cards are included with formal wedding announcements, is there any connotation that friends who receive them are expected to send wedding presents, even though they had not been invited to the wedding or reception? I'd like to include these cards with the announcements, but I'm not sure what significance people will attach to them, and I certainly don't want them to think they are especial to respond with gifts. — M. R. C., Miami, Fla.

Answer: "At Home" cards are included with wedding announcements only to advise friends and acquaintances of the new address of the bride and groom. Congratulatory notes are often sent in response, but most people are knowledgeable enough at this point to know that a gift is not required or expected.

Question: We're giving our daughter a large "sweet-sixteen" party, and sister and her husband will be on hand to assist us in serving and the like. I planned to stand near the door with my daughter to receive her guests. Is it necessary to ask my sister to help receive with us? I'm afraid a receiving line, as such, would be a trifle formal for a young party, but I don't want to hurt her feelings in any way, in case she expects to be accorded this honor. — Mrs. W. H., Philadelphia, Pa.

Answer: It's only necessary for mother and daughter to receive. A longer line would be much too pretentious. Your sister, meantime, might show guests where to hang their coats and along with the two men, see that guests meet each other and generally help get the party warmed up. After everyone has arrived, the grown-ups usually do a disappearing act into the next room to get refreshments ready and chaperone from a distance, so the youngsters won't feel they're putting a crimp in the party.

Question: I'm in the midst of sending out thank-you notes for shower gifts and wedding presents. There are so many presents, I'm afraid I'll never be able to acknowledge all of them before the wedding. So I'm looking for short cuts. For instance, I'm considering about a half-dozen "group" presents, meaning that one gift was sent by several friends. In this case, must each of the donors be thanked individually or may I send one a note and request that she thank the others on my behalf? — E. E. C., Trenton, N. J.

Answer: When it comes to courtesy, I don't believe in short - cuts. If several friends contributed to one present, then each person whose name appeared on the card should be thanked individually.

Question: My husband and I were guests of another couple in a restaurant recently. As we were having a cocktail before dinner, another couple we know stopped by the table and instead of just saying hello, had the waiter draw up chairs and they could sit down. They ordered a drink, and finally left when we decided to order dinner. Even though our host did not know them, he refused to let them pay for their drinks. My husband and I naturally felt very embarrassed about the incident, and wonder if we should offer to reimburse him for the added expense. — Mrs. H. N., Boston, Mass.

Answer: It was very rude of the other couple to join a group without being invited. But since the host behaved so graciously, he could be in bad taste to offer to pay, but it would be polite to send the hostess a thank-you note both for their hospitality and understanding.

CLARKE — RODGERS

St. Thomas Anglican Church, Belleville, was the setting for a lovely wedding recently when Sharon Rita Rodgers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Rodgers, Belleville, was united in marriage to Robert Earl Clarke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clarke, Trenton. Archdeacon A. S. McConnell officiated at the double-ring ceremony before the alternate of white 'mums and ferns. White satin bows designated the guest pews.

Mr. Davenport, church organist, rendered the traditional wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, Mr. Percy Rodgers, wore a floor-length bridal gown of peau de soie with the bodice featuring a square neckline and long lily-point sleeves. Her veil was held by a crown studded with crystals. She carried a bouquet of red roses and trailing ivy.

Mrs. Allen Baker of Trenton, as matron of honor was dressed in a yellow organza street-length dress with matching shoes. Her headdress was of white nylon net gathered and tied with a bow. Miss Betty Rodgers, sister of the bride, and Miss Margie Thompson as bridesmaids, were dressed alike in green organza dresses with matching shoes and headdresses of white nylon net. Each carried a bouquet of yellow roses and white mums. The little flower girl was Miss Debbie Rodgers, sister of the bride who was dressed in a white organza frock flecked with lily-of-the-valley. Her headdress was a band of net adorned with lily-of-the-valley. She carried a basket of yellow and white mums and fern.

The groomsman was Mr. Gerry Baker of Trenton, and the ushers were Mr. Brian Rodgers, brother of the bride, of Belleville, and Mr. Ron Richaud. The bride's little brother, Master Terrance Rodgers, was ring-bearer, who wore a navy blue suit and carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

The reception was held in St. Thomas parish hall where the bride's table was prettily appointed with white damask cloth centred with a miniature wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom and flanked about the base with table intermingled with baby asters. The bridal attendants completed the nuptial setting. The bride's mother received the guests wearing a dress of aline beige print with matching shoes and hat and corsage of pink carnations. She was assisted by the bride and groom's mother who wore a two-piece dress of blue brocade with matching shoes and hat, and a corsage of pink carnations.

U.C.W. Meeting

JOHNSTOWN — At the recent meeting of Johnstown U.C.W., Mrs. Cooper, wife of the pastor at Wallbridge was the guest speaker whose talk referring to Paul in the book of Colossians told of the many problems of the division of churches as is today. She enquired as to what could be done about it and how to increase the number of church goers.

Mrs. Everett Harry expressed appreciation to the speaker and presented her with a lovely set of towels and carriage which she had made.

Mrs. Ken Suckle was in charge of the devotional portion of the meeting.

Thank-you cards were received from Mrs. Ed Hinchcliffe for card sent to Mr. Huffman while in Kingston Hospital and from Mrs. Cole. Invitations were received from Centenary U.C.W. to attend their meeting on October 9; from Foxboro U.C.W. to attend their bazaar on November 6 and from Stockdale U.C.W. to attend their tea and sale on November 6. Delegates were appointed to attend the Presbytery convention and these are Mrs. William S. Harry, Mrs. Ronald Hamilton and Mrs. Alex Vandervoort.

The November meeting will be a family night.

Mrs. MacDonald the hostess for the meeting was thanked for her hospitality.

DIRECTIONS FOR DINNER NO. 1 FOR TWO:

Roast Chicken: Buy an oven-ready 3½-lb. roaster. Stuffing: Sauté gently in 2 tablespoons bacon fat of good flavor (not at all burned) 2 tablespoons each chopped chives and parsley and 1 finely chopped celery stalk. In 2 minutes add ½ cup raw brown or white rice and continue sauteing for 3 more minutes. Add ¾ teaspoon each curry powder and pepper, ¼ teaspoon rosemary leaves, ½ teaspoon salt. Stir until bacon fat is absorbed by rice then add 1 cup boiling water. Cover tightly and turn off heat for 5 minutes. Turn on heat to very low and cook 20 minutes longer. While hot, fill chicken with this stuffing and skewer the opening shut. Tie wings and legs to body. Brush skin with butter, sprinkle with paprika and bake uncovered, no water in pan, at 325 deg. Fahr. for 2 hours, basting twice.

After dinner before putting leftover chicken away, pull the meat from the bones, wrap carefully in foil and freeze for next week's chicken pies (see Tuesday, October 22nd). Make soup from the carcass, see below.

ITALIAN FRENCH DRESSING:
One cup salad or olive oil, ¼ cup each lemon juice and vinegar, 1 clove garlic, sliced, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 tablespoons sugar. Shake well before using.

HOMEMADE CHICKEN SOUP:

To the bony carcass of one roasted chicken, add 6 cups cold water, 2 tablespoons each raw rice and barley, ½ cup each chopped onions, celery, carrots, tomatoes and dry noodles, 2½ teaspoons salt, 2 chicken bouillon cubes and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Simmer until all are tender. Pour through large strainer to facilitate removing all bones. Return all other ingredients to broth, reheat and serve for lunch or supper.

Woman Enters Specialized Branch of Railroading

TORONTO (CP) — Elizabeth Cusk had two things going for her when she sought to enter a specialized branch of railroading—one that had been a male preserve—in 1952.

The job was that of a circuit designer in the signal department of the CNR.

This is a highly specialized field even for men and there didn't happen to be a man available. And as one of the few graduate electrical engineers among women in Canada, Mrs. Cusk had the necessary qualifications.

"There aren't too many people around who have experience in this work," she says. "I was lucky to apply when they happened to need somebody. If there had been a man who could do the work I don't know if I would have got the job."

Her work involves designing traffic control offices, each of which controls the movements of trains for several hundred miles. The red, yellow and green train signal lights along the tracks and the warning signals for motorists are part of the control system.

FLED HUNGARY

She held the same position with the Hungarian railway and her husband, whom she met at the University of Budapest, was running a successful machine business before the Hungarian uprising in 1956.

And although their futures were safe in the Communist country, they were dissatisfied with life there and decided to leave, arriving in Toronto in 1957.

Biggest obstacle here was language. "English is very hard for a Hungarian to learn," Mrs. Cusk says. "The grammar, the sentence construction, they're completely different."

By early 1963 she had enough confidence in her English to try an engineering exam. She got her certificate and now is a member of the Canadian Association of Professional Engineers.

The Cusks had practically no money when they arrived in Toronto. Today Charles Cusk has a growing tool and die business. They have their own house which they share with Mrs. Cusk's parents whom they managed to bring to Canada in 1958. The couple plans to take out Canadian citizenship papers in November.

Next step for Elizabeth Cusk may be the realization of a dream—building her own model railway complete with automatic signalling equipment.

The bulletin was read by the president, and needs were mentioned. A missionary letter was read by Mrs. K. Wright from her missionary pen pal in Africa. Tracts were distributed as well as material.

Aim of TV Series to Get Quebec Family Out of Dark Pit of Financial Ignorance

By GERARD McNEIL

QUEBEC (CP)—This winter many Quebec families will tune their television sets to Andre Lauzin and his series on family finances.

Their buying and borrowing habits may never be the same again.

"It certainly will have an effect," says Marcel Caron, an executive with the Federation des Caisses-Populaires Desjardins.

The federation of 1,300 credit unions which hold $870,000,000 in Quebec savings is sponsoring the series jointly with the growing 150,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions.

Both are powerful and influential Quebec-first groups, the federation slightly conservative and the CNTU mildly socialistic.

Their aim is to get the Quebec family out of the dark pit of financial ignorance.

The CNTU, in an independent study, has found many of its members in financial trouble. It is looking for a solution not in wage increases but in the way present wages are used.

FAMILIES BREAK UP

Looking on with interest is the Quebec government, now providing credit aid to nine or 10 per cent of Quebec's 1,100,000 families.

J. Edgar Guay, deputy minister of family and social welfare, says marriages are breaking up because of money and to orphanages because of financial troubles in these families.

He regards the Lauzin program as a pioneer educational effort.

Whether it has good or bad effects, Mr. Guay says, it will at least point the way for further efforts.

While Andre Laurin "awakens people to the high-pressure appeals," says Mr. Caron, the federation itself has started an education program aimed at getting consumers to change their attitudes towards credit.

"The average working man wage in Quebec is $4,200 but the image presented on television is that of a $6,000 life. He is being crushed between this mass publicity and his salary.

"He tries to evolve to fit this image, but how can he on a $4,200 wage?"

PATH TO SOLVENCY

Mr. Laurin's series will run on the same privately owned network on which Real Caouette etched himself in the Quebec voter's mind.

Like Mr. Caouette, he lathers "financial sharks." But where the Rouyn car dealer advocated a change in the economic system as a solution to such woes, Mr. Laurin simply and in detail lists the steps that lead out of debt.

He sketches credit laws, using examples to illustrate how they are broken or avoided; details sharp practices by finance companies, retail outlets and moneylending salesmen; and drums home the responsibility of the wage earner to his family.

The basic idea is to educate Quebec families financially, but the over-shadowing side effect may be to change borrowing and buying patterns radically.

After a trial run in the Saguenay region, Mr. Laurin says, business for finance companies fell off .60 per cent and three furniture stores depending on a high-pressure approach failed.

The Laurin program coincides with efforts to get credit unions to put more liberal lending policies into effect.

LOANS INCREASE

The new policy has been reflected in such places as Asbestos, a mining town where credit unions last spring made 73 loans totalling $80,000 in two weeks. Three of four went to finance cars.

He and Mr. Caron stress that it is a positive program, aimed at instilling better habits in Quebecers.

"We aren't fighting finance companies," says Mr. Laurin, "but because of education, we are taking away their business."

Mr. Caron says the test of Mr. Laurin's program will be whether it has a deep, lasting effect on the consumer. He believes that if it just turns them toward credit unions, it will not be fully effective.

"If someone comes to us and tells us he is going to drown himself," says Mr. Caron, "we're not going to supply the boat. We'll try to talk him out of it."

Mr. Laurin is training squads of volunteers to do the same thing. They'll drill home in parish halls across the province the correct attitude towards credit as he captures an audience on television.

Home Swamped

WELLAND (CP)—A housewife here has just emerged with a shudder from a burglar's nightmare which threatened to bury her in telephone directories.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lougheed have but one telephone in their home.

The postman arrived on three successive days with a bundle of nine new phone books each day. When Mrs. Lougheed telephoned the post office to protest, she was told another bundle of nine directories was on its way.

A call to the telephone company stammered the flow and the company retrieved all but one book. Apparently a mailing machine deep in the automated recesses of the company had gone out of its electronic mind.

A final convulsion sent yet another directory to the Lougheeds the day after telephone company and post office had rallied a halt.

Mrs. Lougheed surrendered and kept it as a spare.

SHIPBUILDING UP

OTTAWA (CP) — Shipbuilding activity in Canada increased substantially in 1962, Transport Minister McIlraith informed the Commons Monday in a return for Robert Beaule (Creditiste-Quebec East). The return showed that 16 ships with total gross tonnage of 105,909 were built in Canadian shipyards in 1962. This compared with eight ships and 70,270 gross tons the previous year. All ships built in the two years were registered in Canada.

Ann Landers

Christmas Planning Brings No Cheer to This Household

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband and I believe in planning ahead. We are now arguing about Christmas cards.

All the years we have been married we've had our cards printed with our name appearing first. For example: "Greetings from Dorothy and Dick." My husband says it's time I gave him top-billing for a change and have the cards read, "Greetings from Dick and Dorothy."

I was under the impression that the woman's name is supposed to appear first as a matter of etiquette. Dick says I am wrong about this and it's just a matter of which way we want to do it. Will you please settle the argument in a hurry? — TIRED OF FIGHTING.

DEAR TIRED — I do hope these words reach you in time. There are only 84 days left until Christmas.

On printed cards the woman's name should appear first. Since your husband would like his name to appear first for a change (big deal) you could please him by hand-signing the cards. It is correct for the person who signs for himself and another person to place the other person's name first.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — A certain woman who works in this office hates me because I have a terrific figure and I eat anything I want while she starves herself to death and looks like a black truck.

This woman is always trying to put me in bot water with the office manager. If I am five minutes late in the morning she reports me. If I overstay my coffee break three minutes she reports me. Last night I left ten minutes early because the weather was threatening and I had a chance to ride home with a friend. I received a memo about it the first thing this morning.

My work is top-notch and I'm twice as fast and three times as efficient as any girl in this office. I'm not pinning any medals on myself, Ann, but I just happen to be an excellent typist. How should I deal with the trouble-maker? — VICTIM OF JEALOUSY.

DEAR VICTIM — If you are twice as fast and three times as efficient as any girl in the office two minutes here and three minutes there will not put you in hot water.

Defang the informer by reporting to the office manager any of your irregularities before she gets the chance.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm a 16-year-old girl who is being pestered to death by a creep who won't give up. To make matters worse my mother thinks this boy is great.

Last week when he called I was not at home. He asked my mother if I had a date from Friday night. She suggested he call me back the next day. I've told her a dozen times not to give him any encouragement. She should have told the pest that I did have a date for Friday. The next day when he called I had to accept because mom had put me on the spot.

I don't enjoy this boy's company. He is so sweet and attentive he makes me sick. He embarrasses me by bringing gifts. I want to get rid of him for keeps but I don't know how. Help! Please! — FIXIE FACE.

DEAR FACE — Girls who write and ask how to get rid of a fellow don't really want to.

It's flattering to be sought after (even by a creep) so you give him that "go away closer" routine. A girl who wants to be left alone does not accept gifts from a boy nor does she go out with him and blame her mother. "No" is one of the shortest, and most effective words in the English language. You ought to try it some time, Babe.

To learn the bobby-traps of teenage drinking, write for Ann Landers' booklet "Teenage Drinking," enclosing with your request 30 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Melrose

MELROSE — Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Osborn attended anniversary services at Gilead United Church and visited with Mrs. Stanley Macdonald.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Embury visited on Friday with friends at Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. Alec Embury and Miss Evelyn Embury, of Toronto, spent last weekend with Mr. and Mrs. E. Embury.

Miss Bernice Corbett of Cobourg, and Mrs. W. Morden of Belleville were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Milligan.

Mrs. Arthur English returned home on Thursday from a three-months' visit with her daughter, husband and family, in Denmark.

Mr. Lou, of Ottawa, and Mr. and Mrs. McNairn of Morristown, N.Y., recently visited at their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Robinson and Mr. and Mrs. Sherry Demille.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Demille had as their Sunday guests Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Milligan of Hay Bay.

Mr. Newton Thompson attended the H.C. meeting at Melrose Church on Friday evening and showed slides of his trip to Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Turner, all of Belleville, attended church service at Melrose on Sunday morning and were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Demille.

Some from the community attended Glen at Madoc and Tweed last week. Ideal weather prevailed for both these late fall fairs.

Mrs. Jack McLaren, accompanied by Mrs. R. Badgley and Mrs. G. Demille, attended a thankoffering service at Selby U.C.W. on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reid of Napanee called on Ken McMechan on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Harold McMechan and Mrs. K. McMechan attended anniversary service at Ebenezer on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Scarlett of Deer Mills spent the weekend at the home of Mrs. A. English and Mr. and Mrs. William English.

RECEIVED INTO CHURCH

At the church service on Sunday morning, eight young men and five young girls were received into the Melrose United Church. Five christenings were performed, also, by the visiting pastor, the Rev. Poulter. Those received into the church were: Misses Linda Osborne, Linda Pascoe, Janice Macfarlane, Judy Cook and Sally Cook; Messrs. John Ewglish, Carman Milligan, Paul Howard, Steven McLennan, Robert McLaren, Ronald Demille, Harold Pascoe and Wayne

"Just a Second"

For Women Only

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Mrs. William La Fleur, 25, has opened her own driving school—for women only.

"Women learn more slowly, but they retain it longer," she said. Most are very precise."

She has taught many men to drive, including her husband.

Male pupils?

"Men have better reflexes, learn quickly, but have a tendency to get wild once they know how."

Pascoe. The christenings were: the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McMechan (Donna Mae) and the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Macfarlane (Robert Vernon). Three of the young girls, Judy Cook, Sally Cook and Linda Pascoe received the rite of baptism. Mr. Steven assisted Mr. Poulter in this service. A large congregation was present for this special service, as they joined with churches of the world in world wide communion.

How Arab Makes a Living Guiding Tourists in Morocco

By ROD CURRIE

TANGIER, Morocco (CP) — His name is Ahmed. He's 23 and handsome. Already he has been married and divorced.

He says he's a businessman, and indeed he is. He wears a flashy watch but he forgets to wind it. Sometimes he's not quite sure what day it is, but it doesn't matter.

His stock-in-trade is his unfailing ability to spot a tourist at 100 yards, his charming smile and his English—sometimes much better than average among Moroccan Arabs.

Ahmed slips easily into step as you stroll amid the clatter of sidewalk cafes and shops along Tangier's main street, drinking in the evening view of the Strait of Gibraltar.

He's a man with nothing to do, going nowhere in particular. Although rather short, he's a striking figure in his flowing brown-and-white djellabah, its great hood draped across the shoulders.

SLICK COME-ON

He chats amiably, and finally says: "Would you like to see the Casbah?" This is Ahmed the businessman and already the fringe of the notorious Arab quarter is in sight.

A night trip to the Casbah is intriguing, but still fresh is the warning of the Spanish bartender in the posh downtown hotel.

"Never trust an Arab," he said facetiously. "If you want a tour, get a licensed guide at a fee and you will be safe."

You decline Ahmed's offer and instead buy him a coffee. He relaxes in the grand manner, sips his sweet drink and talks easily about himself. He has a hunch you are going to take that tour.

Before he became a "businessman" he was coffee maker in a Casbah cafe. His ambition is to become a drummer but he has no drums.

He was married when he was 18, his wife 16. "Sometimes I love her," he says philosophically, "and if I no buy her a drink she is much angry—so, I buy her a drink."

SCHOOLING USELESS

He added "all I learned was the Koran—it was a waste of my time." He learned English himself and boasts that he reads it "almost as good as I talk."

Ahmed is one of a band of thousands of Arabs who roam Tangier picking up tips, the occasional free drink or cigarette from tourists. He brings a kickback from shop owners who make a sale to a tourist he brings. On the side, Ahmed is a salesman, dealing usually in cheap watches and transistor radios are legal but illegal in Gibraltar and somehow find their way into his hands.

You suggest a drink and remember too late that it is against the law for Arabs to have liquor. But Ahmed knows a place, of course.

First he must change out of his djellabah. Instantly he is in his fast leading the way down slim side streets, some streets so narrow you can touch the walls on either side. Through dank passageways, under shadowy arches, past stalls smelling of coffee and cheese and livestock.

NO TURNING BACK

Your life flashes before your eyes but if you are nervous about pressing on you are more nervous about turning back into the unfathomable maze that seems to be closing behind you.

Finally a low, brown doorway. When you hesitate Ahmed strikes a match and leads the way up a spiral staircase.

His simple home, two rooms, is by contrast a revelation. Everything spotlessly clean, a blaze of color in furnitures and draperies set against sparkling-white stucco walls. He introduces his cat, also Ahmed, and an untamed green bird in a cage by the window overlooking the mosque silhouetted against the night sky.

Ahmed slips off the djellabah revealing neat blue slacks and sport shirt.

At the cellar bar—a sort of bootlegger's establishment selling liquor illegally to Arabs—other customers eye you silently and suspiciously.

The unsmiling proprietor serves a horrible mixture of gin and thick, warm orange syrup. He tabulates the bill on the wooden counter with chalk and draws an X through it when you pay.

Back at your hotel Ahmed stops 10 paces away, knowing that to enter would mean the bum's rush. You've had your tour, wanted or not, and now you must pay. How much?

You slip him five dirhams—about $1. He looks neither pleased nor disappointed, instead rather hurt that money should pass between old friends.

But he pockets it swiftly and, smiling, walks off whistling to himself.

TORONTO INTELLIGENCER, Tuesday, October 15, 1963 11

Tomorrow another tourist, or maybe a transistor radio. If not, at Casbah prices the five dirhams will feed Ahmed and the untamed bird for days—until something turns up.

Income Tax Explained

A column designed and written for the working persons, who are not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an income Tax Office.

By C. A. MILLER

Former Supervising Assessor Income Tax Department

Taxpayers who have received a refund of their pension plan contributions during the taxation year often, either report them as income or not report them at all.

The employer making such refunds should clearly indicate on the T 4 slip "Refund of Pension Plan Contributions." When the taxpayer receives such a T4 slip, he should first check to see if Section 36 of the Income Tax Act will be of benefit to him in having the refund. When applying this section, the average rate of tax paid over the preceding 3 years is used to compute the tax on the refund. If the taxpayer does not have copies of his last three years returns he should write to the Income Tax Office where his returns were filed and ask them to fill in form TX 15A and request that it be advised as to the amount of his pension refund, they will compute the tax according to Section 36. When tax is computed under Section 36 this tax is added to his ordinary tax and forms a tax adjustment. The amount of the pension refund is then not included with his net income.

A wife who was married during the year and was not employed before hand, but did receive a refund of her pension contributions, should in all cases have this refund taxed under Section 36. When she pays this special tax on the pension refund, it comes in to income in her hands, thereby allowing her husband to claim the full $1000 exemption for her. Section 36 not only is applied to pension contribution refunds but also to payments on retirement in recognition of long service and payments in a lump sum from an employers profit sharing plan.

QUESTION 1 — I have all my prior years returns. How do I compute the tax on my pension contributions that I received in a lump sum refund in 1962?

ANSWER—Total your net income for the years 1958, 1959 1960 and 1961. Total your gross tax before deductions for the same years. Then multiply the total tax by the refund received and divide the result by the total income. The result is the exact tax on your refund of pension contributions.

QUESTION 2 — I received a lump sum from my employer in lieu of notice for loss of office. Is this sum taxable at a special rate?

ANSWER — YES. Apply section 36 of the tax act as outlined above.

All letters of inquiry will be answered if a self addressed and stamped (5 cents) envelope is enclosed.

CAMPBELLFORD

OPP Will Assist in Policing Town Until Constables Hired

CAMPBELLFORD — Applications for the position of Police Constable for the Town of Campbellford were referred to the Police Committee for their consideration, at a special meeting of Town Council last week.

Mayor Stanley Tanner stated he had been in touch with the Attorney - General's Department and was assured that this department would co-operate with Campbellford in policing the town during the present shortage of manpower. He had L-westigated the cost of having the Ontario Provincial Police and found it would cost about $18,000 a year. This year's budget figure is $16,600.

Considerable discussion ensued relative to the amount of assistance the Ontario Provincial police will render on a temporary basis, but no answers were forthcoming. The clerk was instructed to find out immediately what the situation is or will be.

Mr. W. G. Vandewater, president of the Campbellford Citizens' Band, appeared on their behalf requesting the municipal subsi-y. He said that the band had been re - organized under the direction of J. M. Benoit as leader. In response to a previous request from council, Mr. Vandewater gave a statement of band assets and officers, and said th.t the financial statement would be published in detail. The town grant of one - third will was added to the pay - sheet on motion.

A letter from the Ontario Hydro gave reasons for the increased cost of street lighting which the letter explained, is not a fixed charge but depends on the annual cost. Hasty Pees Hold Reunion In Peterborough

Upwards of 200 veterans of the famous Hasty-Pee Regiment gathered in the armouries at Peterborough over the Thanksgiving weekend for their 18th annual reunion. It also commemorated the 20th anniversary of the landings in Sicily. It was decided to invite guests of honor, the senior living officer who was there and a private. G. Fenton, of Charlie Company, was chosen as the chief guest. He landed with the regiment on the beach at Pachino and fought with the unit until Dec. '44, when he was taken prisoner at the Lamone River battle and not released until cessation of hostilities in '45. His brother, Cpl. R. Fenton, Mortar Platoon, was repairing a broken telephone line, near Nieuwmilleyen, Germany in April 1945, in the evening when he was killed. He was the last Hasty-Pee killed in action. Lord Tweedsmuir was invited as the senior officer, but was unable to be here. Mr. G. Fenton took the salute at the march past with Lt.-Col. A. A. Kennedy on the saluting stand with him.

Saturday the boys registered, met their old pals and attended the dance in the evening. On Sunday, the general meeting was held in the Royal Canadian Legion Hall. A number of letters were read from members, who could not be present; the minutes and financial statements were read and then President Tony Basciano handed over the chair to Angus Duffy for the election of the 1964 executive.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT PRESIDENT

Harold Dracup was elected president and Austin White secretary - treasurer. It was decided to hold the next reunion in Belleville and that a chairman be appointed to form a reunion committee. Bob Emerson was elected chairman and will be assisted by his committee in the near future. Under general business several good ideas were put forward and adopted. In future the members' ladies will be able to register for tickets for the dinner and accompany their husbands to the dinner.

Lt.-Col. Angus Duffy said that as close as he could recall, the landings were made on a Saturday and proposed that all members who were there would, if possible wear the regimental tie every Saturday from now on. He also stated that ties, bowties, crests and scarves were in good supply at the Officers' Mess at the Hasty-Pee trumpet band, paraded through the streets of Peterborough to the Cenotaph, where a Memorial Service was held. The weather was ideal. After the service, the regiment had its march past and paraded back to the armouries. Dinner was served by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Royal Canadian Legion in the Legion Hall and it was a delectable turkey dinner enjoyed by everyone. After the meal, they returned to the armouries where they had their final get togethers, good-byes and plans to meet again at the next reunion in Belleville.

A.N.A.F. Weekly News

Reports from the sick committee indicate that there are no additions to the sick list. Comrades Brenton and MacKay are still in the Belleville General Hospital, "Wargy" O'Brien in the Kingston General Hospital and Bert Wells at Sunnybrook Hospital in Toronto. They are all doing along as well as possible and have been looked after by the sick committee.

Last spring a jubilant and triumphant aggregate of teams of the unit celebrated a completed sweep of the trophies put up for semi-annual competition between the ANAF Unit 201 and the 48th Old Boys' Association. On Saturday morning the unit embussed for the tussle in Toronto full of high hopes and enthusiasm, hoping to repeat their splendid achievement of last spring. But alas and alack, how the mighty have fallen. The brave ladies of the Maple Leaf and a complete revenge and sent the teams quietly back to Belleville with their figurative tails between their legs.

The sports chairman gazes sadly at the empty space where the trophy case that were so fully occupied last year and sadly turns away, furtively wiping a tear from his eyes.

Yes sir, the Highlanders made good their boast that they would avenge their ingloious defeat and certainly turned the tables on the unit's champs. Once again there is glory and rejoicing in the halls of the Sassenachs, while the halls of the unit clubrooms resounds to the wailing and woes of the ANAFs.

But there is always another day and next spring is coming, so cheer up with the thought that it can't be any worse. In the words of the song, when you are right down the only way to go is up, so better luck next time.

The entertainment chairman reports that the annual Remembrance Day banquet will be held this year on Saturday, November 9th, at seven. A number of distinguished guests have been invited and everything that is shaping up for a good evening. Get your tickets, the tables and seats for the banquet being limited, the chairman wishes to announce that only 200 tickets will be available ot the November 9th banquet and it will be a case of first come first served. A notice will be placed on the bulletin board when the banquet tickets will be on sale and they may be obtained from the stewards.

The Belleville Armouries and could be purchased from the steward either by mail or directly from him. All these articles are used in England and are issued by the Royal Sussex Regiment, the British regiment with whom the Hasty-Pees are affiliated, so are the right official colors.

A committee is being formed to enquire into where to purchase and where to place a permanent plaque in Peterborough this year when it was found that it could not be held in Picton, as originally planned. It was very short notice but they came through in grand style. These final remarks were greeted with a standing ovation for those two comrades and their committees. The meeting then adjourned.

Garden Notes

Fall Care for Spring Bulbs

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

The time has come to talk about tulips, scillas and anemones. These bulbs should be tucked up in their garden beds to insure spring color and beauty.

Ideal growing conditions for all bulbs require 14 or more inches of well drained soil enriched with bone meal, or bulb fertiliser. You will find this on sale where bulbs are sold. Dig in a good quantity of humus such as peat moss, old sawdust, or ground cornecobs.

Daffodils and narcissus should be eight inches deep and three to five inches apart. Plant close if you want a compact sheet of bloom. Hyacinths six inches deep and four to six inches apart. Crocus and anemones three inches deep and three inches apart. Scilla and muscari (grape hya cinth) three inches deep and three inches apart.

Deep cultivation after they are planted is not advisable.

Allow time for deep root development in the fall to insure good blooms. Tulips can be planted late but get the others in early.

After blooms have faded in the spring give the plants a good soaking. The bulbs now start in to make next year's blooms. They need plenty of green leaves and make them last-at long as you can by supplying with the necessary moisture. Take off the flower head but retain the stock. Cut tulips off just below the cup with a sharp knife. Pinch off the seed heads from daffodils and pick off the florets of the hyacinth. This advice comes from Dutch bulb growers who say the flower stems make tissue for next year's blooms.

Direct sunlight is injurious to bulbs. Keep the bulbs in a bag or covered box while planting. Take out one at a time as you dig the hole. If you like to sealer bulbs and plant where they will fast for a natural effect, do this on a cloudy day, or plant in early morning, or the evening. Should you dig your bulbs in June or July observe the same precautions. Bulbs are undercover agents. Sunlight says the goodness even if the skin is unbroken. Where the skin is broken the sun will create scar tissue, which will impair the future bloom.

Last year I picked up a pack of grape hyacinth bulbs late in the season, intending to pot them up for indoor bloom. They spent the winter in the 'fridge, and were planted outdoors in April. In a few weeks they threw up leaves and bloomed in May. They have spent the summer in the ground under a shrub and are now showing the usual tuft of leaves, which proves how really hardy most of these bulbs are.

In the southern states many of the bulbs are given this period in cold storage to insure spring bloom. It is necessary to complete their natural cycle.

ADD NEW MEMBERS

This year add a few dozen new members to your regular collection. They will make a wonderful long lasting contribution to the garden.

Anemones or windflowers are a good choice. In cold parts of Canada they can be grown in frames or bed over until spring for planting. Coronaria are a super strain of giant single anemones in brilliant blues, reds, pinks and mauves Blanda includes a lovely white as well as delicate pinks and blues.

The allums are members of the onion family with umbels of lovely bloom in various colors, according to the strain. Cowanii has large heads of white bloom. Others in varying heights include lavender, purple-red, violet, gold and cerulbean blue. Most of these can by had for 50 cents to two dollars a dozen and will last for years.

Russians Need Patience of Job To Buy a Car

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Buying a car in the Soviet Union is still as difficult as adopting a child in most Western countries.

Russians need the patience of Job, especially in Moscow with its one motor showroom and 10,000 cars for sale to a population of about 6,000,000.

The waiting list for cars for Muscovites was closed in 1956 when it became unmanageable. There were too many people chasing too few cars.

But for those people who joined in the hunt seven years ago, the future is bright. The wait for the five-passenger four-cylinder Volga, will be cleared by July of next year.

And all who registered for the Moskvich, a sturdy four-seater, should be satisfied by December, 1964.

REOPEN LIST

The waiting lists will then open again for another long, uphill struggle for the Russian who will spend three or four years talking, dreaming and looking at cars before he becomes the proud owner of one.

Even to order the car he will need every kopek of the price: The Volga now is selling at 5,500 rubles ($6,160) and the Moskvich at 3,200 rubles ($3,585).

He will show his money and register his name.

The next step is a visit to the sales salon where he will get a number.

All he then has to do is to wait until his number comes up —and wait a little longer for the car to be delivered.

Such is the system, but no one argues. Russians are well aware that only about 150,000 cars are produced in the Soviet Union each year and that a majority of them become taxis in cities throughout the country, or go to state organizations.

Scuba Divers Bringing Up Timber From River Bottom

BONNECHERE, Ont. (CP)— Along the banks of the Bonnechere River the lumberjacks have yell "timber!" for years.

It's not easy to yell anything when your face is covered by a scuba diver's mask.

And there wouldn't be any point to it, anyway, because the timber is being brought up from the bottom of the river.

The Bonnechere, which flows into the Ottawa River 40 miles west of Ottawa, has since 1962 been the scene of a salvage operation carried on by Jim Vollbrecht and Bert Jolly.

Partners in a firm called Commercial Divers Underwater Salvage Company, they're reaping a harvest left from the boisterous 19th century logging boom.

Last year they set up a mill near Round Lake and have hauled their way 10 miles upstream. By next year, when they have cleaned out the river, they will have sawn more than 1,000,00 board feet of white pine and hemlock.

They've finished one section of the river where the salvage team was operating this summer there were only lying 20 feet deep in the mud of an underwater cavity.

The firm employs 26 men, four of them divers, and uses a winch, a 16-foot turbocraft boat and scuba diving equipment.

AMERICAN IN BLIZZARD

"We work from ice to ice—started April 27 this year in a blizzard," they said. "Last fall we would walk out to the ice until the ice broke, then go in. We aren't going to do that again."

The winch, fitted to the back of a truck, is operated on land at the side of the river and the boat takes the cable and diver from shore to shore. At light, the diver carries the cable to the river bottom and puts a half hitch around the log.

Extreme care must be taken for logs lie wedged in the sides of the underwater cavity and it doesn't take much to start a slide.

As many as 55 logs are hitched at once. The diver must be up and out of the water before the winch goes into action. Having once had 35 logs dragged over his back, Jim Vollbrecht makes this a strict rule.

A shore crew unhitches the logs while the diver rests before going down again. Then another winch moves the logs to an orderly pile where trucks pick them up and haul them along the river road to the mill.

The logs are about 30 per cent faster than timber cut from the bush, and some are virgin; thicker, entirely free from knots.

Canada Rejects U.S. Overtures On Allowances

WASHINGTON (AP) — Canada has rejected overtures by the United States to boost its duty-free allowance for Canadian citizens visiting the U.S. But the United States state department says it will continue to press for changes in Canada's regulations.

Senator Kenneth B. Keating (Rep. N.Y.) made public Friday a letter from Acting State Secretary George Ball who said Canada gave an unsatisfactory answer to the U.S. request at a recent meeting of the joint Canada - U.S. committee on trade and economic affairs.

Keating told the Senate he was disappointed by what he termed Canada's recalcitrant and unyielding position and urged the state department to use every means "to remind the Candidans of the inequality in their regulations."

U.S. citizens visiting Canada can return home with $100 worth of Canadian goods duty-free, the Senator said, but a Canadian must pay duty to his government on purchases in the U.S. totaling more than $25.

WANT LIMIT RAISED

Keating and other New York members of Congress have urged the state department to seek a $100 duty-free limit from Canada.

In his letter, Ball said the Canadian delegation to the Sept. 20-21 meeting contended that U.S. visitors do not find Canadian merchandise as attractive as Canadians find U.S. merchandise.

"As a consequence, it was argued, the low Canadian allowance did not, in the majority of cases, have great restrictive effect," Ball wrote. "This is not, of course, a satisfactory answer." Ball said the issue will be raised again at the next meeting of the joint commission in 1964.

6 YEARS FOR RAPE

TORONTO (CP) — Kenneth James Demers, 28, was sentenced Friday to eight years in penitentiary for raping a 43-year-old divorcee. The woman, a freelance writer, said she was reading in bed when Demers broke into her apartment, threatened to kill her if she screamed for help and attacked her.

BC Racing Car Driver, 66 Could Be Oldest in World

By BRUCE LEVETT

COQUITLAM, B.C. (CP)—Arleigh Pilkey looked up from the cockpit of his Cooper formula junior racer and smiled all the way to the top of his head.

"I started racing cars right after the Kaiser war," he said.

Arleigh is 66 and his fellow racing drivers at Westwood circuit 40 miles east of Vancouver are proud of him. They say he's the oldest active racer in North America—if not the world.

"I've had a lot of publicity," Arleigh admits.

"But it didn't come from my ability—most of it came because I'm just too stubborn to know when to quit."

But Arleigh has quit, twice.

"I was out of racing for 38 years. I raced from 1918 to 1921 then quit until 1959."

The second time he quit, it was because he lost his competition licence after a medical.

"The doctor said I was 25 pounds overweight and my blood pressure was too high."

He sold his Lotus 1,100, a car which looked like a roller skate covered with molten cheese, and sat out one season.

He couldn't stand it. So he shed the 25 pounds and bought the Cooper—one of the fastest cars on the 1.9-mile circuit—and went out again after the checkered flag.

"It's a good thing I lost the weight," he says. He would never have made it into the Cooper's wrap-around cockpit otherwise.

How long does he intend to continue racing?

"As long as they'll let me. My competition licence is good through next year when I'll be 67."

Arleigh stands about five-feet-five. He drives at 100-miles-an-hour-plus with thin-soled bowling shoes on his tiny feet. His dark green racing goggles are ground to his prescription.

He's a diesel engineer, now semi-retired, and has used his knowledge of engineering and racing to build three competition cars. He helped lay out the track he races over and says it's "a perfect course—feather bed smooth."

He has come millions of miles from Orillia, Ont., where he was born—much of it at speeds some men never reach.

Arleigh Pilkey is doing what he wants to do and, since his wife died two years ago, there is no one to worry about him.

It all began for Arleigh in 1906 when, at the age of nine, he and some other kids stole a car.

"Mind you, we put it back later."

Then he got a job selling cars.

"I've driven trucks, ambulances, fire trucks and taxis."

He has also driven dirt-track racers, hot rods and sports cars.

For him, it's a good life. He moves freely wherever he wants to go and his hawk-like face—lined with wrinkles right up to the thinning grey hair on top of his head—is deeply browned by sun and wind.

He won't go near a doctor except for racing check-ups and says "I'd never have known about my blood-pressure" if it hadn't been for racing.

NOT AFRAID

"Now the doc says I'm as good as new and I'm racing again.

"Mind you, I might go out tomorrow and kill myself on the track, but who cares?"

He doesn't believe he'll die at the wheel.

"I have a sort of safety valve that won't let me drive beyond where I'm happy."

Is age beginning to slow him down?

"My best year was in 1961. I won three modified-class championships and came second in the fourth."

He isn't certain why he races except "I just love getting out there on the track with some good competition. I like cars all around me."

"You know, no one should ever feel sorry for a guy who falls down a mountain or dies parachuting or in a race car.

"Those guys are doing what they want. They know they're taking risks and that's what they enjoy."

MINERS GN HORSEBACK

NEATH, Wales (CP) — A bunch of miners in the Dulais Valley district of South Wales have raised a foxhunting pack. The miners ride out resplendent in hunting pinks — but house their hounds in a colliery.

STILL RACING AT 66 — Arleigh Pilkey rolls into the pits after a run in the rain at Westwood sports car circuit 4 miles east of Vancouver. Born 66 years ago in Orillia, Ont., Pilkey has been involved with cars one way or another since he was nine years old and plans to continue racing "as long as they'll let me." (CP Photo)

Boys Prefer to Spend Time With Owls Rather Than Girls

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Zigmund and Richard Wojtowisz are teen-agers who prefer to spend their time with a dead owl rather than a live girl.

The boys are amateur taxidermists and their hobby takes up most of their time and money.

"Girls cost money and so does taxidermy," says Zigmund, 17 speaking for himself and his 15-year-old brother. "We'd rather put our money into mounting animals."

The brothers were born in Austria but have lived in Canada for most of their years. Their interest arose in 1961 when Zigmund answered a newspaper ad for a taxidermy correspondence course.

During the course the Wojtowisz house was littered with half - stuffed carcasses, wire, glue, feathers, fur and hides. But now the boys have moved into the basement with their hobby and that part of the house is out of bounds to the six other members of the family.

Zigmund says taxidermy requires patience and long practice. During the first months of the course most of the projects started were thrown out because of mistakes.

To prepare a trophy, the animal's flesh and bones are removed, the hide is carefully cured and set aside and the body is moulded with a hemp-like substance over a wire frame. Glass eyes and teeth are added later.

The skin is treated with a solution of borax, or arsenic, a deadly poison but excellent preservative. After several applications the skin is drawn over the stuffed framework. A strong wire is run through the legs to set the subject on a mounting plaque. Steel rods are used for heavier specimens such as moose or deer.

The mention of moose arouses Mrs. Wojtowisz's greatest fear. The boys have repeatedly threatened to lug one into the basement.

U.S. SOLDIER DEFECTS

BERLIN (AP) — The official East German news agency ADN said Friday a U.S. Army sergeant has defected and asked East German authorities for asylum. ADN identified the man as Sgt. Conrad Yunang from the U.S. Army's 5th general hospital at Stuttgart, West Germany.

Understanding Between Two Countries on Wheat-Selling Policies Will Be Sought

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. state and agriculture departments plan to invite the Canadian external affairs department to send a representative here in a few weeks for talks on understanding between the countries on their respective wheat-selling policies, a State Department official said Monday.

The U.S. protested last week that, by selling wheat at a fixed price for delivery over an extended period, Canada was pegging world wheat prices when in fact they should be rising.

The U.S. threatened to retaliate, perhaps by increasing its wheat give - away programs, which Canada has protested in the past interfered with its traditional markets.

Relations between the two countries have been strained over the issue since the U.S. learned last week that Canada had sold 800,000 tons of wheat to Japan at a price fixed for the entire eight-month delivery period.

"There's no future in throwing bricks at each other," the U.S. official said Monday in declosing the intention of the state and agriculture departments.

WHY CONSULTATIONS

It is understood that U.S. authorities want a cooling-off period before the consultations so that tempers can simmer down.

Meanwhile, an agriculture department source said the department considers it broke no confidence with Congress last week details of the Canadian wheat sale to Japan.

The source said the details came from another party and subsequent information from the Canadian wheat board—sole agency for wheat sales in Canada—which is normally more than what the U.S. had learned privately.

Liberal Minister Mitchell Sharp, who maintained in Ottawa that the wheat board has followed its usual sales practices in making the sale to Japan, accused the U.S. of releasing confidential Canadian wheat sales information.

LONDON (CP) — Optimism about Canadian wheat sales was expressed Monday by Trade Minister Sharp and the chief commissioner of the Canadian wheat board, W. C. McNamara.

They indicated that the recent $500,000,000 sale to the Soviet Union may not be a once-for-all transaction.

Sharp said the market in Communist countries "is not a one-shot deal" but one that will be built up gradually and McNamara said he is "optimistic."

Documented Proof Germans Knew of Raid Says Historian

LONDON (CP)—A young British historian reiterates that there is documented proof that the Germans knew in advance about the bloody 1942 Allied raid on Dieppe.

Writing in The Evening Standard, David Irving quotes from German military telegrams held by the United States government and not released for study until 1961.

He also mentions a report from "a source abroad" that still is a secret document under Britain's 1958 Public Records Act and which he has been advised not to disclose.

Earlier this month Irving wrote an article saying he had uncovered new evidence about the tragic Dieppe attack. Casualties among the nearly 5,000 Canadians involved totalled 3,363.

QUOTE MONTY

The admiralty has since decided his evidence that the forced German forces were ready and waiting for the Canadians. It was a statement made by Admiral of the Fleet Earl Mountbatten on Canadian television last year. Mountbatten said:

"Examination of German sources after the war has more than definitely confirmed our view that the Germans had absolutely no idea whatever that the Dieppe raid was going to take place."

Irving says public records of Hitler's table talk show that the Germans had some idea concerning a projected attack at least five weeks before the Canadians stormed the well - defended beaches on Aug. 19, 1942.

Moreover a top secret telegram bearing Hitler's signature said as early as July 9:

"The attack on the coast area Dieppe-Le Havre-Normandy is held to be in particular danger."

CALLED MEETING

Irving says there is a sheaf of intelligence reports during the west throughout July and that on Aug. 14 Hitler summoned a full-dress meeting at his headquarters to discuss the French coastal defences. He continues:

"From the minutes of the conference it is clear that even then they did not know exactly where the Allies were going to land. The information must have come within the last six days."

Since Irving's first article, former German generals Adolf Kessler, director of Atlantic air operations during Dieppe, has said reporters that Dieppe had cracked the British naval code.

TOSS DYNAMITE

MONTREAL (CP)—A stick of dynamite exploded harmlessly on the embankment of the Montreal Expressway Monday. Police said the dynamite was apparently tossed by a motorist from a west-end bridge over the aqueduct at De La Verendrye Boulevard and De L'Eglise Avenue. They said the circumstances as to whether the incident may have been the work of extremists agitating for the separation of Quebec from Canada.

Socreds Name Ontario Leader At Meeting

VINELAND, Ont. (CP)—Wilmer F. Trelford, 49-year-old chiropractor from nearby Thorold, was elected Ontario leader of the Social Credit party Saturday.

More than 100 delegates at a closed meeting of the Social Credit Association of Ontario chose Trelford over Lloyd E. Heppner of Ottawa, chief organiser of the national party, as president of the Ontario group.

Mr. Trelford and Mr. Heppner were unsuccessful Social Credit candidates in the neighboring riding of Welland and Lincoln respectively in the 1962 federal election.

The party has been without an Ontario leader since Phillip Kelly, former Progressive Conservative mines minister in the Ontario government, left the Social Credit leadership a year ago in a dispute over party policy. He has been in office about six months.

The two-day party meeting was largely guarded by a unit formed security officer against intrusion from members of a breakaway group led from the press.

REPLACES MALLORY

Mr. Heppner, an inactive minister of the Christian Memorial Alliance Church, replaces Rev. George S. Mallory of Cayuga, Ont., a minister of the Pentecostal Church, as leader.

James Audy, president of the breakaway group which calls itself the Ontario Social Credit Association of Ontario, had previously questioned what he said was the presence of newspapers from one denomination in the party executive.

Dr. Charles Gosen of St. Catharines, a former executive member, said Monday the criticism was unfounded. The only Pentecostal minister in the executive had been Mr. Mallory, he said, and "men of such calibre and integrity can lead our movement forward."

Mark Drouin, Former Speaker Of Senate, Dies

QUEBEC (CP) — Senator Mark Drouin, former speaker of the Senate and an active influential Progressive Conservative, died at his home in suburban Sillery Saturday night. He was 56.

Death followed an illness that began last spring and confined him to the organizational activity during the federal election campaign. He would have been 60 on Oct. 30.

Fluently bilingual, he was an effective speaker much in demand whether a campaign was on or not. He was a striking figure, trim and athletic, with a tanned face and wavy hair, and could hold an audience well.

At death, Senator Drouin was senior member of a city law firm he and his brother Ross founded in 1941 and developed one of the most prosperous here.

He helped found and organize Le Theatre du Nouveau Monde and was its president. He also was president of the National Theatre School and L'Union Culturelle Canadienne, and a governor of the Dominion Drama Festival.

PLANE BROKE

Born in Quebec City, he played hockey and other sports here as a youth and later was president of the old Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League.

Marc-Robert Drouin was educated at the Quebec seminary and graduated in law from Laval University.

He became an active member of the Conservative party in the mid-1920s.

During the postwar years, he was a member of the party's finance committee and from 1949 to 1956 was chief organizer for eastern Quebec.

He was chairman of the Quebec Conservative organization in 1949, 1953 and 1957, when he supported John Diefenbaker's successful bid for leadership of the party.

Senator Drouin also was first vice - president of the national Progressive - Conservative Party of Canada in 1955.

After Mr. Diefenbaker brought the Conservatives to power in 1957, Mr. Drouin was summoned to the Senate and appointed speaker. He was reappointed after the Conservative landslide in 1958.

WINTER'S THE TIME . . . to get those odd jobs done. That is the theme of this year's Winter Works Program for which plans are now being made. Works Committee members Daniel Aitken, city welfare administrator, Cecile Hiuser, employment office manager, and Verse McMurray, county representative, view Winter Works Campaign slogan.

Committee Meets to Plan Winter Works Program

Plans for the forthcoming winter works program aimed at maintaining the employment level in the Belleville area this winter, are being stepped up this week.

Members of the winter works program committee who are primarily concerned with the employment of the handicapped will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the office of Cecile Hiuser, employment office manager, acting as temporary chairman of the winter works committee, noted that everything possible was being done to encourage local employers to plan for winter jobs that would permit workers being kept on the payroll.

The "Do It No." phase of the program goes into effect during the winter months of January, February and March.

SUBSIDY WILL HELP

Mr. Hiuser said he expected the $500 federal subsidy on new homes built during the cold winter months would mean an upswing in winter home building in this area.

He said also that local municipalities were being encouraged to do municipal winter work on which they can get labor subsidy for approved projects.

Also included in the discussion at today's meeting was the No. 5 retraining program for unemployed workers. This program will get underway locally in November at the Quinte Secretarial School.

Members of the local winter works committee include Cecil Hiuser, employment office manager, John McLaughlin, also of the employment office as secretary, Alderman Joseph Raycroft, City Manager J. R. Reynolds, city welfare administrator Donald Aitken, Herbert Pointer, representing trades and labor.

Warden Charles Long and Verse McMurray, representing the county of Hastings, Earl Dickenoother, Chamber of Commerce secretary manager; Fred Barton of the Ontario Intelligencer, and Hamie McDonald, Radio Station CJBQ.

Communist China Confident In Wake of Good Crop

TOKYO (AP) — Communist China, where 12 months ago appeared mired in the deepest kind of pessimism, is expressing confidence in the wake of a good 1963 harvest and prospects for a better one this year.

The gloom has dissipated so much that Red Chinese Chairman Mao Tse-tung now is willing—for the first time in three years—to release position figures at the National People's Congress in mid-November.

A year ago Premier Chou En-lai confessed there just wasn't enough food to go around. Two weeks ago, on the 14th anniversary, the Chinese leadership said it finally had licked the downward spiral which began in 1958 and that the economy was moving forward.

The country seems to be recovering from the "great leap forward" and rural commune projects of several years ago.

The communes have been decentralized almost past recognition. In the face of criticism from abroad and at home, the regime has devoted itself to the defence of the principle—if not the performance—of the communes. They became an active member of the Conservative party in the mid-1920s.

During the postwar years, he was a member of the party's finance committee and from 1949 to 1956 was chief organizer for eastern Quebec.

He was chairman of the Quebec Conservative organization in 1949, 1953 and 1957, when he supported John Diefenbaker's successful bid for leadership of the party.

Senator Drouin also was first vice - president of the national Progressive - Conservative Party of Canada in 1955.

After Mr. Diefenbaker brought the Conservatives to power in 1957, Mr. Drouin was summoned to the Senate and appointed speaker. He was reappointed after the Conservative landslide in 1958.

Urgent Reform Will Suffer No Delay

- - Lesage

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage said Monday night the reaction of the population of Quebec to the idea of a department of education "is such that this urgent reform will suffer no delay."

The premier spoke at the official opening of Laval University's new science buildings in suburban Ste. Foy.

Text of his address was released in advance of delivery.

He said the Quebec government's education and economic policies are "indissolubly linked."

"Our effort in the economic field can only have concrete and useful consequences for us if we are collectively prepared, by a modernized system of education, to occupy the functions and fulfil the tasks that will come."

It was inevitable that changing the system would be upsetting in some quarters, he said. Change always troubled "the existing order, even if the existing order has become inacceptable, . . . even if it needs reform and even if the population recognizes the urgency of improvement."

Settle Strike At Register, Work Resumes

KINGSTON (CP)—Ten typographers at the Canadian Register here are to return to work Tuesday following settlement of a strike which began Sept. 13.

The strike by 204 of the International Typographical Union (CLC) voted Friday to accept a contract that shortens their work week, provides fringe benefits and resolves a jurisdictional dispute.

P. A. G. McKay, manager of The Register, said the national Catholic weekly will resume publishing next week.

The strike began after nine months of negotiations broke down. The union said the major issues were wages and other benefits.

Mr. McKay said the chief issue was a jurisdictional dispute between typographers and members of International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America (CLC) over who should do offset printing.

Mr. McKay said the dispute was resolved by allowing members of each union to handle offset printing processes that parallel their present responsibilities.

DENIES REPORT

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer denied in the Commons Monday that he ever said he intends to borrow Pentagon officials to reorganize the defence department. He was replying to NDP Leader Douglas who said there were Washington reports to that effect.

Australia Plans Election

CANBERRA (CP) — Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies announced tonight that Australia will have a general election Nov. 30.

Making his announcement in the House of Representatives, Menzies said it was most important that the Australian people should know whether his government's pledge of military assistance to the new federation of Malaysia carried the clear backing of the Australian people.

Australia has pledged this assistance to the four-state Southeast Asia federation, formed Sept. 16, in the face of a "confrontation" policy against it by Indonesia.

The latter country claims the federation is a British-backed "neo-colonialist" conspiracy.

CNR OFFICIAL DIES

MONTREAL (CP) — John Hampson Stevenson, chief of transportation for the CNR, died Saturday. He was 62. He joined the CNR in Toronto in 1920.

Prime Minister Pearson Sure U.S. Will Co-operate In Maritime Union Dispute

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Monday he is "quite sure" the United States government will co-operate in seeing that Canadian ships under federal trusteeship won't be harassed in U.S. ports.

"I can't give the same assurance regarding any American unions and the leadership of these unions," he told the Commons.

New Democratic Leader Douglas had asked what assurance Mr. Pearson had received in his Saturday telephone talk with President Kennedy that Canadian ships would be free from "harassment and sabotage."

Replying to other questions, Mr. Pearson said he told President Kennedy that U.S. Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz had made "an unhelpful intervention" in the Great Lakes shipping situation last week, and that AFL-CIO President George Meany had made "a shocking intervention."

(Mr. Wirtz had criticized the stand of the Canadian Labor Congress in negotiations for private union-sponsored trusteeship and Mr. Meany called on AFL-CIO unions to support the fight of the Seafarers' International Union against the planned Canadian government trusteeship.)

WANTS ACCEPTANCE

Mr. Pearson said he told President Kennedy that he hoped that when the government trusteeship was set up, the decision "would be accepted by all concerned in the United States."

Mr. Pearson telephoned the president to inform him of the resentment in Canada about statements by Mr. Wirtz and Mr. Meany.

An aide said Mr. Pearson described his conversation with Mr. Kennedy as "straightforward, and candid but cordial."

Later, Mr. Kennedy issued a statement which said he joins with Mr. Pearson in appealing for a reasonable settlement to the Great Lakes labor problem.

The president said he shared Mr. Pearson's hope that the matter can be settled "quickly, fairly and without misunderstanding."

"The United States government has not and will not exercise any judgment regarding legislation which now is pending in the Canadian Parliament," Mr. Kennedy said.

London Youth Given Life Because of Age

CHATHAM (CP) — A 17-year-old London youth convicted of capital murder escaped the death penalty Saturday and was sentenced to life imprisonment because of his age.

Mr. Justice Maurice King of the Ontario Supreme Court told Richard Swearingen that he was "perhaps fortunate as to your age because otherwise the court would have been required to sentence you to death."

Swearingen found guilty after a four-day trial, turned 17 June 18, the day he strangled 28-year-old Robert H. Marshall, also of London.

Section 203 of The Criminal Code says in London any person found guilty of capital murder while under the age of 18 must be sentenced to life imprisonment.

As soon as the verdict was announced, defence counsel Ralph Steele presented a birth certificate to Mr. Justice King. Mr. Steele was appointed by the Children's Aid Society, of which Swearingen was a ward for many years. He was staying with his brother and sister-in-law here at the time of the murder.

EVANS SENTENCED

Friday, Clifford C. P. Evans, 25, also of London, was sentenced to five years in jail when he pleaded guilty to manslaughter in connection with the murder.* He had originally been charged with capital murder.

Both youths were arrested June 24, two days after Marshall's body, its throat and wrists slashed, was found in Rondeau Park, 25 miles east of here.

A jury of eight men and four women deliberated for 4½ hours before returning their verdict.

Mr. Justice King told Swearingen, who showed no emotion as the verdict was announced, that he would be eligible for parole "at some stage."

"You are very young and I would be surprised if you will be able to make something of the rest of your life. That depends on you," he said.

Faint Note of Anxiety In Passing of Adenauer

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A faint note of anxiety accompanies the passing of the Adenauer era.

Is it safe to trust the Germans? How will they react now that Konrad Adenauer is finally taking his firm hand off the wheel?

Is Ludwig Erhard just a stopgap chancellor? Will Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder turn out to be the new strongman?

These are some of the questions as Erhard, still on the sunny side of 70, takes over today from the 87-year-old man of 87 who has ruled the Federal Republic the last 14 years.

Historically, it is a major turning point. It ends a virtually unbroken 30-year period of strong personal rule, first under the fanatical Adolf Hitler and then under the benevolent, but autocratic, Adenauer.

Erhard, ruddy-cheeked, cigar-smoking economic wizard of Bavaria, tends to be played down as a "rubber lion" who will cooperate under Adenauer's tutelage. Some observers foresee a struggle for power within a few months.

OVERLY HESITANT

It may be that the new chancellor is underrated. He has shown himself in crises which he's hesitant, in withstanding a score of snubs from Adenauer, who would have preferred almost anyone else to succeed him.

But Erhard is the architect of the post-war economic miracle, the free trader who got a schnitzel in every German frying pan, and his popularity with the people now is greater than those who consider it likely that Willy Brandt's Social Democrats will soon win Christian Democrats in the next election.

Apart from personalities, the transition may result in a fresh questioning about German intentions.

Since the Second World War, an unidentified German politician has been quoted as saying, "Germany's reunion will come to realize "they are not generally loved and do not even love themselves."

SHOW HOSTILITY

Some British newspapers, headed by The Daily Express, have repeatedly shown hostility.

"This paper has long sought to expose the duplicity of the Germans," The Express said recently. "They cannot be trusted."

A much more favorable report on Germany comes from Alden Hatch, writing in The Manchester Guardian. Transferred to London after 18 years as a correspondent in West Germany, Prittie says the old "inward - looking, isolated" German has been replaced by a nation that wants to belong to the Western community in the future.

A weekly magazine — The Spectator—also deprecates anti-German sentiment, that "condemns Germany in which the hards of the left vie with the know-nothings of the right."

Anglo - German differences, THe Economist says, are a "residue of antagonism and incomprehension left by history."

And The Evening News, in an article by Charles Curran, says those who repeatedly voice suspicion of Germany are trying to "keep scuttling Hitler with their mouths."

Editor of Montreal Daily Will Listen to What People Think About Bilingualism

By ALEXANDER FARRELL

MONTREAL (CP) — After years of raising an aggressive editorial voice on public issues, Andre Laurendeau is going to sit back and listen to the public for a while.

As co-chairman of the royal commission on biculturalism, the editor of the Montreal daily newspaper Le Devoir will help direct a coast-to-coast study of what Canadians think about the French-English duality of Canada.

"This job I have accepted will give me a chance to reflect on Canada's destiny," says Mr. Laurendeau, 51.

Asked how he sees that destiny, he replied: "It's not my role to express views at this stage. Our first task in this inquiry is to listen with minds and ears absolutely open to everything that we are told, whether right or wrong."

After completing preparatory studies, the 10-member commission expects to begin public hearings in mid-winter. The other co-chairman is Davidson Dunton, president of Ottawa's Carleton University.

IN HIS ELEMENT

Giving meaning to "biculturalism" is a thinking man's job. For that reason, Mr. Laurendeau should be in his element.

This pale, intense intellectual, usually passionate in print but calm in person, has long been a student of public affairs. Apart from a brief foray into active politics, reading and writing are the story of his career.

During the interview he sat behind a desk loaded with enough books and papers to make a good start on a public library. To keep abreast of events, he said, he must read a large number of newspapers and periodicals.

Writing for a morning paper, he usually began to his office early in the afternoon, works until late in the evening. The articles or editorial that tomorrow will almost certainly infuriate some of Le Devoir's 43,000 readers and enchant others is out of the way by late afternoon, then begins the task of research for later editorials or perhaps of preparing notes for some public forum or televised panel discussion.

This year he won a National Newspaper Award, his second, for editorials on the place of French-speaking Canada in the federal scene.

FOUGHT CONSCRIPTION

Until the last two or three years, Mr. Laurendeau wrote often about international issues but lately, he said, he has concentrated almost exclusively on the domestic scene "because one has an impression of urgency about current affairs in French-Canada."

During the life-span of the royal commission, which will be two years, he will keep his connection with Le Devoir "but of course it cannot comment on the issues confronting the commission."

His brief political career began in 1942 as secretary-treasurer of the Ligue pour la Defense du Canada (the League for the Defence of Canada), an organization formed to campaign against conscription for overseas service during the Second World War.

In 1943 he became general secretary of the Bloc Populaire, a French-Canadian nationalist party of the time, and a year later was chosen its provincial leader. In the Quebec provincial election, which saw the Union Nationale under Maurice Duplessis return to power, Mr. Laurendeau was elected in the Montreal riding of Montreal Laurier.

QUIT POLITICS

Only three colleagues were elected with him and, he said, he was "naturally disappointed" by the party's lack of success. He served out his term as MLA but resigned early in the year, July, 1947, and accepted an invitation from Gerard Filion, Le Devoir's new publisher, to become the paper's deputy editor.

"I didn't especially enjoy participating in politics," he said, "but I like to follow it and comment upon it. I find that truly interesting."

Never a reporter, Mr. Laurendeau said the choice he made in 1947 was not of journalism as a career but of Le Devoir as a place to work.

"Le Devoir had been read in our family for many years and, to us, it had great prestige. Moreover, I knew that I would be independent as an editorial contributor."

Mr. Laurendeau's editorial activity began and flourished in opposition to the Duplessis government and he has written much of it made him a well known figure in Quebec and won him a National Newspaper Award in 1957.

MIXED FEELINGS

"We began to organize the strong traditional view of Quebec as a rural society and to discover the necessity for us to become a modern society. In the Duplessis policies the countryside was paramount, but a large proportion of the population was already living in the cities. Industrial development was taking place, but the French-Canadian role in it was modest."

"At the same time, we supported Duplessis on the question of provincial autonomy. This put us in a difficult position. To people of a progressive spirit, our editorials on autonomy had a Duplessis flavor.

"But we accused him of advocating a negative, sterile useless autonomy that blocked possible avenues of co-operation with Ottawa.

"Post-war events have given the federal government an extreme importance and we sought to guard provincial powers that could be used later under a different regime."

Generally regarded as a French - Canadian nationalist, Mr. Laurendeau said he believes in "a nationalism open to others, curious about others."

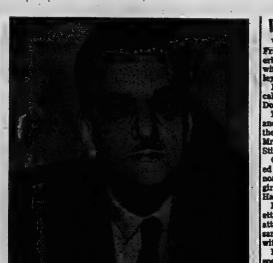
HIS OWN IDEA

The nature of Canada has long been one of his central preoccupations as an editorialist. He said in an January, 1962, editorial, proposed the royal commission on biculturalism.

Born above a music store near the Montreal waterfront March 21, 1913, Mr. Laurendeau studied history and French literature at the University of Montreal, graduating in 1935, then studied philosophy for two years at the Sorbonne and Institute Catholique in Paris.

At the University of Montreal he belonged to a student nationalist movement called Jeune-Canada (Young Canada). His thesis speech, in 1933, was a demand for a greater part for French-speaking Canadians in the federal civil service. He also wrote a pamphlet condemning "alien" domination of the Quebec economy but said "we shall become masters in our own house only if we prove worthy of it."

Between his return from Paris in 1937 and his election to the legislature in 1944 he was editor of L'Action Nationale, a monthly review of political and social affairs in French-speaking Canada.



Besides editorials, Mr. Laurendeau has written plays, His Deux Femmes Terribles (Two Terrible Women), a story of a seven-sided love affair among three couples and a bachelor, was presented in 1962 by Montreal's Theatre du Nouveau Monde.

For television he has written Affaires de Famille (Family Business) and La Vertue des Chaties (The Virtue of Female Cats).

As far as reading for pleasure is concerned, he is fond of the classical French authors, such as Racine and Moliere, but also likes "to look for new things" in literature.

His other chief pastime is listening to music. From his father, Arthur Laurendeau, a prominent church musician, he inherited a love of sacred music and he also enjoys the concert and chamber music of the modern French and Russian masters, such as Debussy, Ravel and Moussorgsky.

Mr. Laurendeau and his wife, Ghislaine, whom he married in 1935, live quietly in a red-brick house in suburban Outremont. Their oldest girl and boy, Francine and Jean, are students in Paris. Their two other boys, Yves and Olivier, and two other girls, Genevieve and Sylvie, are in school.

PREPARED TO LISTEN — Andre Laurendeau, 51-year-old editor of Montreal Le Devoir, is accustomed to airing his views on Canada's cultural development in the French-language daily newspaper. But for the present he's maintaining a public silence and as co-chairman of the royal commission on bicultural-ism he is prepared to listen to the views of others for the next year or so. (CP Photo)

Habs Answer Plante With Packs★ ★ ★ ★

Hawks Nip Leafs; Wings Zero Bruins

By MARVEN MOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

As athletes go, the craftsmen of the National Hockey League are by tradition a tight-lipped group.

They take the roll of the puck and their little setbacks with seldom a murmur for the public ear.

Not so Jacques Plante.

The tall, angular goaltender is markedly outgoing, a man of candor in his approach to his work.

Thus, after Montreal Canadiens dealt him off to New York Rangers last summer in a seven - player swap, Jacques made some outspoken remarks about his former employers, some not flattering in nature.

"I'm glad I left the Canadiens," he said. "They don't have a team anymore. They've gone down and the Rangers are coming up.

"The pressure (in Montreal) was terrible. The management expected me to win all the time. If we lost a game it was like losing the championship. The players got nervous. They're afraid of this season. They think it will be one of Montreal's worst because of the pressure."

SPECITIES LACK

Jacques didn't leave it at that. He was specific as to what he considered deficiencies in some of his former teammates.

Saturday night in Montreal, before a crowd of 14,804, the Canadiens seemed bent on making Jacques swallow some of his comments.

They unleashed a barrage of 33 shots at Plante—a phenomenal total for the NHL and belted the Rangers 6-2.

Said Jacques later: "They played as though they had no goalie to protect and had to keep shooting at it. Nobody could have beaten them tonight."

Then he tossed in another dig.

"But they won't play like that against Toronto."

The fledgling schedule proffered three other weekend games and Detroit Red Wings emerged from the shuffle at the top of the standings with Chicago Black Hawks in a four-point bracket.

GETS BIG GOAL

Linemates, Detroit and goalie Terry Sawchuk gave the punchless Boston Bruins a 3-0 pasting before 17,415 fans in Detroit Sunday night, a game that provided the first shutout of the campaign and a big goal for Gordie Howe.

Howe potted No. 543 on a shot that, skipping and careened into the net off a Boston player to the record of Nels Stewart who piled up by the retired Rocket Richard.

The scrappy Black Hawks meanwhile stunned Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2 before a crowd of 14,584 at Chicago in another Sunday night game. Ken Wharram and Stan Mikita powered the Chicago attack after the Maple Leafs pushed off to a 2-0 lead.

Wharram scored twice and picked up an assist while Mikita—the kid they call "stash" —got one goal and collected assists on all three others. The goal by Stan was the result of a shot by Howie Young. It struck Mikita and bounced in.

DRUB BRUINS

In the other weekend game, Toronto drubbed the Bruins 5-1 at home Saturday night after Frimes Minister Lester Pearson dropped the puck in a ceremonial faceoff before 13,495 fans. The Big M, Frank Mahovlich, fired two goals for the Leafs and one was scored by Red Kelly, the hockey-playing MP. He is a member of Mr. Pearson's team in Ottawa.

Howe's goal against the Bruins—his third this season—came in the third period and was of a freakish nature. He was behind the net and apparently trying to clear when the puck struck a Boston defender and went in.

Another earlier effort by the big guy balanced things out. He beat Boston goalie Ed Johnston in the second period but the goal was disallowed by referee Art Skov who whistled down play because of an injury to Boston's Murray Oliver.

Oliver was cut on the mouth off Tyrone MacDonald's high stick and took nine stitches.

Goals by Bruce MacGregor and Andre Pronovost in the second period gave the Red Wings more than the edge they needed. Sawchuk turned aside 34 shots for his shutout.

OVERCOME GOALS

In Chicago Sunday night, the once-beaten Black Hawks overcame goals by Toronto's Bob Pulford and George Armstrong. Bobby Hull rounded out the Chicago scoring with Wharram and Mikita.

Social note: Young of the Hawks made it through his consecutive games without a penalty.

At Montreal Saturday night, the Canadiens obviously felt Plante's off-season comments were unconstructive in his intent and put more dip into their attack than the club has shown for a long time.

Three goals whizzed by Plante in the final 30 minutes to put the game beyond New York's reach.

Montreal's top line, featuring rookie John Ferguson at left wing with Jean Beliveau at centre and Bobby Rousseau on the right side, accounted for four goals and a total of 10 individual points.

Geoffrion — described by Plante in the off-season as a player who doesn't shoot the puck "half as hard as he can did"— scored twice and picked up two assists.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

HODGE-PODGE

Belleville Junior "B" hockey officials announced over the weekend the appointment of Ed Plata as 1963-64 coach of the club. Ed is no novice at the manager job, he coached the club a few years ago. He replaces the ex-McFarland, "Turk" Barclay . . . Down Kingston way former Whitby Dunlop, Kingston Frontenac, Alf Treen, will guide the destinies of the Junior "B" Frontenacs.

Mel Richard tells me the Junior "B" squad's first call for training has been issued and the youngsters will hold their first workout tomorrow night at Memorial shortly after seven o'clock (Bruin) also. He says he has some seven or eight carryovers from last year and wants all youngsters who can skate and handle a stick out to the practices. All spots are open. Tonight and unseen Mel opines the city will have as good a junior club as that of a year ago.

Someone asked "Peeve" what became of the Yankee fans since the world series debacle and his reply was, "They've gone into the business of breeding cows with goats and raising hootenannies." . . . Some 350 delegates are expected to attend the Ontario Minor Hockey Association convention at King Edward Hotel, Toronto, November 1st and 2nd. . . . It's the annual rub-noses time with guys like the patriarchal silverlocks Chick Appel of Stratford, Bunny Morganson of the Tely, one of my favorite MP's, Mike Michael of Elmira, the grand sisters of Eastern Ontario, Doug Patterson of Stirling and first-vice Al Warkin of Peterborough, and others.

Dorothy Parker, the famous American columnist and wit, while holding her 70th birthday interview told of a "bog" which haunted her all night as it attempted to get her to "unsheath the dagger of her wit." Disappointed, he told her so when the party was over. Asked if she had anything to say by the curious "ghost" she said, "Nothing but this: don't forget to throw your mother a line when you get home." . . . After watching Saturday's Ottawa-Eskimo tilt it is evident the Riders are a one quarterback team. Frank Clair had better cellophane-wrap Russ Jackson after each tilt and keep his non-injury fingers crossed for if anything happens to the best quarter in the league he'll be up the well-known creek.

Looks like this year is the year for the big "Battle of the Bulldogs" or the "Treasure of the Torne" as someone has dubbed Bobby Hull and Frank Mahovlich. For once both these creamy leftwingers are off to a flying start. Punch the Runch Imlach of the Leafs predicts 75 goals for his big winger. Bill Reay, Hawks' mentor, nods wisely, says nothing. Hull is in superb condition after a summer of fence-fixing, boulder-hauling, stone-tossing and high-pitched Ann Sothern "Panchi" coaches, and his 24th year on this mortal coil looms as the best, hockey-wise. If the Big M quits reading headlines he should finish up with the top few. At that my money goes on the Rhoads Boomer for the Point.

Jacques Plante got a fine reception from Montreal fans Saturday night in that Ranger game, but the guy with the biggest smile was Boom-Boom Geoffrion who fired two of the six Blue goals past his former buddy and latest critic. Plante not only missed six of the 33 shots fired at him but that stalwart defence he had while wearing a Hab sweater.

Montreal football fans are a different breed. They subjected Sandy Stevens of Argos to a merciless verbal barrage. Coach Wirkowski of the Args didn't use Stephens after the first quarter because of the "rubbing." At that Trimble could have made a temporary deal with Argos and used Steffens in place of Rabb in the quarter. If that guy is a big league quarter then I'm the ping in Bridget Bardot's bathtub. The Als were lucky to pull out with a win.

The North American weightlifting championships are scheduled for Trenton RCAF Station next Saturday afternoon and evening . . . The City Commercial Hockey League holds what could be a life or death meeting tonight at the Recreation Centre. . . . The Fish and Game meets in a mighty important get-together tonight at Club Canara. . . . And on the rumor rialto there are whispers of a new hockey league being formed in the lower local brackets and a Little League Baseball set-up in the spring.

Picked up by Bombers early in the season from Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference, Fleming has kicked his way to 117 points, 28 more than Peter Kempf of British Columbia Lions who is his nearest rival.

The two field goals and a single Fleming scored Monday were in a losing cause though as the Bombers took their fifth loss in 14 games and their third by Calgary Stampeders, by a 14-8 score in Calgary.

In the game, both Bobby Taylor and Earl Lunsford scored touchdowns each for Calgary, bringing their season scoring totals to 24 points each.

Calgary Stampeders, a popular choice of many to represent the West this year in the Grey Cup classic, struck another blow Monday against an old enemy.

They defeated Winnipeg Blue Bombers 14-8 to rack up their third straight victory over the defending Grey Cup champions to clinch a Western Football Conference playoff berth and gain a measure of revenge for their loss to Bombers in last year's league finals.

The result further dampened Winnipeg hopes of making the WFC's top three — the playoffs. They trail third-place Saskatchewan Roughriders by one point and have only two games remaining in the regular schedule to Saskatchewan's three.

The combination of Rough Rider victories and Blue Bomber losses totalling two will eliminate Winnipeg — Sask and the last - place Edmonton Eskimos during the weekend by virtue of having three — two and one Football League interlocking games.

ESKS LOSE TWO

Eskimos were bumped 34-10 by Ottawa Rough Riders Saturday and 28-17 by Hamilton Tiger-Cats Monday.

Calgary's victory gave Stamps a full point lead less than the league-leading British Columbia Lions who consolidated their hold on first place with a 26-6 decision over Saskatchewan Saturday night.

A second-quarter touchdown by flanker Bobby Taylor and a final-quarter touchdown by fullback Earl Lunsford gave Stampeders their margin of victory before 22,000 fans. Quarterback Larry Robinson converted both.

Winnipeg points came on first - quarter field goals by George Fleming, league-leading scorer, a third-quarter single by Fleming and a fourth-quarter single by Jack Delveaux.

FIELD SOGGY

B.C. splashed to victory over a soggy field before 30,079 fans in Vancouver for its 10th win of the season, the first time the club has achieved the total in five WFC seasons.

Fullback Nub Beamer, flanker Sonny Homer and Defensive halfback Neil Beaumont scored touchdowns for Lions. Beaumont added two singles and Peter Kempf kicked a field goal and three converts.

Beaumont's touchdown, from an intercepted pass 10 yards inside Lions' end zone, set a CFL record for intercepted pass runbacks—120 yards.

End Dick Cobee put on a similar display for Saskatchewan, picking up a blocked field goal attempt by Kempf and romping 98 yards for Roughriders' only points.

Bruce Kidd Winner in 10-Mile

GUELPH (CP) — Toronto's Bruce Kidd of the East York Track Club, holder of the five-mile open record for Thanksgiving Day road races here, switched to the 10-mile event Monday and won it in a record 53 minutes, 20 seconds.

Cedric Wedsmire of Toronto Olympic was second and Dave Lach of Mount Royal Amateur Athletic Club, Guelph, was third.

In fourth and fifth place respectively were Glen Cairns of onto Olympic and Alan Claremont, Hamilton Olympic.

Abby Hoffman, Toronto Olympic, was a record winner in the girls' half-mile event in 2:16.0, more than four seconds faster than her time last year. Teammate Joan Barnicott was runner-up and Cecelia Carter, Hamilton Olympic, was third.

Strikes Out 43 Batters In Two Games

OSHAWA (CP) — Sault Ste. Marie won the Ontario Amateur Baseball Association Senior B championship Saturday, defeating Oshawa 6-1 and 7-6 in consecutive games of a best-of-three series.

Bob Petteuzzo pitched both victories, striking out 43 batters in the 17-inning first game and 15 in the nine-inning second encounter.

Dick Shatto of Toronto Argonauts took the lead in the Eastern Football Conference scoring race after weekend action involving all four teams.

Shatto scored two touchdowns Sunday as Montreal Alouettes defeated Argos 34-28, bringing his season total to 30 touchdowns for 60 points.

Ottawa's Moe Racine was the new points leader. He collected three converts and a single Saturday as the Rough Riders dumped Edmonton Eskimos 34-10.

George Dixon of the Als raked for five converts against Argos to move into a third-place tie with Ottawa's Dave Thelen at 48 points.

Ottawa halfbacks Ernie White and Ron Stewart also drove fourth place with 42 points each off seven touchdowns.

Tommy Grant of Hamilton Tiger-Cats scored one touchdown Monday to give him 36 points and tie with Dan Clark of Montreal The Ticats whipped Edmonton 29-17 in Hamilton.

Commonwealth Golf

S.A., Britain Win Openers

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—AP) South Africa defeated Canada and Britain whipped New Zealand—by scores of 5½ to 3½—in the opening matches today of the five-day round-robin British Commonwealth teams golf championship.

Each country played three games of foursomes on the par-72 Royal Sydney course in the morning and six singles in the afternoon.

The fifth country, Australia, had a bye today.

The draw for Wednesday is Canada vs. New Zealand, Britain vs. Australia, South Africa a bye.

South Africa, the defending champion, is not now a member of the British Commonwealth. It is playing by special invitation of the Australian Golf Union which altered the conditions of the tournament to permit the entry of "countries which played in the first Commonwealth tournament at St. Andrews in 1954."

South Africa beat Canada 3-0 in the morning foursomes but the Canadians fought back in the afternoon singles and went close to winning a tie.

Seven Schools Participate

Relay Carnival A Success

A new experiment in sport fitness was tried successfully here Saturday.

Seven Ontario secondary schools competed in a test of endurance two man relay carnival in gruelling competition. Forty boys took part.

The meet was organized by David Bell, physical director, Moira S.S. where it was held. Mr. Bell plans further meets.

Each team entered was made up of two men each running 440 yard laps around the track for a total of four, six or eight miles. Starting things off was the Juvenile team (13 years of age and under) over a distance of four miles. It was won by the team from Oshawa O'Neill made up of G. Christenson and Jack Armstrong. Second place went to the team from Moira of Bill Salter and Don Lowsen.

Six junior teams lined up for their four mile race, but right from the starting gun the 1st Trojan team took the lead and held it for the full sixteen laps. Each boy gradually increased the length of the lead until their final time was 1 minute, 13 seconds faster than the second place team.

The Scorrar brothers from Perth struggled for a good part of the Intermediate six mile race with the entry from O'Neill before they came out victors with a total time of 28.32. Doug, youngest of the brothers, ran several fine races last spring - the best of which was a 9th place finish in the All-Canadian 14 years of age and under mile run. Both boys attribute any success to involves some twenty miles per their training routine which day.

John Peal, one of the Oshawa boys who was the victors such a close race, was second in last year's All-Ontario high school cross country run held at the Boyd Conservation Area in Woodbridge.

The senior race over a gruelling eight miles was a stiff test of stamina requiring each runner to complete 16 laps of the track with but a lap rest between each while his partner runs. In this race the boys from the Ontario School for the Deaf set a deadly early pace and hung on to their lead for about two miles. Each lap, the team from Perth relentlessly cut into this lead until they finally caught up, passed and went on to finish 24 seconds ahead of 2nd place OSD.

Tom Graham, coach of the Perth entries, felt that the low pulse rates of his runners (45 - 50 per minute) enabled them to recover quickly each time they had a short rest.

After the final race, Mr. Bell, coach of the Moira teams, presented small trophies to each member of the winning teams. He said that the venture was so successful that he would hold another one in the spring and at least two are planned for next fall. All of the coaches agreed that this was an excellent form of training for the runners and that they should all benefit greatly from the experience.

Complete results:

JUVENILE (13 and under, 4 miles):

Oshawa O'Neill, 23:02.2; Moira, 23:20.5.

JUNIOR (15 and under, 6 miles):

City Hockey League Meets Tonight

Entries for the Belleville City Hockey League will stand up and be counted tonight — and if the loop is to operate, the count had better reach four.

League president CHH Bolen has called an all-important meeting to determine the league's status for the 1953-54 season.

At the last turnout, only two clubs were represented and unless more interest is shown tonight the possibilities are strong that the organization will fold.

A number of people have inquired about the league during the past couple of weeks but each puts it, "unless they show up at a meeting and let us know what they want, it doesn't mean a thing".

The meeting is set for the Recreational Centre, at 8.30 All sponsors, managers, etc. are urged to attend if they want to keep the league alive.

Flash Fire Destroys 27 Horses

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — A flash fire early Sunday destroyed 27 harness race horses at Roosevelt Raceway.

Only a few horses were saved as flames swept through two barns a few hours after the the Saturday night racing had ended. Elaine Rodney, a stakes winner, and Archivar King were among those led to safety.

Howard Besinger, who trains for Howard Kuth of Cleveland, lost five of his string, including Merrie Adieu, winner of the '50 Messenger Stakes.

Eastern Conference Teams Celebrated Thanksgiving Week-end by Knocking the Stuffing Out of the Canadian Football League's Two Teams

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Eastern Conference teams celebrated Thanksgiving week-end by knocking the stuffing out of the Canadian Football League's two teams.

Toronto Argonauts and Edmonton Eskimos were left holding their wishbones. A lack of legs has put these clubs in a position where not even wings would help.

Argos clinched last place in the four-team East Sunday when they dropped a 34-20 decision to the Alouettes at Montreal. The Western Conference Eskimos beaten 34-10 by the Rough Riders in an interlocking game Saturday at Ottawa, lost 29-17 to Hamilton Monday to the Tiger-Cats to clinch fifth-place in the five-team West.

The result left Hamilton and Ottawa tied for first place with 14 points apiece on identical 7-4 records and Montreal third with 12 points on six wins and five losses. The Argos have won only two of 11 starts and Edmonton two of 13.

JACKSON SCORES

Ottawa spoiled with the Kitchmos. Quarterback Russ Jackson scored one touchdown himself, threw two touchdown passes to halfback Ernie White and another to flanker Whit Tucker. Bob O'Billovich, who replaced Jackson in the fourth quarter, ran eight yards for the final touchdown. Moe Racine added the other points with three converts and a single.

Edmonton's only touchdown came in the fourth quarter when quarterback Don Getty hit Joe Hernandez on a five-yard payoff pass. Bill Mitchell booted a convert and a field goal.

Argos put their misery behind before bowing to Als and Toronto coach Nobby Qirkowski was bitter about the outcome—and the treatment received by Sandy Stephens.

Stephens, the quarterback cut by Als and picked up by Argos, was making his first return to Montreal and the fans gave him the raspberry so bad in the first quarter that Wirkowski took him out of the game. He was used only as a placement kicker from that point.

PREDICTS GREATNESS

"I don't feel he should be exposed to the criticism," said Wirkowski. "Potentially, he's too good a football player. I think he's going to be great and come back to haunt you Montreal people."

Wirkowski also gave his impression of Warren Rabb, Montreal quarterback who completed only two passes in the game.

"He isn't a Big Four quarterback," said Nobby. "He isn't even a quarterback. I mean it."

Halfback George Dixon scored three touchdowns for Montreal and rookie halfback Dave Hoppman, in his impressive performance, scored the other. Gino Berretta booted two field goals and two converts and Fardle Barket kicked a single.

Veteran Dick Shatto scored two Toronto touchdowns with a scintillating effort and Jackie Parker, who shared the quarterback duties with Don Pavell, scored the other. Stephens, who sat out the second half with obvious chagrin, kicked two converts. He had missed two field goal attempts and a convert in the first half.

BRIGHT OUT

Eskimos were without fullback Johnny Bright and Mike Wicklum at Hamilton. Bright pulled a hamstring in his left leg in practice and Wicklum had sprained ligaments in his right foot. It left the once-proud Esks with only 28 players.

Tiger-Cats allowed Esks to come back from a 6-0 deficit to lead 14-12 at Hamilton. The Westerners trailed on 15-14 going into the fourth quarter when Bernie Faloney executed a pair of touchdown passes to salt it away.

Tommy Grant took a six-yard flip in the end zone for one and Stanley Bradley caught the other touchdown pass to spoil the day for the visitors. Dick Easterly had scored a touchdown late in the second quarter on a pass from Joe Zuger. Don Sutherin, out for 4 month with torn stomach muscles, returned to the lineup at kicked 17 and 24 yard field goals, two singles and a convert. Zuger booted a 62-yard single early in the game.

Quinte Wins Soccer Game

In a recent Bay of Quinte high school soccer match, Quinte Secondary School blanked Moira S.S. by a 6-0 count.

Greg Zorbas and Max Valyear scored two goals apiece, Fred Ellis and Richard Ellis each potting one.

SOCCER PLAYERS DIE

BELLUNO, Italy (AP) — All but three members of the Libertas soccer team of Longarone perished when flood waters from the Vaiont Dam swept away their town last Wednesday night. Three players were out of town. All the rest were caught by the raging flood as they sat before television sets watching the Madrid game against Glasgow Rangers.

Redmen Shade Blues

Gaels Slip by Mustangs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Queen's University Golden Gaels, unanimous pre - season picks to sweep the Intercollegiate Senior Football League, have discovered they have some stiff opposition.

The Gaels were expected to have an easy time with University of Western Ontario Mustangs Saturday in London, but had to battle from behind to squeeze out a slim 20-18 victory.

They managed it on a fourth-quarter touchdown and single for third second straight win of the young season and sole possession of first place with four points.

In the other game Saturday, the defending champion McGill University Redmen withstood a spectacular University of Toronto comeback to edge the Blues 25-24 at Toronto.

McGill and Western are tied in second place with 2-1 records while Toronto trails in the four-team league without a win.

TRAILED 17-1

Queen's had no runaway victory in their season opener against the Blues, winning 21-14. And at London Saturday, they were on the brink of an upset defeat as they trailed the Mustangs 17-13 going into the last quarter.

They pulled it out with a long drive, sparked by quarterback Cal Connor's passing and receiving, when Bill Edwards went over from the 10-yard line for his second touchdown of the game.

Western, unable to defeat the Gaels since the 1960 season, appeared on the verge of snapping the jinx by taking an 8-0 first quarter lead and staying ahead 15-13 at the half.

Singles by Pat McConnell and Jim Weber widened the lead in the third quarter before Queen's rallied midway in the final quarter.

Edwards scored Gaels' first touchdown in the second quarter and booted the convert. Connor fired a 10-yard touchdown pass to Jim Ware and Harold Rose kicked the final single.

Quarterback Bob Israel passed for both Western touchdowns, a 10-yard throw to McConnell and a 25-yard pass-and-run play to Ted Miller. Weber converted both and added a fourth - quarter single. McConnell also kicked a single.

Huff Puffed, Couldn't Blow Brown Down

By MIKE RATHEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

"If he had run any harder, he'd have killed one of us."

Jimmy Brown received that verbal tribute from defender Sam Huff after staying on his record-breaking course Sunday. He rambled over, around and through the New York Giants for three touchdowns in a 33-24 Cleveland Browns victory that kept Browns undefeated in the National Football League.

Brown bristled Monday when it was suggested Cleveland is playing inspired football to show up ex-coach Paul Brown.

"There is no animosity in us at all," the Cleveland fullback told the New York Quarterback Club. "We're not trying to prove anything about Paul, except that we can play football.

"I sort of feel sorry for him (Paul). He is a proud man. He was a great coach. With a couple of adjustments he could have been top dog in Cleveland for a long time. He's terrific team. Because of this it is sort of a tragedy."

NEW ATTITUDE

Jimmy said Blanton Collier, the club's new coach, had instilled a great attitude and a new philosophy into the team.

"Paul was a real fine coach. Blanton is a new breed of cat and has a little more compassion for people."

Brown drove one yard for the first Browns' touchdown, took a screen pass 72 yards for the touchdown that put Cleveland ahead to stay and wound up his performance with a 22-yard scoring run.

In all, he gained 122 yards in 23 carries and grabbed four passes for an additional 86 yards.

He has amassed 787 yards—an amazing 7.8 average—in only five games.

The victory maintained Browns' one-game hold on the Eastern conference lead. St. Louis Cardinals slipped into second with a 27-23 decision over Pittsburgh Steelers on Charlie Johnson's 28-yard pass to Bobby Joe Conrad with five seconds remaining and Jim Bakken's conversion.

Chicago Bears remained the NFL's only other unbeaten team, crushing Los Angeles Rams 38-14. Mike Ditka grabbed four touchdown passes. Green Bay's defending league champion Packers remained one game back in the Western race with a 27-23 decision over Minnesota Vikings.

Reds Whip Bears 5-3, Aces Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The American Hockey League season has barely started yet but George Ranieri has succeeded on the second penalty shot of the campaign and coach Fernie Flaman has returned to the firing line from a self-imposed retirement.

With two of his Providence Reds' defencemen sitting, Flaman returned as an active player Sunday night and watched Ranieri score one of Reds' goals in a 5-3 victory over Hershey Bears.

In other games, Quebec Aces bounced back from two road defeats and opened at home with a 3-0 victory over Pittsburgh Hornets, and Buffalo Bisons edged Baltimore Clippers 4-3.

In Saturday's games, Cleveland Barons blanked Baltimore 3-0, Providence and Hershey fought to a 3-3 overtime tie, Buffalo nipped Rochester Americans 3-4 and Springfield Indians edged Quebec 3-1.

Ellsworth Comeback Winner

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Ellsworth of Chicago Cubs, a 20-game loser in 1962 and a 22-game winner in the 1963 season, was named the National League's comeback player-of-the-year Monday in the annual Associated Press poll.

The six - foot - four southpaw collected 24 votes in the balloting by 62 baseball writers. Curt Simmons of St. Louis Cardinals, another left-handed pitcher, was second with 11 votes followed by Dick Groat, Giants' Cardo' shortstop with 10 and Ron Santo, Chicago tried baseman with nine.

Ellsworth had a 9-20 record with an earned run average of 5.08 in 1962. Last season, he put Batavia, the three-year-old gelding from Strathroy clocked a fancy 2:06, fastest time of the night.

Chargers Defeat Jets

Bills Whip Kansas Chiefs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Abner Haynes has a sprained back and it hurts Kansas City Chiefs in the American Football League.

Buffalo Bills handed the defending champions their latest setback Sunday as Jack Kemp unleashed touchdown passes of 63 and 89 yards in the last half for a 35-25 victory that lowered the Chiefs' record to a lukewarm 2-3-1.

The Chiefs' inability to get rolling can be laid directly on Haynes' sprained back. Without the colorful speedster, Kansas City is left without the long-distance running threat to complement the passing of Len Dawson.

The AFL's second leading rusher with 1,049 yards last year and its leading touchdown producer with 19, Haynes was kept out of the starting line-up against the Bills for the first time since late in the 1961 season. He showed only flashes of his old form when he got into action.

San Diego Chargers increased their western division lead over the second-place Chiefs as John Hadl directed three second-half drives for a 24-20 victory over New York Jets, leaders in the eastern sector. Chargers have a 4-1 record, Jets 3-2.

George Blanda had his hand or foot in 25 of Houston Oilers' points in a 33-24 triumph over Denver Broncos that left the Oilers tied with Boston Patriots.

Yankees Win Ryder Cup 23-7

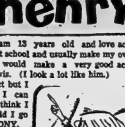
ATLANTA (AP)—Will Great Britain, where Golf got its start, ever regain its position as the world's golf leader from the United States?

It doesn't seem likely in the wake of the American team's sweeping 23-9 victory in the 18th biennial Ryder Cup competition between the two countries, proving once again that the United States has the superior players.

The U.S. team, called "invincible" by its proud captain Arnold Palmer, shook off morning doldrums each day in the three-day match and turned it into three straight American afternoons, wrapping it up Sunday.

Britain tied the Yanks 8-8 in the morning matches, but lost the afternoon contests 15-1. The lone British point in the afternoon matches came on two draws, with the U.S. team winning all the rest.

STARTLE U.S.



The British started the American team by defeating Palmer in the opening match on Friday. Brian Huggett and George Will beat Palmer and Johnny Pott, 3-2, in a Scotch foursome. Palmer, who teamed with Dow Finsterwald for two victories on Saturday, lost to Englishman Peter Allliss in a morning match Sunday.

Billy Casper was the big American performer, figuring in four victories.

Palmer was high in praise of Ireland's Christy O'Connor, whose putting kept the British in the match until Sunday.

The British team gets a chance for some measure of revenge next Thursday at the Sahara National tournament at Las Vegas. Most members of both teams planned to enter.

DEAR HENRY — I am 13 years old and love acting. I always take part in plays at school and usually make my own. My friends and teachers say I would make a very good actor and perhaps another Jerry Lewis. (I look a lot like him.)

I would like to act but I don't know how to start. I can also sing. How do you think I should get started? Should I go to Hollywood? ANTHONY.

Marlies, Petes Win Opener

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

After dominating the new defunct Toronto Metro Junior A Hockey League for two years, Toronto Marlborougha climbed back into the Ontario Hockey with a vengeance.

Marlborougha downed St. Catharines Black Hawks 7-4 Sunday at St. Catharines as the OHA Junior A season started. Peterborough Petes defeated Hamilton Red Wings 4-3 Sunday in the only other game during the Thanksgiving weekend.

Tonight, the weekend's winners meet as Toronto travels to Peterborough. Montreal Junior Canadiens and Oshawa Generals, who came up with Marlborougha from the Metro league, meet at Oshawa's home ice in Bowmanville and St. Catharines travels to Kitchener to meet Rangers, successors this season to Guelph Royals.

In Sunday's contest, the Hawks had a 43-25 edge in shots on goal, but the Toronto defence restricted many of the shots to long-range efforts.

Pete Stemkowski put Toronto ahead 1-0 in the first period and Miller Milton got another early in the second. Within 38 seconds of the same period, Andre Champagne, Barry Watson and Bill Smith sent the score to 5-0. Champagne got another in the third and Grant Moore completed the Toronto scoring.

Captain Fred Stanfield got the Hawks' first reply at 16:05 of the second period and added another near the mid-way point in the third. Brian McDonald and Chuck Kelly scored in the dying minutes of the game.

At Hamilton, Jim Paterson broke a 3-3 deadlock at 8:21 of the third period for Peterborough and Ron Naud got the insurance marker with 2½ minutes remaining, his second of the night.

Last Six Months of Run Is Murder Says Robert Morse

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Look at me," wailed Robert Morse, "last week I was chairman of the board; this week I'm working in a dump."

His lament was not to be taken seriously. He was making jest of the fact that he closed on a Saturday night after two years on Broadway in How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying and reported to work at MGM on Monday for his first starring movie.

He was rehearsing his musical number in His and His. It's a duet with himself that happens to take place in a dump.

How does he feel about it?

"Exhausted," he admitted. "If they had only given me just one day; boy, am I beat. I can stand a long run for the first year and a half, but that last six months is murder."

FOND MEMORIES

Still, he has fond memories of How to Succeed and with good reason. The musical made him the talk of Broadway in a show that never did less than capacity.

Morse intends to take advantage of his many film offers. First comes His and His with Robert Goulet and Nancy Kwan. He may stay at MGM for the Allstar Irving Berlin musical. Say it with Flowers. He'd like to do Genius for Otto Preminger but is talking a deal for The Loved One with Tony Richardson, whose Tom Jones is the latest film sensation.

How to succeed, indeed.

Those with long memories recall that Morse made a previous movie, Matchmaker, with Shirley Booth, Tony Perkins and Paul Ford.

PLAYED SAME PART

"I don't remember much of it myself," he said. "It was the same part I had played on the stage and I said the same lines, and that was all right.

He returned to Broadway, scored in Say Darling and then got the job playing playgoers with his kinetically lively style.

Morse exhibits boyish energy that is beguiling. He admits to being 32, which many find difficult to believe. He looks younger.

He also retains an ingenuous attitude toward his fellow stars.

"When there was a big name out front during How to Succeed, he said, I would root for his autograph. Honest. I wanted to show my grandchildren that Groucho Marx came to see me in a play."

TV Presents Taped Version Of Broadway Show Opening

NEW YORK (CP-AP)—A play opened on Broadway and a televised version was shown simultaneously on several U.S. television stations Monday night.

The television presentation generally received a reaction from TV critics and the viewing public.

Television viewers registering dislike for the showing of The Advocate complained along two lines: that it pushed regular programs off the air and because of the use of profanity in the play.

The views of television writers ranged from "a brilliant television success" to "medicine drama," but all reviewers found something good in the play.

The story deals with the controversial Sacco-Vanzetti case of 1927. Nicola Sacco, a Stoughton, Mass., shoe worker, and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, Plymouth, Mass., fish pedlar, were electrocuted in 1927, six years after they were convicted in a double murder in a $15,776 shoe factory robbery in Braintree near Boston.

Some feel the immigrants were arrested and convicted because they were admitted radicals rather than murderers.

THE PLAY STARS

The play, starring James Daly, opened at the Anta Theatre, the white way's first joint stage and television showing.

While the stage version was being televised, a pre-taped performance was shown over TV stations in Boston, Baltimore, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and San Francisco.

The five-city display was arranged by Westinghouse Electric Corporation, which picked up the $100,000 tab for the Anta exhibit.

Peter Thornton, publicity director of Pittsburgh's KDKA TV, said 41 viewers telephoned the station with favorable comments while only four objected to the show.

"I never saw anything like it," Thornton said. "People just don't call in in that number with compliments."

Cleveland station KYW reported it received more telephone calls after the show than ever before and most of them were favorable.

LISTON WANTS FIGHT

DENVER (AP)—World heavyweight boxing champion Sonny Liston wants to have a championship fight late this year in Denver with either Henry Cooper or Brian London, his press secretary said Saturday. Milt Wilcox, Denver promoter, said the champion urged him to arrange the match. He said Liston told him he was going to start training Thursday.

Brundage Warns Committee

No Politics In Olympics

By TOM REEDY

BADEN-BADEN, West Germany (AP)—The Olympics' executive board, meeting for the 60th time in 57 years, found itself in the cold war today up to its stop watch pocket.

But President Avery Brundage of Chicago warned everyone concerned that the International Olympic Committee will fight against any efforts to use "political weapons" in the field of sports.

He threw his challenge down as the IOC delved into the Soviet Union's submission of four loaded proposals:

1. A world congress of sport in 1965 to include all present groups and federations under IOC sponsorship.

2. Granting full status to Communist North Korea and Communist East Germany.

3. Break-up of the present "all German" Olympic team, and as a consequence, give West Berlin special status with its own "team."

4. Some action to ostracize nations such as France, which chose not to join the parade against nuclear bomb testing.

SEEK OUSTER

The Russians also are vitally interested in making a demand to oust South-Africa for its racial apartheid policies. The IOC set up a subcommittee to study the South African problem.

The South African Olympic Committee denied the charges in a special report submitted Monday and declared that while Negro athletes are not yet good enough to compete on merit, they will participate. Others have eight members of the 35-man team at Tokyo next year.

Reports spread that the IOC was considering calling the Korean problem by permitting two Korean teams. On that score, Brundage indicated a decision is yet to be reached. The Soviet proposal to give Communist East Germany full status is also in the undecided category.

There was little talk for or against the world congress idea.

Seat Belts

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Not long ago, one auto-seat-belt manufacturer — obviously distressed about sales — stated that if seat belts could promise to protect and insure car performance and economy, rather than passenger safety, he could not fill the demands for his product. He may be eating those words, today. Auto - seat - belt sales are advancing at an enviable rate. Last year, American motorists spent over 15 million dollars at auto supply outlets for these protective devices, and a substantial increase has been forecast for 1963.

Most sales provide for installation service, but often the motorist himself tackles the job and the safety people are concerned about this. While it is a complicated chore, but on older cars particularly, you can run into trouble. Here are a few points should be kept in mind. For example — before drilling anchor bolt holes, make certain that fuel line, brake lines and wiring are not close to the structured — be sure anchors for the front seat belts will not create a tripping hazard. Rear seat passengers — make certain the floor area is not damaged or otherwise weakened by rust or corrosion.

From C. L.: "Lately, there seems to be fluid leaking from my automatic transmission oil pan. Does that mean serious trouble?"

(A) A defective gasket or a damaged pan-flange is probably the reason.

N. W. writes: "What is a tune-up supposed to include — spark plugs, points and carburetor?"

(A) A complete tune-up is one that includes all of the adjustments which are needed to bring the engine to peak running condition.

A. J. asks: "When they say an engine 'pumps oil,' what exactly does this mean?"

(A) It means that the engine oil leaks up past the piston rings into the combustion area which causes excessive oil waste, exhaust smoke and carbon formation.

From H. S.: "There is an oil additive which is advertised as especially valuable because it is a dispersant. . . yet the commercial doesn't reveal what this means to the inside of the engine. Please enlighten me."

(A) It means the additive is formulated to prevent contaminants from coagulating and forming sludge deposits.

Woman Dies Of Injuries In Accident

PICTON — Mrs. Howard Ferguson, Cherry Valley, died of injuries in Prince Edward County Hospital on Monday evening after an accident near her home on Saturday. She sustained a fractured left wrist and injuries to her right arm, left leg and neck.

Mrs. Ferguson was returning to her home from Picton with her two grandchildren, when her car was in collision with a car driven by Harley G. Guernsey, R.R. 3, Picton, with a passenger, George Hudgin of Picton. One of the grandchildren, Robert VanHedger, suffered a broken left arm and leg, while the other grandchild, Brian VanHedger, had a dislocated elbow and injured left leg.

Guernsey had injuries to the forearm and knee, while Hudgin escaped with lacerations to the forehead.

O.P.P. from Picton investigated. Bond's ambulance rushed the injured to hospital.

Lorne Palmateer Pulled From Blazing Car

PICTON — Pulled from the blazing wreckage of the car he was driving, Lorne Palmatier, 33, Main Street, Bloomfield, is recovering from injuries in the Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital.

Alone at the time, about 1:30 a.m., Sunday, Palmatier failed to make a corner on Maltby's crossroad, which leads to West Lake. The '58 model car struck a huge maple tree beyond.

The crash was heard by Robert Williams on whose farm home lawn the tree stands. He pulled the unconscious driver from the wreckage which was quickly a mass of flames. It was completely burned out.

The car was owned by James Wycott, Barker Street, Picton.

Hundreds of spectators viewed the wreck on the market square Sunday and chief comment was "how could anyone come out of that wreck and live."

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

LIGHTNESS FOR MIGRATION

Have you ever held a bird in your hand? It really seems to weigh nothing at all, and actually weighs very little. Do you know the spotted sandpiper that tiptoes daintily across a beach flipping its tail up and down? It is 7½ inches long and weighs 1½ ounces.

Of course this lightness is necessary for flight, especially migration, when many birds fly hundreds of miles. There are two important factors that make this possible: the lightness of their bones and their covering of feathers.

Bones filled with air make an ideal framework for this natural flying machine. The skeleton is hollow (with no marrow) and there are widely distributed air sacks or pockets. This tubular framework not only makes the bird light in weight for its size but also helps provide support. Some soaring birds have particularly light skeletons. A white pelican, for instance, though five feet long, weighs only 15 pounds, and its skeleton about 23 ounces.

As you know, every feather has a stiff holding, yet supple, rib dividing it into two parts. This is called the shaft, and the base, which is fastened in the bird itself, is the hollow quill. The soft part of the feather, on either side of the shaft, is called the vane, and this is composed of side branches called barbs. Each barb is again made up of tiny side branches known as barbules.

"LIGHT AS A FEATHER"

"Light as a feather" is a good phrase, because nothing weighs less for its size than a feather, and yet it is extremely tough. Bend it and it will come back into place; push it and it will float down slowly. It can be opened up so that air may pass through the innumerable little slits, or these little slits can be made to seal off air. Try to pull a feather apart and you will find that you have a difficult task, as each tiny particle, or barbule, is locked to its neighbor.

All this makes for not only the lightest possible covering, but the strongest and most flexible. Watch a large bird, as one of the hawk, soaring. When it is bird mounts as though going up a circular staircase it tilts sideways, moving the wing feathers to catch the air and guide the flight.

Such a specialized piece of machinery naturally requires a large amount of fuel. This is why birds eat so much for their size, and why, before a long migration, they must store up as much fuel as possible in the form of fat. But just think of a feathered mite like a hummingbird travelling hundreds of miles!

Announce New Healing Substance...
Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids . . . and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institution has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a frequent cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.

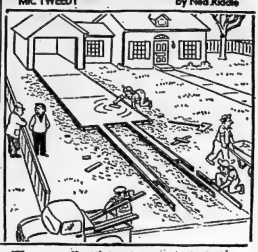
The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Cachera, from E. P. Taylor's Windfields Farms of Toronto, made a clean sweep of Canada's triple crown of thoroughbred racing Monday with an impressive victory in the $28,950 Breeders' Stakes at Woodbine Racetrack.

With Manuel Ycaza aboard, Cachera came on in a thrilling stretch drive to beat Bonjac by five lengths. Black N' Red was third by a nose.

Brother Leo, the western entry owned and trained by W. H. (Spud) Murphy of Calgary, finished fourth in a field of eight.

The race was for Canadian-bred three year olds over 1¼ miles on Aurabell turf course. Cachera was clocked in 2:02.3.



In winning the breeders, the Taylor colt became the second horse to wear the triple crown since it was inaugurated in 1959. It was taken that year by Providence, also from Windfields Farms.

Other two games in the crown are the Queen's Plate and the Prince of Wales Stakes.

Canebora gained a purse of $16,450 Monday to raise his earnings this year to $100,194. He becomes the first two-year-old to top the $100,000 figure in one season while running only on Canadian tracks.

Canebora returned $2.80, $2.70 and $2.40. Bonjac paid $3.60 and $4.10 and Black N' Red returned $2.70.

"They were off on their estimate so they're having to cut a few corners."

Erhard Elected To Succeed Adenauer

West German Architect Of 'Economic Miracle'

BONN (Reuters) — Economics Minister Ludwig Erhard today was formally elected by the Bundestag (lower house) to succeed Konrad Adenauer as West German chancellor.

Voting in the chamber was 279 in favor of Erhard, 180 against, 24 abstentions and one invalid ballot. Erhard needed 250 votes to ensure election.

Arrangements were made to swear in the 66-year-old, cigar-smoking Erhard in the afternoon. He had served under the 87-year-old Adenauer as economics minister and vice-chancellor.

Adenauer's resignation after 14 years as chancellor became effective at midnight Tuesday.

In sharp pyrotechnical contrast to the austere Adenauer, the chubby - cheeked architect of West Germany's "economic miracle" intends to propose new same policies as Adenauer but employ different methods.

TO FOLLOW PATH

"I have no intention of introducing a new government course, but will carry resolutely and determinedly follow the path that has become a blessing for the German people," Erhard has said.

But Erhard, who served in Adenauer's cabinet from the start in September 1949, has pledged himself to run a "government by majority."

He intends to expand consultations with cabinet members and with leaders of the three Bundestag parties.

Adenauer, who issued a final plea for the unification of Germany in a farewell speech Tuesday, long had been criticized for the "lone decisions" he had made as West Germany's first chancellor.

Erhard has completed coalition negotiations with the Free Democrats, who have agreed to stick to their present coalition partner in Adenauer's coalition government.

Both Erhard's Christian Democratic Party and the Free Democrats have agreed to strict secrecy until the new cabinet is announced.

HEAD CABINET

Erich Mende, Free Democrat chairman, probably will join the cabinet as vice-chancellor.

Mende, set to succeed to enter Adenauer's cabinet after the 1961 election, also was expected to become head of a ministry.

Erhard was born Feb. 4, 1897 in a family of farmers and craftsmen in the industrial town of Fuerth, near Nuernberg.

He was wounded in Flanders in the First World War and still wears special shoes because of

New Policy For Defence In Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP)—The government's new defence policy, now beginning to take shape, will result in fewer men in the armed forces but higher expenditures for weapons and equipment, sources close to the cabinet say.

There will be a cut of about 10 per cent in the present manpower strength of some 120,000.

At the same time, defence budgets will be planned on a five-year basis so that the defence department will know in advance that in 1965-70 it will have approximately $1,500,000,000 to spend each year.

A maximum amount of about 20 per cent of these budgets will be for new weapons and equipment, in contrast, for example, to the 54 per cent allotted for army equipment in the last defence budget.

CANCEL FRIGATES?

No major changes are expected to occur in the present fiscal year except for cancellation of the eight-ship naval frigate program initiated by the former Conservative government.

The reduction in military manpower, informed sources say, will be carried out over a period of 18 months or more. This can be done simply by ing up recruiting.

The objective is to weed out the frills in the services without any reduction in the number of operational units.

Manpower studies ordered by Defence Minister Hellyer show that in some instances the services are carrying out jobs civilians in Andenauer's coalition government.

Both Erhard's Christian Democratic Party and the Free Democrats have agreed to strict secrecy until the new cabinet is announced.

Sustain Govt. In 2 Votes

OTTAWA (CP)—A variety of opposition support sustained the minority Liberal government in Commons votes on two non-confidence motions Tuesday night.

The votes came at the end of a two-day debate on farm problems in Eastern Canada.

In one non-confidence test the Liberals were backed by the New Democrats and Social Crediters, in the other, the government got support from the Conservatives and Real Caouette's Crediters.

At no time were there any real fears that the government was in danger of being overthrown.

The votes were the fifth and sixth tests of confidence in the government, which commands 129 votes against a combined opposition of 136 MPs, made up of 95 Conservatives, 17 New Democrats, 11 Social Crediters and 13 Crediters.

CHANGES CAUSE

Scoreboard on the two votes:

1. A conservative motion of censure and non-confidence in the government with failure to deal effectively with eastern farm problems was defeated 134 to 95, with 14 New Democrats and 10 Social Crediters backing the government against a Conservative-Crediste alliance.

2. A Social Credit motion blaming the situation on a continuation of inadequate policies of the Conservative government was turned down 208 to 22, with Liberals, Conservatives, Creditistes and CCF Howard (NDP—Skeena) on the same side against nine Social Crediters and 13 New Democrats.

Although the votes were on the government's own policies, neither Agriculture Minister Hays nor Reed Scowlen, minister without portfolio who is slated to become eastern agriculture minister, were in the Commons for them.

Before the debate, MPs heard a round of wrap-ups of eastern farm problems—from the use of fertilizer to the impact of dairy exports to production of butter, cheese and skim milk.

LIBERALS ABSENT

When Clement Vincent, a Conservative and a farmer from Pontiac, criticized the government's dairy subsidy policies, he looked up to find the only government front bench empty.

"There is not a minister in the House," he gasped. "Not one."

H. W. Herridge, NDP member for Kootenay West, said Conservative criticism of the government on eastern farm policy was like the "pot calling the kettle black."

Mr. Herridge said that a joint Senate - Commons committee should be established to investigate farm problems.

And Mr. Herridge also volunteered "as an ancient mili-

Progressive Wing of Catholics Dominating Ecumenical Council

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican ecumenical council's progressive wing appeared today to have achieved a dominance at the historic Catholic conclave following this week's votes to modernize the mass and the sacraments.

A member of the Vatican curia, the ultraconservative ruling body, described the votes as "a victory for the progressives" —the modern - thinking majority among the 2,500 church fathers. He also said the voting showed the conflict and misunderstanding between progressives and conservatives had eased.

"The council is working hard now and getting a lot done," said the prelate, who asked to be identified. "The progressives, who want to get the church in touch with the times, are having their way."

Monday, the council approved in principle a proposal to allow use of local languages in place of Latin in parts of the mass. The changes would be at the discretion of regional conferences of bishops.

The proposal was approved by a vote of 2,198 to 36. But it fell short of the required two-thirds majority because 781 of the affirmative votes were without reservations.

A council press officer said the specific ideas in the reservations will be examined by the council's liturgy commission and will be reduced to a few amendments. They will then go back to the council for another vote. Final approval appeared certain.

Russia and U.S. Will Pledge Not to Put H-Bombs in Orbit

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The Soviet Union and United States will formally pledge today not to place weapons of mass destruction in outer space.

Their agreement is embodied in a United Nations resolution expected to receive near-unanimous approval in the General Assembly's 111-member political committee. The assembly itself may also vote on the measure later in the day.

The Soviet Union and the U.S., the only powers now capable of putting weapons into orbit, agreed in principle on the ban two weeks ago but there had been uncertainty on how it would be put into effect.

Canada was among countries urging that it be done by means of a UN resolution rather than through a bilateral treaty or separate declarations.

The resolution was sponsored by the 17 nations of the Geneva disarmament conference, including Canada. France, which was invited to the Geneva conference but refused to attend, took no part in the negotiations.

The final wording of the resolution was agreed on in U.S.-Soviet negotiations here following Foreign Minister Andrei Gromiko's visit to Washington last week.

A high U.S. source said the agreement does not include any provisions for verification except what the U.S. and Russia can do on their own.

He said the U.S. cannot yet determine with certainty whether a satellite in orbit contains a nuclear warhead. But he said that the U.S. has some ability to determine the function of a suspicious satellite through its size, the kind of orbit it is in and other factors.

Macmillan Tries to Lead Colleagues Out of Deadlock

LONDON (AP) — The struggle for power in the British cabinet shifted to Harold Macmillan's bedside today with the 69-year-old prime minister taking the lead in trying to pick his successor.

Macmillan, recovering from an operation which eight days ago caused him to announce his impending retirement, scheduled another series of talks with prominent Tories to get their views.

He called in all the principals in the drama Tuesday, apparently trying to lead his feuding colleagues out of deadlock.

As the struggle dragged on the odds seemed to be lengthening against both the two main

Park New Head Of S. Korea

SEOUL (Reuters) — Military junta leader Gen. Chung Hee Park was elected president of South Korea today after main opposition candidate Po Sun Yun conceded defeat.

It meant that Park, whose leadership was opposed by Yun's civil rule Party and other civilian groups, would lead the government for another four years.

Tension mounted here as vote counting today continued a seesaw race between Park and Yun in the most closely contested presidential contest in Korean history.

With more than 95 per cent of votes counted Park was reported to have a 37,704 - vote lead over Yun of the total 10,857,062 valid votes cast. Park

Study Shows Viruses May Cause Some Types of Cancer in Humans

NEW YORK (AP)—There is "little reason to doubt" that viruses may be the cause of some types of human cancer, an official of a leading cancer research institute said Tuesday.

Dr. James T. Grace, assistant director of Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, cited six findings which, he said, shed new light on possible links between viruses and cancer.

1. Two adenoviruses, known to cause reddening of the eyes and upper respiratory infections in humans, have been shown to cause malignant growths when injected into newborn hamsters.
